A NOVEL RACE

Farmer Bought a Pig on the Market but the Porker Got Away

A farmer bought a pig on the market Saturday. The pig was just lean enough to have sprinting blood in its veins, and it managed to get away from its owner. It went north on Water street at a sharp gallop, with the perspiring farmer in hot pursuit. Passers-by stood and watched the novel race. Various suggestions were offered to the farmer, that he throw salt on the pig's tail, one of them. Others advised ringing in a fire alarm.

But the man-after-the-pig didn't see any joke in it at all. All he saw was a small speck ahead which was going like greased lightning and getting smaller every second.

Once when the pig stopped to take breath, its erstwhile owner thought he had him, but the little porker slipped through his feet and was away again. The last seen of it, the pig was still going, and the farmer, too, the latter with a look of grim determination on a face streaked with dusty perspiration.

SERVICES AT ST. ANDREWS

Splendid Discourses Delivered both Morning and Evening by Rev. J. Cattanach

Two very able sermons were preached on Sunday in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church by Rev. James Cattanach, of Baltimore, Md.

In the morning his subject was "a closer walk with God," which was very much appreciated by the congregation, and to which marked attention was given.

In the evening Mr. Cattanach delivered a splendid address on "Love the fruit of the Spirit," and made clear to his hearers in a most masterly manner, the different kinds of worldly love and the great difference between it and that supreme love, which is a reflex of God's and which is the great dynamic force of the Christian church to day.

Mr. Cattanach is possessed of a splendid delivery, and clear intonation and was heard on both occasions to good advantage.

DEATH OF MRS. ROBT. JOHNSTON

An Old and Respected Citizen of Peterboro Passes Away

Pleasant, Cavan, and four daughters, Mrs. J. G. Chambers, town; Mrs. Thos. Grimshaw, town; Mrs. John Trick, Port Hope, and Mrs. Jas. Lewis, Port Hope; are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother. Mrs. Johnston was a native of Ireland, and in her girlhood her parents emigrated to Canada and settled in Hope township. She was twice married, first to Mr. Jacob Boyd who died leaving her a widow with two children. Later she married Mr. Robert Johnston, who predeceased her some years ago.

A RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

Mrs. Benjamin Seabrook, of Fraserville seriously Injured

On Friday evening a team belonging to Mr. Benjamin Seabrook, Fraserville, became frightened while crossing the G.T.R. crossing on Charlotte street and tried to get away. The driver, Mr. Seabrook, managed to keep control of them. The horses ran furiously west on Charlotte street, and opposite St. Joseph's street the horses shied and ran the wagon on the embankment resulting from a waterworks trench. The sudden swerve threw Mrs. Seabrook out violently upon the hard road, and the wagon was overturned and both horses fell into the trench on the opposite side of the embankment—one on top of the other.

Fortunately Mr. Seabrook, who with a child three or four years old, was thrown out, nor the child nor the horses were seriously hurt, but Mrs. Seabrook was picked up unconscious, bleeding profusely from a scalp woud three or four inches long in the back part of the head. She was at once removed to Dr. Pigeon's surgery, and after receiving interna surgical attention she was removed to the Nicholls' Hospital, under the care of Dr. Pigeon.

It was found that she was suffering from concussion of the brain and shock.

A Noted Medical Specialist Speaks For the Benefit of Hot Weather Sufferers

He Maintains That

Paine's Celery Compound Is a Banisher of Disease and a Restorer of Health

A noted medical specialist—a physician possessing ample wealth—ever ready to acknowledge worth and merit, speaks of Paine's Celery Compound as follows:

"In summer time, when strength fails, when that tired, listless feeling is experienced from day to day, when the digestive organs are not doing their work properly, when constipation is poisoning the blood, when disease with iron hand takes possession of the body, Paine's Celery Compound will be found a marvellous banisher of disease and a true health restorer."

This strong statement should influence all weak, rundown and half sick men and women during the hot August weather. This remarkable indorsation of Paine's Celery Compound by an acknowledged specialist should at once convince the suffering and diseased that Dr. Phelps' great medical discovery is what they need to restore perfect health. The thousands of lives fast wearing away can be saved and made happy and useful to families and friends. May Heaven speedily convince the doubting and despondent, and direct them to that unfailing life-giver—Paine's Celery Compound.

HOMELESS AND PENNILESS

Is Timothy Fobert, but the Magistrate Cannot Commit Him to Jail

Dirty and unkempt, penniless and friendless, Timothy Fobert was discharged by Police Magistrat Dumble yesterday, and thus deprived of the only home he has known for the past four years—that of the county jail. Fobert had but recently been released from the county jail, where he had been serving a term for vagrancy, and having neither friends nor money, and being 77 years of age and unable to work, he managed to exist on the refuse from the hotels in town. Taking pity on his miserable condition, Chief Rossel took Fobert into custody and had him confined in the police station for the last three nights.

The chief brought this forlorn creature up before the Magistrate yesterday morning, and said he would like to have him committed to jail for another term as a vagrant.

Police Magistrate Dumble regretted his inability to comply with Chief Rossel's request, and in addressing the prisoner said: You are one of those poor unfortunates that belong to the vagrant class, and which are neglected by the town. Under a recent law of the legislature I have not the power to commit to jail as a vagrant any one who has been a resident of the county for two years. I would be glad to give you, Mr. Fobert, any comfort I possibly could, but in the face of the statute I cannot send you to jail. It was, no doubt, the intention of the legislature when they deprived the Magistrates of the power of committing such persons as you to jail to force the municipalities to erect suitable houses of refuge, and give proper support to persons whose only crime is poverty. I regret therefore that I must turn you out on the street to die until there is some provision med ethat will give you the care at least that is afforded to an old horse.

Chief Rossel thought this a case where the town and county should be equally responsible for Fobert's care, he being an old resident of the county.

Mr. Dumble replied humanity calls for the care of the poor, and he could see no reason why Fobert should be sent to jail like a criminal. He sympathized deeply with the prisoner, but knew of no way in which he could help him. It was a case for the Mayor of the town and the Warden of the county to look after. In conclusion, he told the prisoner he might go, and, sorely disappointed in His Worships ruling, Fobert went forth on to the streets, a brother mortal in a town of plenty obliged to beg of passers by, and to seek a shelter where he may. Tottering with age, dirty and emanciated for want of proper care, Fobert will probably, under present conditions, wander around, an eye-sore to humanity, until he dies. And this state of things exists in an age of advanced civilisation!

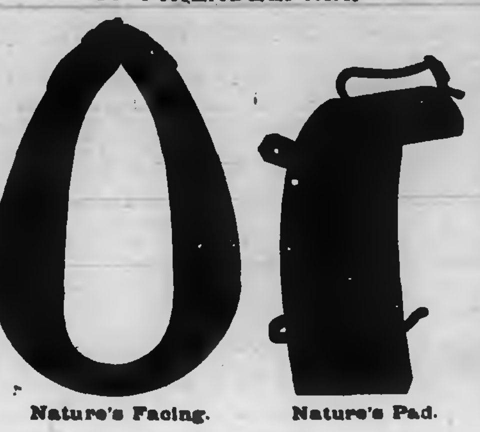
NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 33,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 10,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the next 10,000 Shares will be sold at Two Dollars Per Share, and the third 10,000 Shares at Two Dollars and One-Half Per Share. After which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the prices stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent., 15 per cent. and 12 1-2 per cent. on the investment, according to the allotment secured.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

We call your attention to the fact that the 30 per cent. interest only applies to the first 10,000 shares, and as considerable of this has already been sold, the balance will shortly be taken, so in order to secure the same and be on the ground floor send your subscriptions at once.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM HALPEN, GREEN & CO.

Wholesale Grocers, Nos. 18 S. Front St. and 17 Letitia St.
Philadelphia, December 28th, 1901.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours truly,
HALPEN, GREEN AND CO.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH.
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1899.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well. Yours,

S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

RUSSIA'S RULLER WANTS TO LEAVE HIS THRONE

Said to be Utterly Disheartened with the Condition of His Country

Trouble Between France and Siam—Some Parties Trying to Foment it—British Military Still Hold the Tien Tsin Railway Line

Special to The Times.

Moscow, Aug. 12.—The report is current in the highest official circles that the Czar has seriously expressed to his intimate counsellors the desire to abdicate in favor of his brother, the Grand Duke Tharevitch Michael Alexandrovitch. His Majesty is said to have become utterly disheartened a the internal condition of his country. He has neither the will power nor the physical strength to contend tith the situation and with the opposing retrogressive entourage by which he is surrounded. The Czarina's accouchement is expected next month, and, if she does not present the Czar wi h an heir, his decision to abdicate will proably become irrevocable.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 12.—The Opposition journals, says the Paris correspondent of the Times continue to try to make trouble between France and Siam, but the moment is an ill-chosen one, as a special plenipotentiary of Siam is expected in Paris immediately. If, says the correspondent, the relations of France and Siam are unsatisfactory, the approaching negotiations will probably make them excellent.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 12.—Arrangements have been nearly completed, says a Pekin correspondent, for the formal rendition of Tien Tsin city to the Viceroy of Pe-Chi-Li, Yuan Shi-Kai, and the provincial officials next Friday. The Chinese railway from Pekin to Tien Tsin, however, remains in possession of the British military administration, though the chief work of the railway is done by a civil staff, who months ago were prepared to assume full charge. The Viceroy, in proceeding to Tien Tsin to resume the administration of the chief city of his province will be compelled to travel on a railway under foreign military charge.

The correspondent says that public opinion considers that Great Britain has no longer a valid reason to retain the railway. He declares, however, that the delay is due to the action of France in refusing to sign a certain stipulation of the railway agreement already signed by Sir Ernest M. Satow, the British Minister, and the Chinese. France undoubtedly desires the return of the railway to its Chinese owners, but considers that the stipulation in question infringes on certain Belgian rights. An easy solution seems to be the return of the railway to the Chinese, and a settlement of the disputed point later on. France would assent to this, with the reservation that when the proposed extension of the railway is built the Franco-Belgian syndicate will be permitted to compete.

Opinion of a Veteran of Two Years' Experience Campaigning in South Africa.

Special to The Times.

Toronto, Aug. 12.—Mr. J. Charles Bond, with two clear years' campaigning in South Africa and a special mention by Lord Kitchener for gallantry to his credit, has arrived home. Mr. Bond's service was varied a small as comparatively lengthy, having served in three branches of the colonial forces. He enlisted first in "C" Battery, and went through the campaign of 1900 with that corps, participating in the memorable march and other engagements accredited to to the relief of Mafeking and the varied that corps. He then spent six months in "Gatling Gun" Howard's Scouts, returning home to Toronto in July of last year a sergeant major. On the organization of Col. Evans' Second Mounted Rifles he again enlisted, and it was at the battle of Harts River that his gallant conduct earned for him the distinction of special mention and promotion.

In spite of this record, which places him among the most experienced and distinguished of Toronto's South African veterans, Mr. Bond is very unassuming, and observes a marked reticence respecting his record. His khaki and cowboy hat were laid aside at the earliest possible moment. On being interrogated by a reporter, who happened to be an old comrade, the veteran said that the Harts River affair was about the hottest he had ever been in, although the general hardships and privitations of the Second Mounted Rifles were not so severe a swith former contingents. He has no sympathy with the pessimists who look forward to a rising of the Boers against British authority in the near future. He believes they will now become one of the most contented and prosperous citizens of the British Empire.

UNEARTH BODIES OF INFANTS

A Girl Promises to Make Revelations to Chicago Authorities

Chicago, Aug. 12.—The grave at Calvary cemetery which twelve-year-old Viola Campbell has told the police contains the bodies of eight infants who died at the home of Mrs. Neil Campbell No. 685 Grand avenue, must be examined before the mystery which now surrounds that startling story of traffic in babies is solved.

Mrs. Campbell, now under arrest in connection with the death of a child at her home several days ago, will be held pending the coroner's investigation. The girl who revealed the sensational information concerning the woman by whom, she says, she was stolen from her parents when a baby has promised to direct the authorities to the place where the infants are buried.

That many infants have died in the Campbell household, as charged by Viola, has been proved by neighbors, and Mrs. Campbell herself had admitted the fact. She says she will prove that all the children were her own and that all died a natural death.

None of the women, who, Viola told the police, sold babies to Mrs. Campbell have been arrested.

The arrest of Mrs. Campbell and the revelations made by Viola, a favorite child in the community have aroused the neighborhood. Today Mrs. Mary McCormick, No. 48 Centennial Place, and her son Lawrence visited the West Chicago avenue police station, seeking information concerning the fate of one of the babies in Mrs. Campbell's charge. Having officiated as godfather to the child when it was baptized in St. Columbkill's church a year ago, young McCormick felt that it was his duty to see what had become of the infant.

The child in question is believed to be living and is probably one of the two removed to the hospital by the police.

"I have often wondered at the number of babies in Mrs. Campbell's house," said Mrs. McCormick, "but I never dreamed that the children were not her own until I read the story in the newspapers. I don't believe now that the baby my son Lawrence stood sponsor for in the church is her own.

"Being the godfather to the child, my son must do all he can to see it is taken care of if it is alive and it is his duty to find out what became of it. Mrs. Campbell used to send the baby over to my house, and I would take care of it for hours at a time, until I began to suspect that she wanted to get rid of it. Then I refused to take care of it any more.

"Viola came to our house almost every day, and one day while she was there a man she called Oscar came and wanted to take her away. He said he was afraid the police would arrest her, because he had heard that she had been sent out to steal. Oscar, Viola said, was her cousin. Mrs. Campbell told me that Viola was the daughter of her first husband, a Spaniard, and that she owned three castles in Spain in her own right, left by her father. She said that some day she was going to Spain with Viola. One day, when the man she called Oscar came to our house and wanted to take Viola away, with him he said to her:

"'You know that woman stole you, and you should not live with her.'"

"Ever since Mrs. Campbell was arrested her husband has not slept in the house. To-day a letter came for Mrs. Campbell and the mail carrier left it with the people living in the front part of the house, but they gave it back to him."

The letter may throw some light on the mystery, and the police expect to find out what it contains.

DUEL WITH TRAINS

Rival Roads Have Novel Fight for Right of Way

Special to The Times.

St. Genieve, Ill, Aug. 12—A duel with trains as weapons was fought here. The St. Louis, Memphis and Southeastern railway attempted to build across the right of way of the Illinois Southern. The Memphis men were kept at bay for two days, and one night, while sentinels slept, succeeded in laying a track across the Illinois road and putting a train of freight cars on it.

Next morning when the manager of the Illinois road saw what had happened he ordered up an old locomotive, got up steam, and going back 300 yards for a good start, opened the throttle, jumped off and sent the engine crashing into the train standing on the new track. Five of the enemy's cars were demolished and the engine badly wrecked.

Twenty-seven of the Illinois Southern men were arrested. A temporary injunction was issued, enjoining the Memphis road from doing any further work for 30 days.

UNEARTHED SKELETON

Find in Montana May be Another Cardiff Giant

Special to The Times.

Miles City Aug. 12.—One find of W. T. Hornaday, of the New York Zoological Society and L. A. Huffman, the Miles City, Mont., photographer, which they kept secret for a long time, has at length come to light in the shape of gigantic lizards which were found on MacGibbon's ranch on Hell creek, near the Missouri river. The skeletons measure 37 feet in length and were first discovered by Huffman calling Hornaday's attention to a horn and a piece of rib, the animal having three horns in line from the nose to the forehead. Excavations were made revealing two skeletons. Messrs. Snow and Newsome of Miles City have bought the rights to the skeletons, and will place them on exhibition.

DOURO.

—Mr. Wm. Batton was in the neighborhood last week and reports a rushing business for the Massey Harris Co.

—Mr. Michael McCann, the local representative of the Peter Hamilton Company is having a splendid business. He has sold 16 binders, 18 mowers and twenty-three horse rakes, besides innumerable plow points. The harvest indeed is bountiful.

—Mr. M O'Toole was the guest of Mr. John P. Leahy on Sunday last.

Last Monday was a very exciting day here when Captain Grisdale was elected Mayor of Flynville. On Tuesday morning he took the oath of office from David Condon, J.P., and at once started out to inspect the pavements, but meeting several of his warm supporters he was entreated to give them a little entertainment which he did. He rented the Opera House for the occasion, and the best of music was furnished by Mr. D. Sullivan's orchestra, Mr. Louis Sullivan gave a very fine exhibition of dancing. Over two hundred couples tripped the light fantastic until after midnight when a bountiful supper was partaken of. Mr. Alex. Grisdale delighted all with a vivid description of the Boer war, which was illustrated by a magic lantern and phonograph.

SUSPICION

Leads to the Real Cause

The question of coffee disease or Postum health becomes of the greatest importance when we are thrown on our own resources. Many a woman when suddenly left without means of support can make a comfortable living if health remains.

A brave little woman out in Barnes, Kansas, says, "I feel that I owe you a letter for the good Postum Food Coffee has done me. For years I was a great sufferer with nervousness without ever suspecting the cause. Two years ago I came down with nervous prostration. My work was light but I could not do it. I could not even sew or read.

My sleep was broken and unrefreshing; I suffered intensely and it seemed only a matter of time until I must lose my reason.

My mental distress was as great as my physical, when one day a friend brought me a trial of Postum Coffee and urged me to use it instead of coffee for a few days, saying that Postum had cured her of liver trouble and sick headaches. I replied that I thought I could not give up coffee, I had always used it as a stimulant, however the Postum Food Coffee proved to be pleasing to the taste and I used it and was surprised to see that I was resting and getting better.

My husband bought several packages and insisted on me using it altogether. Gradually, but not the less surely, I fully recovered. I never used coffee afterward, and when I was left a widow a year later I was able to open a dressmaking shop and support myself and little girls." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

IT IS NO JOKE TO TO BE A REAL GIANT

So Says a Man Who is Big Enough to Know

A CANADIAN EIGHT FEET HIGH

All but a Couple of Inches—The Condition of Being a Giant Has Some Advantages

San Francisco, July 22.—Edward Beaupre, the young Canadian giant, who is 9 feet tall in his silk hat, finds that the world is not made for his convenience. He cannot buy anything that will fit him nor discover anyone with whom he may associate. He is a wonder. He is a freak of nature of immense physical proportions, and figures do not give an adequate idea of what he is. For instance Beaupre stands 7 feet 10 1-2 inches in his stocking feet and weighs 367 pounds. The average man wears No. 8 or 9 shoes; Beaupre's are 22. His neck is 3 feet around, and his hands, from his wrist to the middle finger tip, measure over twelve inches. Every piece of his wearing apparel has to be made especially for him. The cost of these is over twice that paid by the ordinary man.

Beaupre is only 21 years old, was born in Quebec, and is of French parentage. He had some schooling, but not to amount to a great deal. He lead the strenuous life of a cowboy and ranch hand on one of the many cattle ranches of the Northwest until he began exhibiting himself.

From babyhood Beaupre was very large. At 9 years he was 6 feet 9 inches tall, and at 17 had reached the 7-feet 1-inch mark. Last year he added another inch and a half to his stature, and is confident that he will go still higher.

The one romantic touch to his freakish life is the wooing of Ella Ewing, the eight-foot giantess of Gorin, Mo. Although the couple have never met, friends have been trying for a long time to make a match between them. In a few weeks Beaupre will journey to the home of the giantess and formally present his love case. He thinks even if they do not love each other at first, they will later, and it will be a good business proposition to them.

The story of Beaupre's life and its trials is best told in his own words—

"My life is not made up of dimes and nickels, I have my troubles as well as other people, and maybe my trials are greater. It isn't all posing and looking pleasant for the thousands of curious people that visit me, I am a prisoner at all times and cannot afford to wander about the streets and parks because every time I do I am robbed of just so many dollars. People who see me in the streets are satisfied and will not pay to look at me. The little exercise I get is pacing up and down the narrow platform and the very early morning strolls. I can assure you it is no snap to twelve hours at a stretch and answer the questions of those who pay to see me.

"Probably the question most frequently asked of me is 'How does it feel to be so large?' Now, I don't know how to answer that because I haven't ever been anything else but large. Certainly, if I had my way about it, I would be of ordinary size, even if I didn't make as much money. I never can find anything to fit and am always running after the carpenter, tailor or hatter, to make things for me, I can't keep in the style, because I can't get the things prepared for me.

"If I should tell you all my difficulties with people and things it would take up the whole paper. But I will tell you a few things. My greatest trouble is with the street cars. They were not made for me, and it is with them I have had the most difficulty. My patience is sorely taxed. The doors of the car are so low that I have to bend like a jack knife to get through them. And when I am in the seats are so low that my feet spread across the aisle. Passengers getting on and off stumble over my feet and there is complaining on both sides. I can't hold on to the straps, because I touch the roof of the car, with my hat. So what am I to do?

"Walk? Well, may be. But I am sure to attract a crowd, and the small boy is very annoying.

"I get into a lot of trouble over my walking. I draw a crowd, the street is blocked, and the police get after me for obstructing the sidewalk or disturbing the peace. I have never been arrested but I have been so near it that there's no fun in it. Only the other day I went into a bank to cash a cheque. I took my place in the waiting line, but long before it came my turn at the window a large crowd had congregated. The bank's business was stopped and the cashier so aggravated that he ordered me out of the bank. We nearly came to blows and I threatened to pull him over the counter.

"I can't sleep comfortably when I am travelling, when travelling because the berths in the cars are so small. I have to double up in such a shape that rest is impossible. I might put my feet out of the window, I suppose, but there would be danger in that. Some day, if I stay in this business long enough, I will have a car of my own. Then travelling will be a pleasure.

"I have to refuse invitations to dinner, because the chairs and tables are so small. If I sit down to the ordinary table I can't come within reaching distance of it because my knees are in the way. So what can I do but eat standing up, or in my own room. I might dine off the mantle piece with some degree of comfort, but that would be called unconventional. Hacks it is impossible for me to ride in. I can barely squeeze myself into them.

"You want me to tell you how I grew so large. Well I don't know. I just growed, that's all. My parents are French. My father is 5 feet 9 inches tall and my mother but 5 feet 4 inches. None of the other members of my family is large. When I was 9 years old, I was 6 1-2 feet tall and could do a man's work.

"When I was 16 years old I left home and went cow punching. It took a very large horse to carry me and I had some difficulty in always finding one to keep my feet off the ground. I had an advantage over the other boys, however, because few horses could throw me. I can wind my feet completely around the animal and it's all day with him. My great weight and height make it a hard task for horses to shake me off.

"I am proud of some of my feats of strength. I have held up from ball weighing 88 pounds at arm's length for half a minute, I can lift 850 pounds clean from the ground, and other similar things. That ought to prove that I am not as weak as many people imagine. Of course, this sedentary life that I am now leading does not tend to harden the muscles. A few weeks' training, however, and I could hold my own with the best of them.

"But I suppose I might as well tell something of my advantages as well as my disadvantages in this world. I never have any trouble viewing processions or the like. There is no necessity of climbing telegraph poles. All I have to do is to find a comfortable spot on the curbstone and gaze at pleasure over the heads of the people. At the theatres I have no complaint to make. The ordinance providing that ladies remove their bonnets during the play need never to have been passed for all I care. I can see all that is going on without the usual rubbering and dodging of heads. I may be some obstruction myself to those behind, but usually I secure a seat to one side.

"Another advantage is in eating. When I go into a restaurant I get my money's worth. There is seldom any food left for a waiter to take back to the kitchen.

"One of the things that is of more interest to me than almost anything else is my coming trip to Gorin, Mo. I intend to propose to Miss Ella Ewing, a young woman nearly eight feet tall. I have never seen her nor written to her but mutual friends have tried to bring us together.

"I think it quite possible that we might marry for business reasons if for no other. We may not love each other at first, but may learn to do so later. Besides the usual amount of attention we would attract as a team, there is a valuable prize offered in France that is worth looking forward to. A French prince years ago offered a prize to the tallest married couple that present themselves within a certain number of years. With the notoriety that the prize would give us we could tour Europe and do a splendid business.

"The most unpleasant part of my experience is the fear shown me by young children. I am naturally very fond of them, but they seem to have little use for me. I am so large that they are made shy of me. I suppose that comes from reading the children's stories of 'Jack the Giant Killer,' and such tales. I can't get any one to dance with me because the ordinary sized woman only reaches a little above my waist. They can't keep out of the way of my feet and there you are! So sometimes I wish I were not so big for this world, where nothing is made for a nine-foot man."

The Manufacture of Fertilizer in Ashburnham been Stopped by the Board of Health

A meeting of the Ashburnham Board of Health was held last night, at which the following communications were read:

From Mr. J. Z. Rogers, complaining that Mr. Geo. Stevens was drawing night soil and storing it on his premises, using the same for the manufacture of fertilizer. He requested that the Board take steps to have this unhealthy state of affairs stopped.

From Mr. Wm. Scott, in reference to the same matter, and also asking immediate action by those in authority.

Dr. Bingham, Medical Health Officer, reported that he had made an examination of the premises in company with another member of the Board, and pronounced the presence of this material to be most dangerous to the health of those living in the vicinity, it being especially productive of the germs of typhoid fever, diphtheria, etc. Mr. Stevens had told him that he intended to change the place of manufacture from the village to Monaghan.

Extracts from the Health Act were read by the chairman, and the following resolution, after some discussion, was passed:

McCarthy—Wright,—That the Medical Health Officer be hereby instructed to notify Mr. Geo. Stevens to abate and remove forthwith from the municipality the nuisance complained of and reported on by the Medical Health Officer as prejudicial to health, such as the manufacture of fertilizer and anything and everything that is offensive or injurious to health.

When this matter had been disposed of the Board adjourned.

Resolutions of Commercial Bodies Needed to Spur Great Britain On

Lord Strathcona is Active—Crowds Snatch Souvenirs of the Canadian Arch—Hon. A. G. Blair in England

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 12.—Lord Strathcona is as indomitably active as ever, despite the Coronation ceremonies, which left Sir Wilfrid Laurier and some of the other Ministers quite exhausted. Lord Strathcona departs for Scotland to-night. He travels all night to Forres, to lay the foundation-stone to-morrow of Tulloch Park United Free church, near where he himself was reared. Then he travels back to London to-morrow night.

MR. BLAIR ARRIVES.

Hon. A. G. Blair has arrived, and is busy to-day with the fast service negotiations. Astonishment is expressed in best informed circles that he should talk seriously of subsidizing an 18-knot service. The comment is that Canada might as well throw money down a drain. Every cent given to any service inferior to that New York can provide, so as to enable Canada to gain the fullest advantage of its geographical position, is absolutely wasted.

I have high authority to state that Chamberlain is willing to support whatever project the Canadian Ministers adopt to the extent of one-third the total subsidy.

Canada's influential friends here are most anxious that the exceptional chance offered by the Morgan trust of giving Canada a supreme service, with three 24-knot boats between England and Cape Breton, all the year round, should not be missed in the interests of false economy or sectional political motives. The chance is unlikely to recur. I speak upon the most influential authority, though unable to use names.

SUPPORT NEEDED.

If Canadian opinion endorses this view, resolution of Boards of Trade of Trade and other bodies should at once be passed and forwarded.

THE CANADIAN ARCH.

The Canadian arch is being dismantled to-day. Crowds eagerly snatch bits of grain as momentoes. Pictures of the arch are being sold in the streets. It is the greatest advertisement ever had.

THE TIMES LETTER-BOX.

Letters from the People on Interesting and Timely Topics.

GOOD THINGS UNDERRATED

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—I desire to put to the readers of The Times the momentous question, void of all accessories of circumlocution. "Do the people as a class appreciate a city's manifold advantages?" "Certainly," you may one and all respond, but think a moment to realize what a very small majority of a city's population comes under your cognizance. Can one individual in answering this question imagine that he knows all about whereof he speaks, and is answering truly? A moment's thought should convince him to the contrary.

The people as a whole do not appreciate what the town or city does for them and I stand ready to prove the assertion of this statement. How many of our citizens are living without the luxury of a bath in their homes? The public libraries are another familiar instance of this condition. If the list of its patrons could be made public, and the standing of each member ascertained, I would not hesitate to say that three-fourths are well to do or in prosperous circumstances. The poor and the unappreciative crowd, simply will not take advantage of the opportunity this grand institution affords and look with mistrust and suspicion upon all efforts to make them do so. This unaccountable (to themselves) generosity and good will on the city's part is plainly beyond their comprehension.

Public playgrounds, gardens, schools, excursions, entertainments, and the thousand and one things the city endeavors to cheer its population with are received with but scant courtesy and gratitude. The people are selfish themselves and they cannot possibly conceive the good qualities predominant in nobler individuals' hearts.

But, while lamenting sincerely the dubious character of aspects at present I do not at all think that the case is hopeless. Good qualities and unselfishness of purpose never are unsuccessful, where there is a noble end in view. The people as a majority will eventually realize and discern for themselves good motives from the bad, and certainly nothing but good actuates the city in their bountiful, healthy charity. A few years hence and free baths, excursions, playgrounds, libraries, etc will be filled to overflowing with a grateful public, including all classes. In conclusion I would say that at present one institution at any rate is cordially appreciated, namely the parks. They are and always have been frequented by the public. Perhaps they are the only reminders of the country that can be found without visiting there itself. Let us hope and trust the other ones will be appreciated as well.

SIGNS AND OMENS

To the Editor of The Times.

Sir.—Would the Times tell its readers if it believes in signs and omens? There was a warm discussion on the value of dreams as an omen of good or evil, and it was resolved that the question should be submitted to the great family journal for its opinion.

I am a young girl, and have always kept a dream book handy for reference.

Thanking you in advance, Mr. Editor. I remain, etc.

ALICE.

Answer—Yes, my dear Alice, this great family journal believes in signs and omens. For instance; It is an ill omen when you note the propinquity of a live electric wire, to come into too close touch with it.

Falling in front of a runaway team is a sure indication of bad luck. An accident is almost certain to follow.

It is a well known fact that persons who have swallowed poison have premonitions of approaching disaster. An accident of this kind may be taken as a bad sign.

If you ever, dear Alice, meet a bull in the middle of a ten-acre pasture and that without previous introduction, put it down that you are shortly to sustain a perceptible rise in the world.

Should you unfortunately break a limb the doctor is likely to make you a call that day.

Jumping from an express train going at the rate of sixty miles an hour is an unfailing hint of subsequent trouble.

Should you by any means monkey with a buzz saw, it is a portentous omen of unexpected misfortune.

A disposition to inquire too closely into the indentity of the reporter who wrote the item has been known to presage calamity.

It also augurs ill to be brought into close acquaintanceship with the business end of a mule.

O, yes, dearest Alice, we believe in signs and omens. But they must be well authenticated and of such a character as to preclude a reasonable hope of disappointment.

Sacking Barcelona

Special to The Times.

Washington, Aug. 12. — Minister Bowen has cabled the State Department from Caracas that the United States consul at Barcelona has informed him by wire that Barcelona has been take nby the revolutionists that they are sacking the town, and that in his judgment the protection of a vessel should be immediately afforded him. Mr. Bowen says he has cabled the Cincinnati to return without delay. He notes that the Topeka is at Porto Cabello and the Marietta up the Orinoco River.

Washington, Aug. 12.—There appears to be no question as to the right of the German naval force to land at Barcelona for the protection of German interests. It in no way involves the Munroe Doctrine. Germany has been keeping close watch on Venezuela for some months, and at one time contemplated taking a Venezuelan port in order to compel the payment o fcertain German claims. It was in that the German Ambassador at Washington, Dr. Von Hollebren, made enquiry of President Roosevelt and the State Department as to whether such a move by Germany for the sole purpose of collecting a claim, and not for the purpose of territorial expansion, would meet with any disfavor by the American Government. The response of the United States left Germany free to act, a sthe assurance that no territorial extension was intended removed the case from the operation of the Munroe Doctrine.

The present landing of a German force has no connection with Germany' aformer move against Venezuela, although the assurance heretofore given by Germany serve in the present case to show that there is no ulterior purpose behind the protection of German interests at that port.

A NOVEL RACE

Farmer Bought a Pig on the Market but the Porker Got Away

A farmer bought a pig on the market Saturday. The pig was just lean enough to have sprinting blood in its veins, and it managed to get away from its owner. It went north on Water street at a sharp gallop, with the perspiring farmer in hot pursuit. Passers-by stood and watched the novel race. Various suggestions were offered to the farmer, that he throw salt on the pig's tail, one of them. Others advised ringing in a fire alarm.

But the man-after-the-pig didn't see any joke in it at all. All he saw was a small speck ahead which was going like greased lightning and getting smaller every second.

Once when the pig stopped to take breath, its erstwhile owner thought he had him, but the little porker slipped through his feet and was away again. The last seen of it, the pig was still going, and the farmer, too, the latter with a look of grim determination on a face streaked with dusty perspiration.

CONFEDERATION AND NEWFOUNDLAND

Talk of a renewal of negotiations for the entry of Newfoundland into the Dominion is causing comment in some eastern United States papers, which see a possibility of serious loss to the Atlantic fisherman of the United States. The view taken of the matter by the Gloucester, Mass., Times, at the headquarters of the New England fishing interest, is particularly notable both for its clear statement of where the Americans may lose, and its very distinct outline of the rank selfishness which animates the United States in its commercial dealings with other countries.

The possible injury to American fishermen through federation between Canada and Newfoundland would consist in stoppage of privileges which Newfoundland grants to Americans of getting bait in Newfoundland waters. United States fishing vessels at present have the right to enter either Canadian or Newfoundland water to get bait, in consideration of payment of a license fee of $1.50 per ship ton. This arrangement was in a measure forced on Canada by Newfoundland. The Gloucester Times stated the position accurately as follows:

"The reason that Americans enjoy this concession is that Newfoundland at the Quebec Conference in 1898, refused to be a party to the Canadian proposals to exclude the Americans, unless the latter agreed to reciprocity in fish products. The Bond-Blaine convention of 1890 indicated the willingness of the United States to grant Newfoundland fishery reciprocity, because Newfoundland had an unlimited supply of bait to offer the United States fishermen, and did not wish to send much of her own catch of cod into the American markets. Canada, on the other hand, had little or no bait, to offer, while she had large stocks of cod with which she wished to flood the eastern states. Naturally, the United States would not trade on that basis, and Canada, in revenge, blocked the Bond-Blaine convention. When the Quebec conference met in 1898, Newfoundland insisted upon independent representation and secured it, and it was her outspoken insistence upon her own position that prevented the North American seaboard being closed to the fishermen of Gloucester and Boston."

Note the selfishness of the United States' position—and blindness. Reciprocity with Newfoundland would be all right, because it would not interfere with the sales of United States fishermen, while it would enable the fishermen to get bait. But reciprocity with the Dominion would not do, because in that case each party would be selling to the other—and although this would probably mean cheaper food to the people of the United States, the influence of the New England fishing interest will not allow it.

As to one thing the Dominion would gain by annexation with Newfoundland, it may be remarked that while 88 Gloucester schooners procured licenses in Newfoundland waters last season to buy bait, no less than 80 Canadian vessels did the same, so it will readily be seen what a boon it will be to the Dominion to obtain control—absolute and direct of this important lever in controlling the deep-sea fisheries of the North Atlantic. Canada will then have another powerful lever in her hand to use to elevate the United States idea to the only basis on which trade concessions will be made by this country — namely genuine reciprocity.

Apart from ordinary bait supply the New England fishermen enjoy another bonanza on the Newfoundland coast in the shape of the winter herring fishery. This is almost exclusively controlled by Americans at present, who go to the island waters each winter and carry away about $150,000 worth of this fish. The herring fishery is almost indispensable to the Atlantic States because the herring are the main source of bait for the early fisheries on the southern banks, and also are in general demand as an edible as far west as Chicago. The present American tariff, which imposes a duty of half a cent a pound on ports in foreign bottoms, makes it impossible for the Newfoundland or Canadian fishermen to engage in this industry under existing conditions, but should Newfoundland enter the Dominion, it would then be possible to turn the tables on the Americans and control the fishery from the Canadian end.

To be in a thoroughly advantageous commercial position, both for internal gain and for external relations, Canada and Newfoundland ought to be one.

LADY OR THE TIGER?

Dr. Mon Fung Young, a physician of St. Joseph, Mo., and a citizen of the American Republic must either give up his country or his wife.

Dr. Young is an able and distinguished physician who has an office both in Kansas City and St. Joseph. Nine months ago he went back to China, ostensibly on a visit. The denouement was a small wedding in Pekin. The doctor brought his bride back by ship to San Francisco and she was detained outside the Golden Gate.

"She is my wife," said the doctor, "and I am an American citizen."

But the officials were obdurate. The Chinese exclusion act passed by congress barred out the bride. She must be deported. Dr. Young is considerable of a diplomat and telegraphed Washington, but Uncle Sam's immigration officials say that while the Chinese woman is nominally in the United States she cannot leave San Francisco and must go back to China.

The particular provisions which justify the bride's exclusion are somewhat tangled and international complications may arise over the matter, but that don't help Dr. Young.

He must renounce his adopted country or his bride.

This is a rather heart-breaking dilemma to put a man in. It is Frank Stockton's "Lady or the Tiger" over again.

If Dr. Young is made of the right stuff he will go back to China with the woman he chose as wife, and renounce a country that will not let her come in side by side with him.

But will he?

A NOVEL RACE

Farmer Bought a Pig on the Market but the Porker Got Away

A farmer bought a pig on the market Saturday. The pig was just lean enough to have sprinting blood in its veins, and it managed to get away from the owner. It went north on Water street at a sharp gallop, with the perspiring farmer in hot pursuit. Passers-by stood and watched the novel race. Various suggestions were offered to the farmer, that he throw salt on the pig's tail one of them. Others advised ringing in a fire alarm.

But the man-after-the-pig didn't see any joke in it at all. All he saw was a small speck ahead which was going like greased lightning and getting smaller every second.

Once when the pig stopped to take breath, the crestfallen owner thought he had him, but the little porker slipped through his feet and was away again. The last seen of it, the pig was still going, and the farmer, too, the latter with a look of grim determination on a face streaked with dusty perspiration.

A High-Class Mining Investment.

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital — AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having some to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1.00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

Armed and Invincible.

WHEN the little woman opened the door the burly fellow promptly pushed his way in. In alarm she hastily backed away, and he closed the door after him.

"What do you mean?" she demanded, trying to appear brave and determined. "Leave this house immediately."

"Oh, I guess not," he answered, impudently.

"I'll call my husband," she threatened.

"He ain't home," retorted the intruder; "there ain't nobody home but you. That's why I come in. See?"

She was badly frightened, but she tried not to show it. Furthermore, she was handicapped by the fact that she was in house-cleaning attire, with apron and cap, and a feather duster in her right hand. A woman cannot be as dignified and haughtily imperious as she would wish under these circumstances.

"What do you want?" she demanded.

"Money an' jew'lry," he answered. "I ain't partic'ler wot it is, only so it's small an' val'able. I ain't lookin' fer no piano."

"Well, I should think not," she returned indignantly, "and you can't have anything at all. If you don't get right out of here I'll scream."

"Turn 'er loose!" retorted the intruder, carelessly. "There ain't nobody to hear you, but you better be quick about it, 'cause I ain't got no time to waste. I'm all business, I am, an' we been foolin' long enough. Reach fer the high note!"

"You're the most insulting man I ever saw!" she cried, angrily.

"Sure," he acquiesced—and then, with a slight show of impatience, "Better hand out that watch you're wearin' or I'll have to reach fer it, an' that wouldn't be wot you'd like."

"Don't you dare touch me!" she exclaimed, retreating to the parlor as he advanced. "You're a great big coward! You wouldn't dare do this if I had a pistol!"

"Sure I wouldn't," he admitted; "but I got to have that there ticker for a start-off."

Her anger had been getting the better of her fear, and now her housewifely instincts added to her indignation.

"Don't you come into this room with those muddy boots!" she cried. "I've just swept and dusted. You go right back there and wipe your feet on the mat."

She pointed with the duster, and as that useful household utensil came in proximity to his face he hastily dodged back.

"Don't be sassy, little woman," he said with offensive familiarity, and that was the last straw. She was so angry that she could cry, and she would have done so if there had been any sort of a reasonable opportunity.

"Oh, if I only had a weapon!" she said, hotly. "I'd teach you manners, you big, burly brute—you coward! You know I was defenceless, or you wouldn't have dared come in! Oh, why is a woman so helpless!" Then, as he advanced again, she suddenly pushed the duster into his face, with the peremptory command: "Go back there, you clumsy thing! Don't you dare traipse mud into this room!"

Now, a feather duster is about as disagreeable a thing as a man can have thrust in his face, and as the intruder jumped back his feet became entangled in the hall rug, and he was flat on his back before he knew what had happened. As he tried to raise himself he got the duster in the face again. He grabbed for it, but she was too quick for him. He needed his hands to get himself up and he needed them to protect his face, and then she made matters worse by suddenly throwing

Modern English.

A Washington lady who is so fond of her home that she stays in it sometimes all the year round was assailed, says "Lippincott's Magazine," by a conventional friend in conventional language.

"I knew that you usually wintered here," she said, "but I was astonished to hear that you had summered here!"

"I have not only wintered here and summered here," replied the unfashionable one, "but I will astonish you still farther when I tell you that I always fall here and have sometimes sprung here."

Easily Satisfied.

Some men think they know everything. It was recorded of a freshly-made railway director, who was inspecting the permanent way, that he noticed at a curve in the line that the outside rail was higher than the other, and immediately called the engineer's attention to the defect. The engineer was a man of sense, and did not wish to enter into an explanation of the scientific character and the necessity of the rails being laid as they were, so he exclaimed: "All right, sir; I see exactly what is the matter, and I will have the rails levelled as soon as the up express has passed." And that sapient director went off perfectly satisfied.

Joe's Revelation.

Not long ago a nice young man was invited to dine at the home of a young woman and accepted the invitation with pleasure. It was just a family dinner, and everything was passing off well when an unpleasant and quite unforeseen incident occurred.

They were all discussing the pie, when the young woman's little brother, who had been regarding her closely, suddenly spoke up.

"Gee," he said, "look at Marie tryin' to put on style just 'cause Joe is here. She's eatin' her pie with a fork!"

It is needless to add that the [illegible] child experienced a very unpleasant quarter of an hour after Joe had gone.

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers, Fortune's Spec, Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

She went with me as far as the door of my bedroom, pointing out her own door further down the hall. "I showed you which was my room during your tour of inspection this afternoon," she said, "but I will remind you now, in case you should need anything in the night. Not that you are likely to lie awake, I trust. Compose your mind with the resolve to do as your best friend, Roger Cope, desires, and you will sleep peacefully enough."

"This is certainly not a bad place to be mistress of," I answered, diplomatically.

A moment more and I was alone. Still, there was nothing to do save to wait until the house should be quiet for the night. As to what should happen after that, my ideas were vague, but all my thoughts turned toward the Secret.

There was no clock in the room, but I had wound and set the watch which had come back from the pawnbroker's, and when it told half-past ten I looked out into the corridor. It was still lighted, but very dimly. The gas had been lowered since I came to my bedroom, and a faint yellow star, shining through the glass globe, redeemed the passage from darkness.

For a few moments I listened, but there was not a sound to be heard. Evidently the house had gone to sleep for the night, and if I could hope to do anything, I might as well make the attempt now as later.

I took a candle in a tall silver stick from my mantel, and a box of matches, but I did not mean to light the candle unless it were needed. Without a light, I might hide in the shadows, in case of a sudden alarm, while with it I should at once become a conspicuous figure for prying eyes.

I walked along the corridor until I reached the stairs, and then I cautiously ascended the two flights which lay between my floor and the third story. Now and again a board squeaked under my slippered foot, and I stopped, with a beating heart, peering fearfully into the dusk. But the noise had only seemed loud in my own fears; no one else had heard, and no door opened to frame a peeping face.

At last I reached the third floor, which was also the highest. Here also there was a faint light, and I could see in the distance the door of which Roger Cope was said to keep the key. So far, everything had been easy—far easier than I dared to hope it would be in the end. I decided that I would go to the door and knock very softly. If I was answered by a voice from the other side, I should feel that my theory regarding last night was correct.

Suddenly, as I tiptoed towards the door, it seemed to me that I heard someone speak. My heart gave a great bound, and, almost involuntarily, I shrank into the thick shadow of a great old-fashioned clothes-press which stood halfway down the hall. Hardly had I crouched into the corner when the door towards which I had been bound opened. A bright light shone out from inside, silhouetting the tall black figure of Sintra Leigh against a yellow background.

In crossing the threshold she turned and looked back, speaking to someone in the room. "I will bring it to you in less than ten minutes," she said, in an ordinary tone, without trace of agitation. "Be patient till then."

She took a step forward, but a faint murmur from the person unseen caused her again to pause. I could not hear the question, if question it was, but her answer reached me distinctly. "I cannot help that. After what happened last night, it is your own fault. But though the door must be locked after this, for the next night or two at all events, when you are left alone, you are in no sense a prisoner. As soon as you are well enough, if you choose to leave this house, and there is any other place where you would rather live, you have only to say so. I came here for your sake alone. And everything I have done since coming has been for your sake. It appears to me that you are very well off here. But we will talk about it again when I have brought you the wine."

She closed the door, and once more the corridor was dim. But I could see that she was bending down, and I could hear the fitting of a key into a lock. If I could escape her sharp eyes, in my dark, but otherwise sadly insecure hiding-place, after all this coming contretemps might work out for good. Evidently the key of this door was not in Roger Cope's possession, but in Sintra Leigh's. Now, if she would only, only leave it in the lock! Was it possible that she would do so?

For an instant she appeared to hesitate. I could guess what was in her thoughts. She was wondering whether there could be the smallest imprudence in letting the key remain where it was for the few moments of her intended absence. Before I could have counted twelve she had decided that she might safely trust it there, and, turning the key round with a faint grating noise, she hurried away.

My only hope of escaping her quick eyes lay in the sheltering shadow of the big clothes-press as I stood huddled into the angle it made in the wall, and the fact that the woman had no suspicion of my nearness. Probably she would have locked me into my room if she had not disliked proceeding to extreme measures by removing the key from the inside. Or perhaps she had felt confident that, after the alarm of the preceding night, I would not dream of venturing out after dark. She had reason to be secure in the knowledge that I could not leave the house, and she might have reflected that vague curiosity alone was not a strong enough motive to lure me from safety.

These thoughts darted through my head as she came nearer, and gave me hope. Fortunately, she carried no candle, and she had just come from a room brightly lighted, so that the darkness must have appeared more dense to her than it did to me.

I was half afraid that she might hear my heart beating, or the rustle of my gown as it rose and fell with the throbbing of my bosom, for the sound was loud in my own ears. I hardly dared look at her as she approached, lest my eyes should attract hers with some subtle magnetism, yet I could not force myself to turn them from the tall, swiftly advancing figure.

It was all over, however, in less than a minute, and she had gone by without even glancing towards the clothes-press. The sense of relief was so great when she had actually passed, that I grew giddy, almost faint. But there was no time for analysing my own sensations. Not a second was to be lost if I meant to do the daring thing which had presented itself as an allurement to my mind.

The woman in black had said that she would be away less than ten minutes

The first business before the Council was to decide on the tax rate for the coming year.

The estimated expenditure was given as $7324, and the estimated revenue as $1907, leaving $5427 to be raised by taxation on an assessment of $490,- 698. For this purpose it was necessary to raise the rate somewhat, and the Protestant rate will therefore be 17 mills and the Roman Catholic rate 18 55-100 mills. The estimates were figured so closely that at an increase of 1 mill the balance at the end of the year would only be $7.

Out of the total taxes required, 12 mills will be used for general purposes and the remainder for schools.

SIDEWALKS.

The question of placing granolithic sidewalks on Elizabeth street was taken up, but it was considered that on account of the sum raised for the sidewalk improvements being already exhausted, that it would be advisable to lay the matter over for the present.

Mr. W. McGregor's request that a walk be laid to the front of his house was granted.

Mr. Wm. Weir asked that a crossing be placed over the ditch in front of his premises and it was placed in the hands of Councillor Johnston and Mr. Fitzgerald to be attended to.

In reply to a question Mr. Johnston stated that the cost of piping and hydrant for the proposed waterworks extensions would amount to $525, and the excavation about $1 a foot. In view of the high prices prevailing for material and labor, no definite action was taken.

A Tribute to Peterborough Talent

The following interesting item of information is taken from the Canadian Bookseller: "Miss Alma Frances McCollum, of Peterborough, whose verse has attracted considerable attention, and given the author enviable distinction in her town and section of country, has compiled a volume of her poems and placed it with William Briggs for publication. "Flower Legends, and Other Poems," is the title Miss McCollum has given to this first collection of her verse. The quality of the poetry has been placed at a high standard by competent critics." It might be added that it is expected that the volume will appear about Christmas.

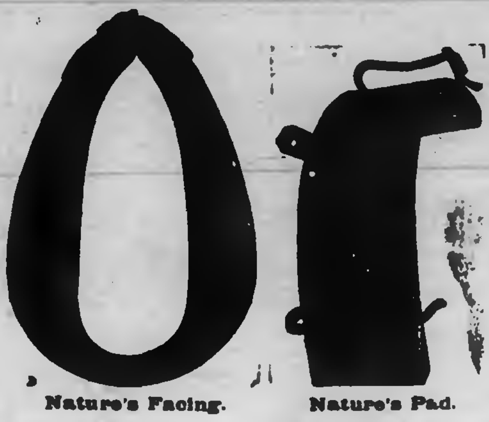
NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 22,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 10,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the next 10,000 Shares will be sold at Two Dollars Per Share, and the third 10,000 Shares at Two Dollars and One-Half Per Share. After which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the prices stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent., 15 per cent. and 12 1-2 per cent. on the investment, according to the allotment secured.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an Immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

We call your attention to the fact that the 30 per cent. interest only applies to the first 10,000 shares, and as considerable of this has already been sold, the balance will shortly be taken, so in order to secure the same and be on the ground floor send your subscriptions at once.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you., and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM HALPEN, GREEN & CO.

Wholesale Grocers, Nos. 18 S. Front St. and 17 Letitia St.
Philadelphia, December 28th, 1901.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg. Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours, truly,
HALPEN, GREEN AND CO.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well. Yours,

S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

QUARTER OF A BILLION BUSHELS FROM CANADIAN NORTHWEST

In Ten Years The Northwest Wil. Produce This Enormous Crop

American Millers Beginning to Draw on Canadian Wheat Growers

Special to The Times.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 14—Banker T. M. Knappen, of Minneapolis, in an address before the State Bankers' Association said that within ten years western Canada would be producing annually 250,000,000 bushels of wheat. He was alluding to the immense development there in the past few years.

Last year as much wheat was raised in Manitoba as in North Dakota. That province, with Alberta, Saskatchewan and Assiniboia, produced 62,000,000 bushels. The prospects are that the same region will, this year, have a yield of 75,000,000 bushels, which is about the annual product of Minnesota. The Minneapolis milling companies are beginning to draw upon the Canadian prairies for a part of their wheat supplies. One form is planning to build a mill with a capacity of 3,000 bushels a day for the exclusive grinding of Canadian wheat for the export trade.

Very little attention has been called to the rapid growth of wheat raising in that vast region. A few years ago the semi-arid plains of Alberta supplied grasses for a limited number of live stock, but there were no other industries. To-day waters led from the Rocky Mountains have turned many thousands of acres of the fertile land into the richest of grain fields. The miners among the rocky Mountains, a little farther west, are now depending for their breadstuffs and meats upon the farmers of Alberta.

Much farther north is the large district of Athabasca. As yet it has scarcely any white inhabitants, but it is a great Canadian reserve for the future extension of wheat culture. A great belt in the eastern part of this district, extending from its northern to its southern borders and 125 miles in width, has exactly the same soil components that have made Manitoba the granary of Canada. In other words, the deep, black loam of the Manitoba wheat fields is extended for a width of 125 miles through Athabasca.

Some persons might ask if the climate so far north is not too severe for wheat culture. The fact is that the mean summer isotherm of 60 degrees, which passes through Winnipeg and only a little north of Quebec, extends through the heart of this future wheat region. The season is long enough and none too cool for the profitable raising of wheat.

Canada has not twice as many inhabitants as the city of New York possesses. With her great resources, it is not strange that the Dominion Government is bending every energy to increase the population by attracting immigration into the country. Americans who are visiting Great Britain this summer observe that the names and addresses of agents of the Dominion Government may be found on a notice displayed in nearly every postoffice. These agents supply information, pamphlets and letters of introduction to Government agents in Canada. The agents are honest enough to tell those who visit them that they do not advise any person to go to Canada who is already doing really well at home; but the applicants are told that plenty of rich land, suitable for mixed farming and for the raising of cattle and dairying, may be obtained free of cost in Manitoba and the Northwest Territory, where many thousands of square miles of fertile lands are still unoccupied. They are also told that the classes wanted in the Dominion are persons with capital, agriculturists, tenant farmers, young men desiring to learn farming, male and female farm servants and domestic servants.

Two years ago a delegation from Wales was invited by the Dominion Government to visit Canada for the purpose of inspecting and reporting upon those portions of the country that are still open to settlement. The report of this delegation has been widely distributed in Great Britain, and is certainly worthy of the attention of all who contemplate crossing the sea to make new homes in the Dominion.

The delegates reported that they found no room for large colonies of settlers in the more populous districts, but in these districts there was plenty of land surveyed in lots of 160, 320 and 640 acres, the title of which might be acquired at comparatively small prices payable in yearly instalments for ten years. In the less settled districts they found vast tracts of prairie land which might be taken up under the free grant law, by which the settler secures a clear title to a farm upon his making improvements on the land.

The delegation said, however, that the newcomers attained greater success when they located among those acquainted with the country, the climate and the style of agriculture. They therefore favored the settlement of immigrants, wherever possible, in the regions already partly occupied.

They added that they could not speak too highly of the country, and they confirmed the good prospects of successful farming with comparatively small capital on these prairies.

HOW HE WORKED IT

A New Way to "Licker Up" When One is Dead Broke

He was a suave stranger garbed in a well fitting suit and a Panama rested on his head. The boys in a certain Peterborough hotel stepped briskly up when he asked, "What'll you all have?" and they smiled in unison when he cut loose with a funny remark.

"Give us another round, I'm out for a good time," said the stranger. "By the way, where's the proprietor?"

"Mr S—— is in Bobcaygeon," remarked the gentlemanly bartender.

"Oh, he is, is he?" said the stranger. "Well, give us another round, and we'll drink his health.

The glasses clinked and the stranger continued: "I'm a hotelman myself, boys, just sold out in Kingston. I want to buy a good place, and this cozy little house would just about suit me. By the way what are the dimensions of this place?"

The bartender didn't know.

"Ha, ha!" ejaculated the man from Kingston. "Here's just what we want! How fortunate! A ball of twine! Now, if the bartender will take hold of one end of this twine we will measure the room.

The bartender, anxious to please so good a customer held the twine, and the width of the room was ascertained. Then the bartender went slowly to the rear of the room and the stranger slipped the ball of twine under the front screen door and went outside, as he was very particular to measure every inch of the length of the room, even to the doorsill.

"Are you ready?" yelled the stranger from outside.

"Yes!" yelled the gang, who were helping the bartender at the rear of the room in unison.

The cord became taut and the crowd waited over a minute for the gentlemanly stranger to come in the door. Then the bartender went out front and found the cord tied to a hitching post and the stranger had disappeared.

And the bartender sorrowfully chalked up $2.30 in drinks to profit and loss

One Common Cause of Headache

Perhaps the most general cause of headache and pain across the eyes is nasal catarrh. The simplest cure is to inhale the medicated vapor of Catarrhozone which traverses every air cell and air passage of the throat, nose and lungs. It kills myriads of germs at every breath, clears away mucous discharges, preserves and heals the membrane. Catarrhozone is just a splendid remedy for headache, and its action is certain and unfailing in diseases of the Throat and Lungs, Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma and Catarrh. A trial will convince the most skeptical that Catarrhozone is all right. Large size, $1.00; trial size 25c. Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. Dr. Hamilton's Pills cure Constipation.

EDISON'S PREDICTION

In Thirty Years All the Railways will Substitute Motors for Steam Engines

Special to The Times.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Aug 14.—The official organ of the press exhibition, which was opened here on June 14, prints a letter from Thomas A. Edison in reply to queries as to his opinions concerning motor, traction and aerial navigation, Mr. Edison's letter reads as follows:

"I believe that within thirty years nearly all railways will discard steam locomotives and adopt electric motors, and that the electric automobile will displace the horse almost entirely. In the present state of science there are no known facts by which one could predict any commercial future for aerial navigation."

FREAKS OF LIGHTNING

SOME VERY OLD TRICKS PLAYED BY THE ELEMENTS

A Remarkable Chapter of Lightning's Freaks—The Old Adage "Truth Stranger Than Fiction," Proved

Special to The Times.

Hull, Canada, Aug. 14 — Lightning played some curious and expensive tricks in this locality lately. The Laurentian hill country is rather notorious for its thunderstorms, but the record for this summer far surpasses that for any previous season. Probably if a total could be arrived at, losses of animals, buildings and crops, in the counties of Pontiac and Ottawa alone would be found to amount to more than half a million dollars.

One farmer found that his cattle had broken out of their pasture, and were bellowing around the barndoor early in the afternoon as though terrified by the approaching storm. The men, having tied the creatures in their stalls, had just made their way to the house when the storm broke right overhead, and a vivid flash of lightning appeared to cleave the roof of the barn. The farm hands instantly rushed back again, and found that twenty-two out of twenty-eight animals had been killed by the stroke. One cow in the centre, and one at each end of the double row were unharmed. The others were badly burned about the necks where the chains had been fastened, and the iron links were either, in most cases, fused together or driven into the floor of the stable. A curious feature of the accident was that the hoofs of the dead cows were split or torn off.

On a neighboring farm one of the men was milking in a large stable full of cows, when a flash seemed to fill the building with a dazzling sulphurous flame. As soon as he recovered his sight, he found the cow he had been milking lying dead before him, the only thing about the place that had been injured. Every particle of hair had been clipped from the body of the dead animal, and lay upon its white skin in the form of a fine ash.

A few fields away a new mowing machine had been set up in readiness for next day's operation. This the lightning wrecked, breaking the heavy parts, dislocating the rest and scattering the fragments over half an acre of ground. The owner was congratulated upon the fact that, as usual, the selling agent had contracted to furnish free all repairs to the machine for the first season.

Near by an attempt had been made to start a fish preserve. Five hundred young trout were thriving under careful management in a little shaded shallow pool. A flash destroyed a tall, overhanging pine just at the edge of the water, and was probably conducted downward by it for the trout were all dead when the pool was visited next day. A flock of black ducks were found to have been killed during the same storm on a lake a few while away, the whole brood having evidently been stricken while resting on a log.

In Oawood township a farmer having heard that lightning never strikes twice in the same place, had built a large combined stable and barn on the site of a shed which had been destroyed the previous year. But the adage was not proved true in his case for the new barn was seen to take fire all along its length at once, as the lightning struck it, and with its contents was soon a heap of ashes.

A brick house was struck for the third time, the chimney wrecked and part of the gable torn out. In the cellar, where she had gone for safety the dead body of a servant girl was found, the clothing torn from the upper part of it, showing imprinted across the shoulders a representation of the open brass work of a fender, which stood upon the shattered hearth through which the lightning flash had made its way.

Some years ago several persons were killed near Montreal while sheltering under a maple tree. All over the dead bodies were clear impressions in light gray of maple leaves, transferred and fixed on the flesh by some subtle photography of the lightning.

On an invalid's table in one house which was badly shaken, though not set on fire by a flash, lay a thick printed scroll of "Scripture Texts for the Afflicted." The electric force expended itself in that room, in wrecking the little stand by the bedside, not even awakening the aged sufferer, who was resting there. The lightning had stamped there in heavy black letters of the open text through the whole scroll as though they had been punched through to make a stencil plate, without otherwise damaging or disfiguring the paper in any way. The text thus cut out was the prayer book version of Psalm XVIII, 28: "The Lord my God shall make my darkness to be light.

PRIEST BEGS MINERS TO QUIT THEIR UNION

A Prominent Catholic Divine Again Attacks Workers' Organization

BOTH SIDES TIRE OF STRIKE

Shamokin Operators Look for Speedy End of Struggle—To Resume Work in Collieries

Special to The Times.

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 11— Father O'Reilly, of the Church of the Annunciation, today made another attack, in a sermon, on the United Mine Workers of America and their officers. "Charity" was the subject of his discourse. "The bitter feeling that exists between man and his brother in our community today grieves me sorely," he said. "The presence of so many uniformed soldiers in this congregation to-day reminds me of the reign of lawlessness and bloodshed which made it necessary to bring in these outsiders to preserve the peace of the community. The spirit of charity which should be our guide always, is entirely absent, and in its stead we have nothing but bitterness and strife. The men whose hands have been stained in the blood of their fellowmen are supported in their evil ways by the self-constituted leaders, who are enemies of God and man. I have tried during many long years among you to promote feelings of peace and good will, and I am sure no teaching of mine has brought about the present state of affairs."

Father O'Reilly appealed to the mineworkers in his congregation to leave the United Mine Workers' organization stating that it is a "blood-stained" organization, and that he holds it responsible for the foul crimes that have been committed. "The leaders," he said "are the sowers of evil seed, who come among you and drummed into your ears to do what you have done. Had we been left to ourselves, all this bitterness and suffering would have been averted. They have sowed among us the seeds of discord. I have never asked any man to work against his will, but I protest against you steeping your hands in the blood of your brother who does want to work. Every man has placed upon him by the God who sustains him the responsibility of earning his bread by the sweat of his brow, and he must be permitted to do this without interference. Evildoers and agitators are always dissatisfied with the existing order of things and they are responsible for the presence of the soldiers in our midst today. Want misery and unprovided children have taken the place of the happy homes and bright faces that were to be found everywhere in our midst a few short months ago. The unthinking blame the Polish and Lithuanians for all the rioting and bloodshed, but in my opinion they have been misguided and misdirected by the leaders of this organization." F.J.W.

STRIKERS MORE DETERMINED.

Shamokin, Pa., Aug. 14.—Ninth District President John Fahy, of the Miners' Union, returned to headquarters from Shenandoah last night, accompanied by Miles Dougherty, member of the National Executive Board. They stated in positive terms that the presence of troops in the former place had the effect of making the miners more determined than ever to remain away from the operations until the strike ends with satisfactory concessions granted to the workmen. Fahy stated that not a pound of coal was being mined in the entire anthracite district. He says he thinks the strike is won.

Local operators and business men throughout the region are of the opinion the strike will be ended within the next week or two. Operators say the distribution of relief funds is doing more than anything else to create discord among the men, and cause them to return to work. Business men feel that both operators and strikers are tired of the battle, and are about ready to meet each other half way. If operators expect to start up any collieries in this region to-morrow, they are keeping it very quiet. Strikers' pickets are keeping a close watch on all the collieries.

Whilst Inspector William Stein, in his interview printed in the "Public Ledger" on Saturday, states that the damage to collieries in this district, owing to the strike amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars, the report this afternoon of Edward Brennan of this place, inspector of the Seventh District, shows that the operators' loss in the latter district is insignificant in comparison with that of the Shenandoah district.

"If the strike were to end to-morrow," said Brennan, "75 per cent of the men would find immediate employment. Every one of the thirty operations in the district, whose combined output last year was little over 6,000,000 tons could start at once. I don't mean the lower workings in every mine. Some are flooded in certain levels, but that would not interfere in mining coal in every one of the upper levels.

"Providing the best transportation facilities can be had for full shipments, it will take at least two years before the loss in the output caused by the strike will be recovered. Regarding the re-opening of mines and the companies notifying me in advance of their intention to resume work it is a mistake to believe I must enter in advance of anyone else to discover if there is gas in the workings and other perils for the miners to confront. The owners of operations, through courtesy, give me notice generally in advance of an intended movement to re-open a colliery. They don't have to do so until a colliery or number of them are in actual operation, when I am notified that proper precautions have been taken, fire bosses having made an examination of the mines three hours before employes were permitted to enter."

The Uprising in Siam

Special to The Times.

Washington, Aug. 14.—United States Minister Hamilton King at Bangkok, Siam, has informed the Department of State by cable that the uprising against the Government, recently reported, is spreading. Nakawn has been captured and Chiengmai is threatened

Thirty-four Americans thought to be in danger are reported safe. An endeavor will be made to bring into the capital American women and children now in the zone of disturbance. The Siamese Government is co-operating in the attempt to protect them. Troops are expected to arrive August 17 to restore order. Telegraphic communication has been cut for several days.

FAIRLY FLIES TO HIS SWEETHART'S BEDSIDE

Lest Death Claim Her Before His Arrival

A VERY PATHETIC MARRIAGE

Millionaire Lumberman's Race Against Death—It is Believed the Young Lady will Recover.

Knoxville, Aug. 21—J. P. Jensen, Freeborn, Minn., won his race across the continent with death to claim the hand of Miss Ruby Simonds, daughter of Col. H. A. Simonds, a well-known lumber dealer of the Northwest, who is spending a few months at his elegant home near Clinton.

The marriage occurred yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, Rev. R. A. Simonds, a brother of the bride, officiating.

Mr. Jensen met Miss Simonds two years ago while she was visiting in Freeborn. She was at that time a nurse, employed in one of the large hospitals of Chicago, and was on a vacation.

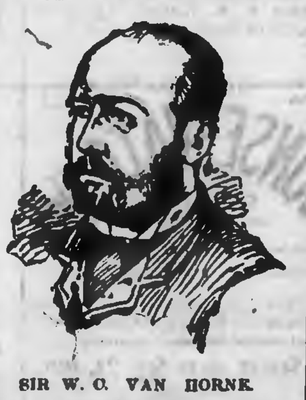
Jensen fell in love with the pretty dark eyed girl and she promised to wed him. She asked for time and returned to Chicago.

A few weeks since she came to Clinton on a visit to her parents. She was stricken with typhoid fever, and in her delirium she told the story of her engagement to Jensen.

He was notified and immediately chartered a train and hastened with all speed to the bedside of his sweetheart, whom he swore to marry ere death claimed her. He arrived yesterday morning and made glad the heart of the girl whom he loved.

In the darkened sick room, her face pale, her extended hand weak and nervous, the Chicago nurse became Mrs. Jenson. Only the immediate family and the family doctor witnessed the weird ceremony. The physician now believes his patient will recover.

THE C. P. R.'S SUCCESS IS NOW ASSURED



SIR W. C. VAN HORNE.

Sir William C. Van Horne Says the Company will Go Ahead

It Has the Support of the Government for Fast line

New York, Aug. 14.—Sir William Van Horne, chairman of the board of the Canadian Pacific Railway speaking of the Canadian Pacific fast line project, said to-day:

"I know of no change in the status quo of the negotiations now in progress between representatives of the Canadian Government and the British Government relative to the establishment of a fast line between Canada and Great Britain. So far as our end of it is concerned, I believe we shall be able to make thoroughly satisfactory arrangements with the Dominion Government, and that we already have their support for a fast line under Canadian Pacific domination. If there has been any hitch in the proceedings it is between the Canadian Government and the British Government.

Long Before Morgan.

"Our project has nothing to do with the so-called Morgan combine. We had our plan in mind almost in the identical shape in which it has been offered to the Dominion Government long before the Morgan combine was mentioned in public. I do not think that there is any project for a combination of all Canadian roads and waterways such as has been talked about.

"The St. Lawrence route, in my estimation, is a thoroughly practicable safe, and adequate route for a fast steamship service between Quebec and British ports. Below Quebec the river is of tremendous width and has perfectly safe channels. According to the experts all that is necessary to make the route as safe as any waterway in the world is the setting of a certain number of signals, and the general safeguarding the channel such as is necessary in the case of any harbor entrance. This work will be done by the Canadian Government just as soon as it is made certain that there will be a fast line to make such alterations necessary.

To Use Both Routes.

"The reason that so many minor accidents are recorded from the St. Lawrence route is that the navigation above Quebec is certainly precarious and decidedly unsafe for large vessels, and also that a great many of the vessels entering the St. Lawrence are not of sufficient seaworthy class to take care of and handle themselves on any route.

"When our line is fully established our summer route will be by way of the Straits of Belle Isle during the best part of the summer and south of Newfoundland when the route by the Straits becomes impracticable. The winter port will be Halifax."

HANGED FROM HORSE'S BACK.

When the Horse Was Started the Lynched Man was Left Swinging

Special to The Times.

New Orleans, Aug 14—Henry Benton, a negro boy 17 years old, was lynched at Homer, Clayborne parish, last night for criminal assault. He protested his innocence to the last. He was placed upon a horse, after his hands had been tied behind his back and a handkerchief placed over his eyes. The rope was tied to a limb and the noose fastened around his neck. Some one in the crowd gave the horse a blow with a stick and the animal started forward. As it did so Benton's body swung into the air. Several shots were fired into him, and death must have come to his relief at once.

One of the first to fire into the swinging body is said to have been D. W. Prestons, whose four-year-old girl the negro is said to have assaulted.

THE STREET RAILWAY WANT AN EXTENSION

They will Get It if They Put Up Five Thousand Dollars Security.

It is Now a Question of "Put Up or Shut Up," So far as the American Syndicate is concerned—Other Business Before Council

A special meeting of the Town Council was held at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. There were present, His Worship Mayor Denne, and Aldermen Edgecumbe, Shortly, Roger, Hatten, Morrison, Best and Turner.

A letter was read from R. R. Bane, President of the National Construction Company, asking that an extension of one month (until October 1st) be allowed on the time limit for the completion of the city lines of the Peterborough Street Railway, and that in the event of the payment of $25,000 to the present owners on or before October 1st, 1902, that a further extension of the franchise to May 1st, 1903, be granted, if desired by this company.

After considerable discussion the following resolution was adopted upon motion of Ald. Turner, seconded by Ald. Shortly:

That the request of the National Construction Company for the extension of time for the resuscitation of the Street Railway, in the event of their taking over the franchise of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, be granted upon condition that with the payment to the present Street Railway Company, $5,000 be also deposited with the town not later than October 1st next, as a security for the carrying out of the terms of the contract, to be refunded, less expenses, one month after the town lines shall have been commenced and continuing operating according to the said terms, and to be forfeited to the town in the event of such operations not being bonefide and commenced as proposed.

Mr. C. McGill, of the Canadian General Electric Company, who was present, intimated to the Council that he was in correspondence with several capitalists who were anxious to secure control of the road.

WEDDING BELLS

Pretty August Wedding Solemnized at Young's Point

On Tuesday evening a very interesting and pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. Father Phelan, in St. Mary's church, Young's Point.

The contracting parties were Miss Catharine Kennedy, daughter of Mr. Patrick Kennedy, of Burleigh Falls, and Mr. Martin Hobbins, of Bimidji, Minn.

Many friends were present to witness the ceremony and to extend congratulations to the happy couple who are very popular in that section, where the bride was a most popular young teacher, and the groom for a number of years was a resident of Chandos.

A most becoming gown was worn by the bride, who was attended by Miss Maggie Kennedy. Mr. Maurice Hobbins performed the duties of best man.

A number of choice and valuable presents testify to the esteem in which the bride is held. In a few days Mr. and Mrs. Hobbins leave for their future home in Minnesota, followed by the best wishes of their many friends.

HOFFMAN—MOORE.

At 8 o'clock last evening the wedding took place of Miss Madeline Moore and Mr. Joseph Hoffman, both of Toronto, and formerly of Peterboro. There ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Mr. Tallink, in the absence of the Rev. Mr. Easery, of Cooke's church, took place at the home of Mrs. Burkhart, 37 Alice street. The bride was attired in a dainty gown of white chiffon, worn over white taffeta. She wore a bridal veil caught with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Her bridesmaid, Miss Desdemona Watson, was prettily gowned in blue muslin, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Walt Corbet.

After a dainty wedding breakfast, to which only the intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom sat down, the young couple went immediately to their new home at 126 George street, where Mrs. Hoffman will receive her friends in the fall. A large number of presents testify to the esteem in which both Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman are held by their many friends. From his fellow-employees at the Downer Pattern Works, Mr. Hoffman received a very handsome oak chair, and from his fellow-boarders at the Power House, King and Spadina, an oak writing desk.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 14, 1902.

WILL THE C.P.R. GET IT?

The Toronto Star thinks that it now looks very much as if the Dominion Government intends to accept the offer of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to inaugurate a fast freight and passenger service between the Dominion and Great Britain. The word has evidently gone forth, for the many insuperable difficulties urged against such a course by Government organs have given way to a new light which has suddenly burst in upon them. It is now urged, with singular warmth, born of this new light, that a fast passenger service across the Atlantic is not nearly so important as a fast freight service. Figures are quoted to show that existing steamship companies, handicapped by excessive insurance rates, are not able to quote as low ocean freights from Montreal as from United States ports.

It will be a good thing for Canada if the Canadian Pacific Railway Company is given the contract for the establishment of a fast freight and passenger service between a Canadian port and Great Britain, with restrictions which will ensure fast and efficient service, and the imposition of no impossible conditions regarding termini on this side of the Atlantic. The two great railway corporations of Canada could, with a fast Canadian ocean service, from Quebec in summer, and Halifax in winter, route, not only Canadian export freights, but also much of that from the Western States through Canadian ports. These companies working together, as would be their interest to work, with a fast Atlantic service, run upon business principles from the best available Canadian ports, could make such a fast line a financial and national success.

Canada has a small advantage in distance, and a great advantage in shipping facilities during the summer months over any of the United States Atlantic ports, but she will have to fight a keen and bitter fight, through her great railway corporations, to hold her own share of the export trade of the great West, because of her long rail haul during the winter months to Halifax.

The C. P. R. can make a Canadian fast line a greater success than any other company, because it is, and always will be, the greatest natural feeder of such a service, but it can only successfully fight competition of United States ports by greatly increasing the export trade which now goes by Canadian ports, and to do that, it will have to be able to quote as low or lower rates on export business. This means that the new line would have to be strong financially, adequate in every respect, untrammeled by too many or difficult terminal demands in Canada, and conducted upon the best possible business principles.

A Canadian fast Atlantic service can be made a financial success by capturing business which now goes via United States ports, and that can only be done with the hearty co-operation of the great Canadian railway systems.

THE DEPUTATIONS ARE HOME

John Charlton, M.P., has an article in the current number of the North American Review on the proposal that Great Britain and her colonies shall adopt some plan of union for trade and defence. He thinks that neither Canada nor Australia can accept absolute free trade with England. He thinks also that England cannot accept a plan that will involve a tax on foreign products while British goods are being taxed in colonial ports—in fact, he shows the real size of that which colonial Imperialists ask, by saying that Canada buys only 2 1-2 per cent. of what Britain sells. All the self-governing and Crown colonies combined buy less than one-third of what Great Britain sells. Will Great Britain endanger two-thirds of her foreign trade in the hope of increasing the remaining third? Will Canada sacrifice her home market for manufactures on the altar of Imperial patriotism? The other day Mr. W. R. Brock, M.P., said that the woolen trade was being injured, and that the tariff should deal with the matter. What woolens are these that come in here to compete with ours? They are British woolens brought in by the preference, and we could thus get a foretaste of what would follow a throwing down of the barriers—the manufacturers, the cities, and towns would make a great outcry.

The Insane Philosophy of Tolstoi.

Tolstoi's book on the sex question, in which he advocates absolute chastity, even at the cost of the gradual disappearance of the human race, continues to arouse spirited discussion. "La Revue Blanche" (Paris) recently asked the opinion of several prominent Europeans regarding Tolstoi's views. Some of the replies are appended. Madame Judith Gauthier, a retired opera singer who is now a literary woman, was the only one to endorse Tolstoi's position.

Max Nordau—"Count Leo Tolstoi preaches absolute chastity. I wonder if he can convince Madame Tolstoi and the fine family she has raised! At all events, we should congratulate ourselves that his parents did not share his opinion. Otherwise we should have had no 'War and Peace' or 'Anna Karenina.' . . . Speaking seriously, it seems to me that the ideas of Count Tolstoi on the marriage question are absolutely delirious, and delirium can be diagnosed, but not discussed. It is useless to defend woman against the absurd lucubrations of a sick brain."

Enrico Ferri of Rome—"The affirmations of Tolstoi on the sexual question only confirm Lombroso's theory of the degeneracy of genius. The fundamental needs of humanity are bread to preserve life and love to preserve the species. To preach absolute chastity is as absurd as preaching absolute fasting. Marriage, whatever Tolstoi may say, is the ideal state of human life."

Emile Zola—"The idea of Tolstoi is not new. Marriage is legalized by society, but it exists in nature without laws. Christ did not get married, because he was too busy to think about it. I confess that I do not understand Tolstoi. . . . It is insane."

Madame Judith Gauthier — "I will limit my consideration of the problem to the question of birth. It seems to me an act of truest wisdom to prevent the unhappiness of existence, and many wise men, including Christ, have indicated the path which we have failed to follow. To give life and then inflict death would constitute the greatest of crimes, did not nature, in her search for victims, strike with blindness and unconsciousness those whom she allures into her snares."

Albert Reville—"Pascal said, 'Man is neither angel nor beast, and the man who wants to be an angel plays the part of a beast.' If the hope of a future life is reasonable, and I believe it is, we may be able one day to rise above the organic conditions of this mysterious life. But as long as we live on earth, we are bound to admit the legitimacy of the acts and functions without which our own life and the life of humanity would be impossible. To state that marriage is unchristian, because Christ was not married, is absurd. It is like reasoning that we could not go to heaven because we travel by rail and wear trousers, whereas Christ did neither. Christ himself said that marriage was a holy and divine institution (Mark x. 2-9)."

A High-Class Mining Investment.

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital—AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having sums to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1.00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses, doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

Beating a Gambler at His Own Game.

If every one who has a system for beating the bank at Monte Carlo attempts to float a public company, as the young Earl of Rosslyn is doing, to invite the world to share in the profits, there will not be much available capital left for any other enterprises. Whatever may be the peculiar merits of the scheme evolved by the English peer, who has recently been selling dog biscuit, the fact remains that despite the daily attack on the Monte Carlo bank by mathematicians with new systems the Casino continues to pay its large dividends.

Not only does the Prince of Monaco welcome the distinguished scientists who come to deprive him of his wealth, but he even goes so far as to pay their railway fare home, when their money is gone, and to provide for them, if desired, one of the most picturesque spots in the world in which to blow their brains out. But pistol practice on the grounds is very distasteful to the prince; hence his readiness to provide funds to place the unlucky system player in some other part of the world, where he may take his life in whatever manner he pleases, without disturbing the other players at the tables.

One of the recreations of a well-known New York banker, who has no need to "break the bank" at Monte Carlo to provide funds for himself, is to play imaginary roulette on a complicated system of his own invention. Although a yearly visitor at Monte Carlo, he has never staked a sou on the spin of the ball at the Casino. Back in his college days he was an honor man in mathematics, and he still delights in odd computations that have no connection with dividends and money rates. One day last spring at Monte Carlo he amused himself by making a "graphic chart" of the "rouge et noir" croupier for five hundred consecutive rolls. Governed by the immutable laws of chance, the zigzag line, tracing the variations from one color to the other, appeared to have certain sub-zigzags of similar outline occurring at irregular intervals. Taking the daily record sheets of the roulette wheels, the New York banker plotted more charts, all of which showed the same characteristic zigzags, with "high levels," "low levels," "criss-crosses," "runs" and "chutes," and other peculiarities, for which the mathematical American has an elaborate nomenclature.

Coming back to New York, he privately engaged, in another part of the office building in which is his banking house, a small room, which he fitted up as a miniature Monte Carlo. Six young women spent three weeks there spinning the roulette wheels and making charts of the fall of the balls. These charts represent the equivalent of a year's play at one of the tables at Monte Carlo. The banker keeps them in a safe-deposit box, marked "strictly private;" the wheels he has destroyed. These charts, too, have the same easily recognized zigzags. From the study of them the New Yorker has evolved a "graphic system" of "beating the bank" which has met with marvelous success, although the major part of the winnings has been made in imaginary play. At odd moments he and several club friends played the charts. Starting with a capital of $1,000, they won a small sum every "day," and at the end of the "year" had won $264,000 without plunging. Had they given a larger increment to their wagers they would have "broken the bank." They are all satisfied that the chart system is based upon good mathematics and will "beat the bank."

While he was at the Carlton, in London, the banker met a Dutch diplomatic officer, on his way to America, to whom he gave the results of his observations at the tables at Monte Carlo. The nobleman from Amsterdam, who is greatly respected among the baccarat players of Paris, had just had some very costly lessons in American poker from his New York friends. He was delighted with the mathematical beauties of the "graphic system" and offered to furnish a capital of £10,000 if the banker would go with him to Monte Carlo and instruct him how to make his wagers. The American, of course, declined, but he gave the Dutch official enough of an outline of the method of play so that when he made a recent visit to America he spent several profitable nights in a well-known gambling house near Fifth avenue. The first night he won $264, the second $440, the third $1,260, and the fourth $970. The one fault he found with the system was that the winnings were made at the expense of brain tissue. He said he would not attempt to follow it longer. Meanwhile the secret of the "graphic system" of "breaking the bank at Monte Carlo" lies in a safe-deposit box in Broad street, and the man who has the key refuses to indulge in public gambling.—"Leslie's Weekly."

A Delicate Position.

Wedding presents are frequently distinguished for their uselessness, and gift-making at any time is always attended with some danger, but there is a contractor in Toronto who realises that the most generous intentions are likely to turn out disastrously. This is how it came about:

A faithful Irish employee announced his desire to take a month's vacation in order to visit his brother in the West. He had worked so well and steadily that his employer not only granted the request, but made him a present of a new valise. The night before Tim was to leave he received the gift, accompanied by a few appreciative words.

Tim stared at the valise for a moment and then asked: "What am I to do with that?"

"Why, put your clothes in it when you go away, of course," answered the contractor.

"Put me clothes in it, is it?" said Tim. "An' phwat will Oi wear if Oi put me clothes in that?"

utes. I might, then, count on at least five clear minutes in which to work.

Peering out from my hiding-place, I only waited until Sintra Leigh's head had disappeared down the well of the staircase. Then I flew to the door of the room she had left, and unlocked it. I was too much excited now to be afraid, or I might have hesitated in dread of what I should see on the other side. But I did not hesitate. I turned the key and opened the door without knocking.

What I saw was a commonplace, comfortably furnished bedroom. A large reading-lamp stood on a table near a huge canopied bed, and in the bed, supported by banked-up pillows, reclined a man.

The first glance told me that he was the original of the third portrait in the library downstairs, and I felt far less surprise at this discovery than I should had I seen a strange face.

He had a book in his wasted hand, but at the sound of the opening door he looked up, fixing two great pale, startled eyes, set like topazes in deep hollows, upon the unexpected visitor.

"Who are you?" he exclaimed, in a voice as like Sintra Leigh's as his face was like hers.

I gave him the answer that sprang into my mind and insisted on utterance. "Hush!" I said, with my finger to my lips. "I am Ermyntrude's daughter, and I've come to you for help and justice."

The features, worn and altered by years and suffering since the portrait had been painted, changed and paled in the light of the green-shaded reading-lamp. "Ermyntrude's daughter!" he echoed. "Ermyntrude had no daughter."

"She adopted a daughter," I went on, hastily. "I heard you call on her name last night, and I couldn't rest till I found you. I loved her dearly, and she loved me, too. There are so many things you could tell me, if you would; and perhaps I could tell you some things that you would care to hear, if only you'd listen."

"For Heaven's sake, then, tell me how she is," the man cried.

"She is dead. Didn't you know?" I answered, with awe in my heart.

He fell back among the pillows, groaning, his hands, thin and yellow as claws, hiding his face.

For an instant I had forgotten that at almost any moment the woman might break in upon us; but now I remembered, with a shock. I ran to the bed and bent over the man who lay there.

"There are other things I can tell you —things that have been kept from you, perhaps," I said. "Do you wish to hear them?"

"Yes, yes!" he moaned.

"There isn't time to tell you now, for we are liable to be interrupted. Is Sintra Leigh your sister?"

The man looked me in the face once more and nodded, without speaking.

"She wished to keep us apart. When I asked about this room to-day she said that it was a store-place and Sir Roger Cope kept the key. When she comes back, if she finds me here, she will send me away. She is stronger than I, and she can call the servants to aid her if she chooses; I can't resist. But if you will do as I ask, I will run whatever risk there may be in displeasing her. I've shut the door, and the key is outside, where she put it a few moments ago. When she comes back, she will think that she must have failed to lock the door, or perhaps she will turn the key round and not know that it has been tampered with. If I hide in this room, so that I can talk to you when she has gone away again, will you promise to keep the secret?"

"Yes," the man answered. "She has tricked me, and she deserves to be tricked in return."

I could not be sure whether or no he would keep his word. But I determined to take the risk. At worst, Sintra Leigh would hardly dare to kill me, whatever might be her desire for revenge should she find me out.

"Hist!" the man's voice broke into my thoughts. "I heard something in the distance. She's on her way back."

Without a word I flew to the window nearest. It was covered with heavy curtains that had been drawn together and fell in straight folds to the floor. Behind them I found that the window was partly open, to let in the mild air of the June night. If the curtains moved, Sintra Leigh might think that they were stirred by the breeze. There was a deep embrasure, and, gathering my skirt closely about me, I knew that, unless the woman in black should be seized by a whim or I was betrayed by her brother, I stood in no immediate danger of discovery.

The curtains had scarcely ceased to quiver after being drawn into place by me, when I heard the door open. I half expected Sintra Leigh's first words to be an expression of surprise at finding the door unlocked, but, instead, she began quietly to speak about a bottle of port which she had fetched from downstairs. No doubt she had done what I had suggested—turned the key without becoming aware that someone had been before her.

"It was so dark in the passage to-night that I stumbled at the top of the stairs," she said, "and almost dropped the wine."

"I heard a sound," replied her brother.

"Now, you are to drink this," the woman went on, "and I am sure that you will have no return of the dreams which troubled you last night. We cannot have any more such disturbances, especially while we are guests in this house. There! You feel better already, I am certain."

"I think I do," answered the weary voice from the bed. "I hope I may sleep to-night. Thank you for bringing me the wine. You might as well go now; I shall need nothing more."

"I should be glad to stay with you longer if you cared to have me. But, of course, if you think you can sleep that will be best."

"At least I shall try. And somehow I think that to-night I shall succeed better than before—better than I have for a very long time."

"Shall I close the window?" asked the woman in black.

I held my breath. Would the man remember that my window was the one which had been opened? And would he still be true?

"No, no," he rejoined, rather irritably. "You know that I like fresh air."

"Good-night, then. And remember that the bell beside your bed has now been made to connect with my room. You have only to ring. It would have been better if you had not forgotten that last night."

"I lost my head last night, I admit," was the reply. "It shan't happen again, I promise you. But, for Heaven's sake, don't lock me in. The thought of be-

RIVER NOTES

The Rathbun Company's logs, that are now running into the Little Lake, are in charge of Foreman John McCarthy, who has held the confidence of the company for about fourteen years, and has associated with him Mr. Hugh McCormick, who is second in command under that old veteran, Mr. Thos. Callahan, one of the ablest of the company's employees. Mr. Jas. McCormick is the efficient and obliging clerk with the firm, and last, but not least, is Mr. Thomas Faucher, the chef, who is the pet of the camp. Tommie is always in demand.

The Crossley Case

Mr. D. O'Connell is making a hard fight on behalf of Minnie Crossley, who was fined $75 and sentenced to three months in jail. An order was made on August 7th in the High Court of Justice of the King's Bench in Chambers, on the application of the defence, reducing the fine imposed upon the defendant to $50. A writ of Habeas Corpus and a motion to discharge Minnie Crossley from custody, however, was discharged, and a notice of appeal has been served, the motion to be made on September 9th. Twenty-seven reasons are set forth in the statement of appeal.

CORNER STONE LAID

Free Masons Assisted in the Ceremony at Fenelon Falls

A party of thirty local Masons visited Fenelon Falls yesterday to assist at the laying of the corner stone of the new St. James' church. Addresses were delivered by Judge Harding, Grand Master; Rev. W. L. Armitage, Grand Chaplain; Rev. Langfeldt, and Rev. Thompson, Ashburnham; and Rev. Perkins, Lindsay.

After the ceremony had been performed, and a pleasant day spent, the party started homeward, leaving Fenelon Falls at 4 o'clock and arriving at Bobcaygeon, for supper, at 6.30. A stop of about an hour was made at Jacobs Island, where St. John's choir boys are under canvas, and a pleasant time was spent in singing songs, etc.

The party arrived home about 10.30.

AUGUST DROWNING ACCIDENTS

A Word of Warning to Those Who Go Out in Boats

The Times is of opinion that no one should venture forth in a canoe who cannot swim.

In August the number of pleasure seekers who go bathing and who go canoeing or rowing is swollen to large proportions. This is pre-eminently the vacation month. So many careless pleasure seekers take foolish chances, both on the water and in the water, that the annual warnings and appeals should be made emphatic everywhere.

Every year, in August, the newspapers are crowded with mournful details of losses of life because of reckless defiance of reason and common sense. Light headed persons who cannot swim will insist on going out, too far from highwater mark. Swimmers who are vain of their ability to cope with the waves venture too far, become exhausted and sink. Indiscreet pleasure parties trust themselves in canoes and other small craft to the care of rash young fellows who hardly know how to steer or paddle, and are utterly at a loss what to do if even a puff of wind is blowing. There are simpletons, too, at the oar, as well as at the paddle, and the idiots who delight to "rock" small boats for the "fun" of "scaring the girls" are not yet extinct.

LEARN HOW

To Feed Yourself Skillfully

It is easy to use good food and get well and keep that way, but a person must go about it.

A lady says, "I had a dreadful time of it before I learned to feed myself properly. I suffered with stomach trouble for about ten years and finally got so bad that terrible pains would set in, followed by nauseating sickness in the stomach and bowels.

Sometimes I would bloat up and would have to lie flat on my back. My stomach finally got so bad that it would throw up everything I ate, and of course, I lost weight and strength very rapidly. I became pale. Blood was out of order and I looked like a skeleton finally.

One day neuralgia set in in the stomach and liver and I went right down to death's door. I got so bad that even warm water was thrown off the stomach which would hold absolutely nothing until I began taking Grape-Nuts in small quantities.

My father had been accustomed to Grape-Nuts and knew the value of the food and began giving it to me. I immediately began to improve, and the stomach retained the food and digested it. I gradually grew well again and now I can eat a hearty dinner of almost anything. I have gained thirty pounds in weight. My brain is clear, skin beautifully white, and my eyes as bright as crystal, where I used to be sallow and with lack luster eyes. I owe everything to Grape-Nuts. Please do not publish my name." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SUDDEN DEATH AT LAKEFIELD

Mrs. Percy Strickland Dies Suddenly from Heart Failure

The readers of the Times will be shocked to learn of the death of Mrs. J. P. Strickland, of Lakefield, which sad event occurred with awful suddenness on Tuesday evening. On the evening in question about a quarter to seven o'clock a small blaze broke out in an out house of the residence. Mrs. Strickland and daughter were the only members of the family home at the time and they were naturally considerably excited, and in hastening out of the house Mrs. Strickland fell or struck her head violently against the frame of the doorway and suffered concussion of the brain which, operating with an affection of the heart, led to fatal results. Although medical attention was very soon available, all efforts were without effect, and the unfortunate lady remained unconscious till the time of her death, which took place at 10.30.

The late Mrs. Strickland, whose maiden name was Susannah Sherwood, was a sister of the late W. E. Sherwood. She was about sixty-two years of age. About forty years ago she was married to Mr. Strickland. She then resided with her family in Germany, and Mr. Strickland, who had met her while she was on a visit here, made the voyage to Germany, where they were wedded. Besides her husband, the deceased leaves six children, three sons and three daughters, to cherish her memory. Two of the daughters reside at home, and the other is Mrs. John H. Peck, of Vancouver, B. C. The sons are Messrs. Walter, of Toronto; Dyencourt, manager of the Quebec Bank at Pembroke, and Alexander, of the Bank of Montreal, Greenwood, B. C.

The deceased lady was a member of the Church of England, and one whose kind deeds and sympathetic charity will live after her. She will be deeply and sincerely mourned.

That bereavements never come singly to a family seems to be borne out with sadness in this case. Mr. H. T. Strickland, of Ashburnham, only a few weeks ago lost by death his only sister, Mrs. Bloomfield, of Lakefield. A few days later he was called upon to mourn the death of his own wife, and now his brother's wife has been suddenly summoned.

The funeral takes place from the family residence, "D'Eyncourt Park," this afternoon at three o'clock.

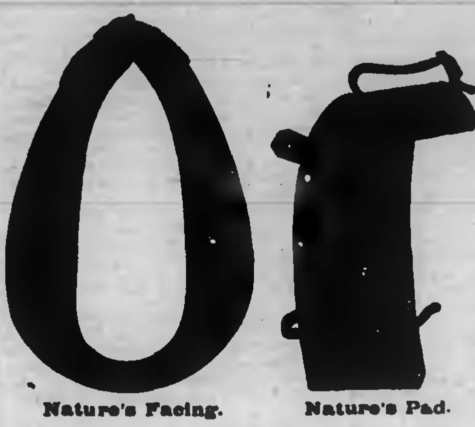
NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 32,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON). THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 10,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the next 10,000 Shares will be sold at Two Dollars Per Share, and the third 10,000 Shares at Two Dollars and One-Half Per Share. After which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the prices stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent., 15 per cent. and 12 1-2 per cent. on the investment, according to the allotment secured.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

We call your attention to the fact that the 30 per cent. interest only applies to the first 10,000 shares, and as considerable of this has already been sold, the balance will shortly be taken, so in order to secure the same and be on the ground floor send your subscriptions at once.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
108 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours, truly,

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well.

Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

EMPEROR WILLIAM SILENT REGARDING REVAL MEETING

Arrangements Being Made for a Great Fair at Johannesburg, South Africa

The Pope and the French Schools—He wants to Lay the Responsibility on the Government.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 14.—The Times announces a large and important industrial exhibition to be held at Johannesburg. The Committee of Arrangements for the exhibition included Lord Strathcona, Sir Robert Herbert, Albert Hollit, Alfred Jones, and many other prominent men. There will also be representatives of India on the committee. The exhibition is to embrace mining and industrial machinery, all motive powers, tramways, and industries of every description. Arts and sciences will also be represented. It will be the largest gold exhibition the world has ever seen.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 14.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says that an explanation of the Pope's silence on the closing of the Catholic schools in France is given by the Eudist Superior General, who says that the Pope, foreseeing that the concordat is to be denounced, wishes to leave the responsibility to the Government. The Superior General says that the concordat resembles a marriage contract between the church and state. The case is like that of a wife who being beaten by her brutal husband, does not suffer divorce because it would compromise the conjugal dignity.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 14.—The Times' correspondent at Vienna quotes a well-informed and high-placed AustroHungarian on the subject of the Reval meeting between the Kaiser and the Czar. The authority says that the Kaiser, having failed to effect a rapprochement with France, naturally tried to make up to Russia. The Weiner-Son-Nun Montags Zeitung explains the astonishing taciturnity of Emperor William by the fact that nothing occurred at Reval to afford him the least gratification. The Kaiser, who so passionately loves the sound of his own voice, would not hold his tongue, it says, if there was anything worth telling.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 14.—In his speech at the opening of New Park, Eastbourne, on Tuesday, Lord Roseberry said that the statement that he had recently expressed surprise that Great Britain hold afast to ancient ceremony in connection with the coronation was due to a misunderstanding. "At that ceremony," he said, "not only is the King crowned, but we at that moment consecrated our kingdom. We lay our crown upon the altar, asking the Divine sanction for our empire, our power, our dominion. As a popular national solemnity the coronation is a ceremony in which every citizen and subject, however humble, has an individual part, however indirect or lowly."

A HARD COAL FAMINE IN AMERICAN CITIES

Alarming Reports from Jersey City, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and Chicago

Special to The Times.

New York, Aug. 15.—Inquiries have been made by the Tribune as to the stock of anthracite coal on hand at several cities in the east, with the following result: New York city dealers say the supply there has been practically exhausted for weeks. The railroad companies have been able to deliver only a few thousand tons a day recently, and much of it is known as washed coal.

Retail price of coal in Jersey City is $9 a ton, delivered, or $8 at the yards, and orders are taken only conditionally. The dealers have agents out purchasing wherever they can find coal. None is coming in by the cars. Some have a meagre reserve supply, but this is kept for customers with whom they have contracts. Orders for thousands of tons have been pigeonholed because they cannot be filled.

CLOSED THEIR AGENCIES.

Buffalo, N.Y., reports that the Erie railroads Hillside is the only anthracite that can be brought there at present. It sells for $5.65 a ton, and is not the best quality of hard coal. The Philadelphia and Reading, the Lehigh, the Delaware and Hudson, and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroads have all stopped the sale of anthracite at their trestles, thereby putting an absolute stop to their coal business. The railroads are maintaining the utmost secrecy regarding their supplies, and even the Erie officials refuse to say how much they have on hand. All the leading coal dealers say that the supply is exceedingly limited.

At Albany, N.Y., the retail dealers have in stock not to exceed two thousand tons of anthracite, which they are selling at $6 to $6.25 a ton. The Delaware & Hudson Company has about one thousand tons in reserve at Delanson. This, with three hundred tons held by a wholesale dealer, is all that can be counted on for Albany. It is known, says the Albany correspondent that the Delaware & Hudson has considerable coal, estimated as high as 50,000 tons, on sidings along its Susquehanna division.

NO GENERAL SUPPLY.

The Wilkesbarre, Pa., correspondent says there is no general supply of anthracite on hand at any point in the coal region. That which is being sold is some that companies are producing in their washeries, and some that is obtained by individual concerns from small coal pickings. The regular dealers have none, and can get none.

Boston, Mass., reports that no distress has yet been felt, although the margin of the coal supply is not a pleasant object of contemplation. One authority said three days ago that there are perhaps twenty-six thousand tons of coal within the city limits. The dealers are doling out their supplies a ton here or two tons there.

From Baltimore, Md., the report is that coal dealers estimate the stock of anthracite here at ten thousand tons. This includes all in the local yards. The supply is so low that at a meeting of the Retail Dealers' Association it was decided not to make an advance. The price remains at $7.50 for regular size, and $6.25 for pea coal. A famine is imminent.

CHICAGO'S STOCKS LOW.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 15. — Chicago's stock of anthracite coal is running low on account of the miners' strike. Leading dealers to-day expressed the opinion that before winter householders will be compelled to use bituminous coal for all domestic purposes. They said that even if the strike should be settled by September 1, the new coal would not be received in large quantities before Christmas, so that at least a temporary use of soft coal is extremely probable.

The present cost of anthracite to the retailers in carload lots is $6.15 a ton, to which is added $1 to the consumer. A substantial advance in these prices is predicted for September. About 150,000 tons of anthracite coal are said to be stored in Chicago now, but as 90 per cent. of the demand for it is for domestic purposes, the impending scarcity will not be seriously felt until the advent of cold weather.

A PLOT TO MURDER

Sensational Discovery on Board a British Training Ship

London, Aug. 15—A murder conspiracy, entered into by boys on the training ship Cornwall has just been revealed in the examination of two urchins committed for trial on the charge of having stabbed one of the ships officers in the back.

The revelations show that after several of the boys had been flogged for a theft of preserved meats and biscuits, the culprits hatched a plot to murder three of the officers. Their plan was to first make away with the first officer by throwing him overboard during boat exercise.

This exercise being omitted, owing to bad weather, two of the boys went below in search of officer Chilcott. But he happened to be away on account of sickness and thus escaped.

The boys then sought officer Hunt. Finding that officer, two of the boys, Percival and Rixon, who are now under arrest awaiting trial set upon him and stabbed him in the back, the knife penetrating a lung, and very nearly proving fatal.

News of the conspiracy caused a sensation, because it was supposed that the 242 boys aboard the Cornwall were exceptionally well behaved and to be considered in the light of the most excellent material for the British navy. Read Admiral Morrel, captain superintendent of the ship however, places the blame on city magistrates, who send half savage London "Hooligans" to the Cornwall without first punishing them for the offences of which they have been convicted. The admiral said:

"At the present time I have among my ship's company several of the stabbing, shooting and kicking young brutes who have made such a notorious name in the East End—the kind of blackguards who take pleasure in putting stones on the railway, for the fiendish delight of seeing the train wrecked. At least 236 of the lads on board the Cornwall are as good boys as you will find anywhere in England.

The appearance of the boys under arrest bears out the admiral's statement. The incident probably will result in "Hooligans" being properly punished on land hereafter.

THE GREAT INDIAN PAGEANT.

The India office has just purchased an outline of arrangements for the great Indian pageant called the Durbar which is to be held at Delhi next January in comparison of which the postponed English coronation splendors would have seemed tawdry and cheap.

The durbar will be held in a great horseshoe amphitheatre which will contain about 1,200 people. The viceroy, in the full derivative sense of the title, will occupy a dais in the inner recess and the inner tiers of seats will be filled with representative princes of all India.

When the royal proclamation has been read and the salute fired the viceroy will make his speech and the ruling chiefs will be presented. At the same time 40,000 troops will be drawn up in the surrounding plain, while unestimated thousands of the populace will look on from a distance.

But where the durbar will most outshine any pageant of western civilisation will be in the eastern talent for symbolism in light and color, the brilliancy of its costuming and decorations, and the vast quantity of priceless jewels which will adorn the native princes.

Many people in all parts of the world are now making preparations to go to India to witness the pageant of the durbar at Delhi.

COST OF TITLES.

It costs something to get a title in England, as several Englishmen have lately discovered. Of course, the honor itself is not to be bought with money, but before the recipient of it has it firmly and legally in his grasp the fees he has to pay are so large that he will not soon forget that the title is worth something, after all.

It has just been disclosed by a government report that the fees which Lord Roberts had to pay before he assumed his title of "viscount and earl of the United Kingdom" aggregate $3,750, while Sir Alfred Milner's barony cost him in fees $750. Viscount Cromer had to pay $1,250 for his title of earl, while Miss Charlotte Knollys who is the queen's intimate friend, had to pay $500 for papers establishing her right to precedence as the daughter of a baron.

A grateful nation gives its chosen subjects titles, but the fortunate one's aren't permitted to take possession of them without cost.

Of course, there isn't one of these titles, even the humblest, that certain American millionaires wouldn't think cheap at one thousand times the price. There is no doubt that William Waldorf Astor, for instance, would be willing to disburse a million dollars, if the king would give him a baronetcy, but there are some things that money can't buy in England, and Mr. Astor has learned to his grief that a title is one of them.

Forty Eight Protests Filed

With the possible exception of a cross-petition, which may yet be filed by Lennox Conservatives against M. S. Madole, the list of protests arising out of the recent provincial elections appears to be complete. Of the total filed, 48, 33 are straight petitions and 15 are cross-petitions. This total is much less than the number filed after the previous provincial elections, which was 73, of which 65 were straight petitions and only 8 were cross-petitions. Both parties are quietly but industriously preparing evidence for the trials, which will be commenced in two or three weeks.

The probabilities are that the bye-elections will be brought on simultaneously, and that Mr. Ross will then make a supreme effort to redeem two or three seats.

The Premier will arrive home from England in a couple of weeks, when a definite policy will be arranged.

SAW 84 MOOSE

Wonderful Quantity of Big Game in New Brunswick

Moncton, N.B., Aug. 15 — Henry Braithwaite arrived at Fredericton on Saturday last from his hunting grounds at Miramichi. He had been home for a little over three weeks and had put in the time visiting his various camps, of which he has about twenty-five, and getting ready for the fall big game hunting. Kenneth R. Chestnut accompanied Braithwaite on the trip as he has done for the past three years. They saw a great number of big game and state that there will be great hunting next fall. Mr. Chestnut relates, as an indication of the increase in the number of moose that on his first trip in the woods with Braithwaite, in 1899, he was in the woods a month and saw 27 moose in that time. Last summer on a month's trip over the same ground he saw 34 moose, thought then to be a wonderful record. Upon the trip finished to-day and which extended over three weeks he saw by actual count 84 moose, many of them of extremely large size. On last Sunday nearly a score of the big fellows were seen near the camp at which Braithwaite and his companion were spending the day. The Intercolonial Railway should certainly reap the benefit of a large hunting travel this fall to Miramichi.

AMERICAN BOYS POISONED

Chicken Pie at a Missionary School at Che Foo Was Bad

Special to The Times.

Victoria, Aug. 15—Twelve boys, sons of American and European merchants and missionary residents in China, died of ptomaine poisoning at the China Inland Mission School, Che Foo, on July 7. One of the courses served to the boys and teachers at the school was chicken pie. There were several pies cooked, and one of them was evidently bad. A number of boys were taken ill afterward, and it was thought that cholera had broken out in the school, but the ailment turned out to be ptomaine poisoning.

JAPAN AND UNCLE SAM

THE TROUBLE OVER MARCUS ISLAND VERY SERIOUS

Japan Lands Marines — The American Expedition Had not Reached the Island at Last Report

Special to The Times.

Yokohama, Aug. 15—News has been received here that Japan has won the race for possession of Marcus Island, supposed to contain valuable deposits of guano.

The imperial cruiser Kasagi, which left for the island, has returned to Tokio after landing a small detachment of marines on Marcus Island, to hold the place until the question of ownership is definitely settled by diplomatic correspondence between the United States and Japan.

At the time the Kasagi started back Captain Rosehill, the American, who left Honolulu for Marcus Island, had not arrived.

JAPAN'S CLAIM TO THE ISLAND.

Tokio, Japan, July 25 via Victoria, B C., Aug. 15—The Japanese Government cruiser Kasagi sailed for Marcus Island, July 23, having on board Mr. Ishii, Secretary of the Foreign Office, the object being to reach the island before Captain Rosehill and his expedition from Honolulu. The rival claims of America and Japan to this speck in the ocean have made a considerable stir in Japan. The ownership of Marcus island, called Minamitori Shima here, was tangibly established by the following announcement, issued under instructions from the home office under date of July 19, 1898:

No. 55 notification of Tokio Fu.

An island situated at the latitude 24.14 north and longitude 154 east shall be called herewith Minamitori Shima, and included as one of the Bonan group, and shall be under the administration of Tokio Fu.

KOYESLUKA RYO,
Governor of Tokio Fu.

July 24, the 31st year of Neoji (1898)

There is evidence that the Americans occupied the island before the Japanese, but they are said to have abandoned it. The island is not particularly rich, the entire revenue from fishing, hunting, etc., being placed at about $10,000 annually, but the question is looked upon as being interesting diplomatically. Mr. Ishii will arrive at the island in time to receive Captain Rosehill and execute his government's title to the place, and his presence will also assure the little company of Japanese islanders, who are, no doubt, considerably alarmed at the turn of events.

A central chamber of the Tea Guild has issued a warning to those concerned, in accordance with a resolution passed at the recent meeting at Shizuoka. The chamber is much exercised at the over-production and coarse manufacture, in view of the recent increasing export of tea. The warning says that besides the production of the first tea the abolition of the United States war tax stimulated tea exports, and, should foreign complaints be raised in connection with coarse manufacture, the Japanese tea trade will no more be able to enjoy the benefits accruing from the abolition of the tea tax.

HARVESTING THE BIG MANITOBA CROP

How the Army of Farm Laborers will be Sent to Their Destination

More important than any other topic at this particular time is the gathering of the anticipated bountiful harvest in Manitoba and the Territories this and next month. At least 20,000 men are required for the work, and the great majority of these will go from Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. Some interesting information regarding the way the farm laborers will be handled is given by the Manitoba Government in a statement made by Mr. Hugh McKellar, of the Department of Agriculture, in reply to the following letter received from a person in Ontario:

"Please say what arrangements you will have at Winnipeg for sending farm laborers to certain localities where they desire to go. Upon inquiry I find many of those contemplating going from this locality have relatives, friends or farmers for whom they have worked before, and for whom they have promised to work again should they return. These parties will decline to go unless some arrangement is made whereby they can be sure of being ticketed through to their desired destination."

The following is Mr. McKellar's reply, which concisely sums up what the Government has done in the way of preparing for the distribution of the laborers from the east:

"The question you raise is the one that impressed itself most forcibly upon me last year in considering any change in our method of distributing harvest hands. I consider it absurd to dictate to any man where he should go, especially when men have definite places in view. There is nothing, however, in this year's arrangements that will prevent men from going to their friends or to those for whom they worked in past years, if they advise such friends or farmers that they are coming, so that such friends and farmers do not engage others.

"The fare to Winnipeg is $10. On presenting stub of coupon to C.P.R. officials on arrival at Winnipeg a pass is given to any point in Manitoba and away men go to destination. They can take care of themselves for they have been here before. Their baggage would also be re-checked from Winnipeg to destination. For those who have never been here to help in harvesting and who have no particular place to go, we are arranging that they shall be met at Winnipeg by delegate farmers from all points in the province and taken out to their various districts. This is to prevent congestion at any stations. A pass is also given to all such from Winnipeg to destination.

"You will see, therefore, that there is no interference with men who know their destination, and that every assistance possible is to be given by the officials of this department in locating those who may come to assist us for the first time. There is nothing, therefore, to deter anyone from coming. They are wanted, and they will receive every attention and assistance possible."

It is hoped that the Eastern Canadian press will put this matter in its proper light, so that no one will be deterred from going, for it may readily be seen from the above letter that men will be allowed to go to whatever destination they desire, without interference, and those who have no special preference will be assisted in every possible way.

A SMALL WAR CLOUD ON EUROPEAN HORIZON

Possible Rupture Between England and France over Siam Territory

France is Endeavoring to Secure Advantage in Siam That Great Britain Cannot Possibly Allow

London, August 15—The friction between France and Siam which brought about the bombardment by a French squadron of the Siamese forts at the mouth of the Menam River, and nearly led to a rupture between France and England in 1893, when Lord Rosebery was in the British Foreign Office, is reviving. There are apprehensions at Bankok that the situation may be a prelude to a further loss of territory by Siam.

The French are pushing their way into the southern parts of China and are apparently desirous of gaining fresh ground in Siam to the west of the Mekong River, the whole of the east bank of which only recently passed into their possession, and was added to their Indo-Chinese provinces. The question of the future of Siam was recently made the subject of a confidential memorandum by Mr. Rivett-Carnac, financial adviser to the Government of Siam, which brings to light some important opinions, and has been laid before the British Indian Government.

Mr. Rivett-Carnac seems to regard it as extremely probable that France may be goaded by its colonial expansionist party into seizing the remaining eastern provinces of Siam, "even at the risk of a rupture with England." This would involve the taking of Korat to the northeast of Bankok, with which it is connected by a railway, 165 miles in length, opened in 1900, and so place the Siamese capital under perpetual menace.

The British Government is using its influence for the maintenance of the status quo, but it is nevertheless feared that there may be a disturbance of existing conditions, unless the Siamese Envoy to King Edward's coronation, who is to call at Paris on his return home, has been authorized to make the concessions asked for by France.

So far Siam has been almost entirely under the influence of Great Britain, which has furnished her with officers for her army and miniature navy, and given her advisers and administrators from the Indian Civil Service. Some changes, however, are going on not altogether to the liking of the French Government. Japanese military and naval officers are taking the places of the British, which gives color to the belief that Japan is assuming a responsibility of which Great Britain divested itself when Lord Lansdowne, in his recent speech on foreign relations, announced that his government did not propose to interfere in the Franco-Siamese dispute.

It remains to be seen whether this new turn of events may check the forward policy of the French Government in Siam, to which it is generally understood that M. Doumer, the ex-Governor General of Indo-China, who has just returned to France, wishes to commit it. M. Doumer during his term of office proved himself a successful and brilliant administrator, and is credited with the ambition to give to France a great Asiatic empire, and in pursuit of his object is ready, Mr. Rivett-Carnac seems to think, to create an opportunity for annexing all the provinces not guaranteed to Siam by the convention of 1893.

This he would avert by an extension of the terms of that convention to all territory now recognized as belonging to Siam, but before doing so would ascertain whether France is in the least likely to agree to it, otherwise the interests of Siam must be best safeguarded by not raising the question.

In any case, much interest attaches to the next move of the French Government as it is known that it has the full support of that of Russia in its Indo-Chinese policy. The question is, What part is Japan really playing in it?

LIVE ASHBURNHAM LOCALS

Bits of News from the Village Over the Otonabee River

—Everybody in Ashburnham reads The Times.

—The Council has struck the rate for the year, amounting to 17 mills for Protestant and a shade over 16 1-2 mills for Roman Catholic ratepayers.

—The lift lock is a great attraction for visitors from a distance. Every day there are scores here to see it.

—Mr. George Stevens, the junk man, is in a heap of trouble. George is out after the dough, and is not particular how he gets it, so long as it comes. He will have to move out into the country somewhere if the Board of Health gets after him in a dead beat. As it now stands he will have to abate the smell around his place, as the Board of Health is mad all the way through.

—There passed away on Wednesday last Mrs. David Rumming, aged 81 years. The deceased lady was highly esteemed and greatly beloved by all who knew her. The funeral will leave the family residence, Monroe avenue, this afternoon at two o'clock.

—Will The Times tell its readers why all this monkey business in connection with the Street Railway is permitted. Surely the Council of Peterborough are intelligent men, and can see that the franchise is being hawked about the country. The proposal to grant an extension on payment to the town of $5,000 is a move in the right direction. When the company comes to Ashburnham to get its franchise, there will be no nonsense permitted. Our Mayor Smith will see that the people have a show or no franchise will be granted.

A Free Nerve Tonic

Will not act so much directly upon the nerves as upon the digestive functions and the abundant formation of red, vitalizing blood. Nerves can't be fed on medicine. They can, however, be restored and strengthened by assimilated food. The marvelous action of Ferrozone arises from its action upon the digestive and assimilative processes. When you take Ferrozone the blood is purified, strengthened, and grows rich and red. Then you grow vigorous, healthy and beautiful, ready for work because you have the strength to do it. No tonic for the brain, blood or nerves compares with Ferrozone. Price 50c., at druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

CAMPBELLFORD'S BOOMER.

MR. J. A. CULVERWELL IS AFTER NEW INDUSTRIES

Interesting Letter Sent to the Council, in which Certain Peterborough Men Get a Hard Crack

Mr. J. Alex Culverwell writes the Council of Campbellford village as follows:

I am authorized by a furniture manufacturing firm which is desirous of locating their factory in your town to enter into negotiations with your Council with a view to the establishment of their business here and I desire you to arrange for the calling of a special meeting of your council at which I wish to be present in the course of the next few days, on my return from Toronto. This firm desires to secure exemption from taxes except school taxes and the lease of the now vacant mill near the waterworks station in your town at a nominal rental of $1 per annum for thirty years. Similar concessions to these have been granted to manufacturers by a great many towns in this province of late, and in several cases, a cash bonus has been given as well.

You will of course readily understand that under the present high discriminating freight rates prevailing in Campbellford owing to the lack of railway competition it is a difficult matter to bring manufacturers here even though your town has such an abundance of idle water power. I trust Gentlemen that in the interests of Campbellford you will give this matter your serious and favorable consideration. I consider this a proper time to initiate the work of the development of the splendid water power in this district and it is for the Council now to say whether Campbellford is to stand still or progress, as without manufacturing this water power is valueless except for "washing the rocks." As you no doubt are aware I have purchased important parts of the Healey Falls water power and also parts of the Crow Bay water power for the Company I am now organizing to be known as the Trent River Power & Railway Company with its Head Office at Campbellford. It is the intention of this Company to build an electric line to connect the C.P.R. at Havelock with Healey Falls and Campbellford, and to develop the powers along the Trent River adjacent to Campbellford for the purpose of attracting manufacturers to this town. Our intention is to build up Campbellford and not to transmit this electric power to Peterboro as we have heard a rival Peterboro and Lakefield organization, who have purchased small parts of the Healey Falls power intended to do if this community will permit them. Trusting to have an immediate reply to my address, No 1 Toronto st., Toronto.

MORGANATIC MARRIAGES

A special despatch to our highly esteemed contemporary the Gazette, quotes the Paris Matin as announcing that the German Crown Prince has bestowed his affections upon Miss Gladys Deacon, and adding: "Miss Deacon told Prince Frederick William that she would never consent to a morganatic alliance and if he desired to marry her a religious legal ceremony would be necessary." There is not the slightest possibility that the Crown Prince will be permitted to contract a morganatic marriage; but if he should do so the union would be perfectly respectable and legal, and the ceremony may be as religious as the happy couple want to make it. The chief drawback to a morganatic marriage is that the wife does not share her husband's rank, and that the children, though legitimate, do not inherit either rank or fortune from the father. In the case of the Crown Prince there would be the further drawback that he would have to renounce the succession to the throne. However, everything is getting "Morganized" in Europe now, so why not the royal marriages?

THE NILE DAM AT ASSOUAN

The great Nile dam at Assouan is done, and by means of it it is estimated that from 600,000 to 1,000,000 additional acres of land, now desert, can be brought under cultivation and that 5,000,000 acres more, which are in a fair state of cultivation, will be made far more productive. The level of the river above the dam will be raised sixty-six feet, creating a lake one hundred and forty-four miles long and impounding, it is estimated a billion tons of water. This in the dry season of the year, will be allowed to flow through the great sluice gates in the dam so as to maintain the height of the river below it, and thus equalize its flow throughout the seasons By this means it is thought that wide areas of country will be enabled to bear two crops a year instead of one. The dam is six thousand feet long, is bedded on the solid rocks which form the first cataract of the Nile and is built up of cut stone from quarries which, it is believed, furnished the material for the construction of the temple of Philae. Many of the blocks are said to bear the marks of the wedges used three thousand years ago. Around the dam and cataract a canal has been built with numerous locks to allow the passage of the river steamers. This great work has given employment during the last eighteen months to sixteen thousand laborers, mostly Egyptians. There is a subsidiary dam at Assuit. The contract called for the completion of both works within five years from July 1, 1898, and it is now expected that everything will be finished by the end of the present year. The contractors are to be paid £4,500,000 in installments extending over a period of thirty years.

The English have done many good things for Egypt, and this Nile dam is one of the best, if not the best.

Testing It For Herself.

He watched her arranging the violets in the big Kakiri bowl.

She looked so very pretty, and yet she must be told.

Lighting a cigarette, he braced himself for the telling. As he tossed the match in the direction of the blazing fire, she came toward him, holding in her hand a few of the purple flowers.

"For you," she said, simply, and pressed close to his side as she put them in his buttonhole.

After that she bent and kissed him, slowly and deliberately. He sat transfixed. In all their platonics her lips had never before touched his.

Ere he could recover himself she kissed him again.

Not a word nor a caress accompanied either kiss. They stood out against a background of utter incomprehensibility.

Then she walked over by the fire. He looked anxiously after her.

She faced about, and he saw that her lips were moving slightly, while her eyes had a far-off gaze.

At last she spoke.

"You can marry her!"

There was a pause—she seemed to be indulging in further meditation—and then—

"Yes, you can marry her. I don't care at all. You — I kissed you on purpose. I did it twice to make sure, and I didn't feel even the faintest quiver either time. I was very careful, and tasted each kiss thoroughly, and I know now that—that you can marry her."

He rose, his form and his rage towering together. What man could be calm on learning that his lips possess no power to thrill?

"Good-bye," he said, putting out his hand.

"Good-bye," she answered, smiling.

He went out, and the door closed behind him.

She stood where he left her, banding her clasped fingers across her eyes. The sunlight streamed in between the window arches and shot a ray of glory over the violets, the woman and the woman's yellow hair. It caused the diamonds on her hand to sparkle brilliantly, and something on her cheek shone too.

"Dear heaven!" she murmured, softly, "what must it be to have him do the kissing!"

A High-Class Mining Investment

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital — AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY

Whose Entire Plant is Now Under Roof. | of CENTRAL CITY, COLORADO

PRODUCTION OF 200 TONS PER DAY

185 Tons Milling Ore, $12.00, Net $10.00..............................$1,850
15 Tons Smelting Ore, average $80.00 (less transportation and smelting charges $10.00, $70.00 being low average....Profit $1,050

$2,900 PER DAY, 350 DAYS

This is over 20 per cent. on the capital $5,000,000 at par, and at present selling price of 75 cents per share amounts to over 27 per cent. The above is one third of the capacity. Full capacity—600 tons in 24 hours—would make these figures three times as great. Total amount to be raised fully guaranteed. This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having sums to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1 00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

Passing of the Artificial Flower.

"Harper's Weekly."

For the last hundred years artificial flowers have been the dearest decoration a woman could buy for her summer hat. The superlative has a double meaning in this connection — "dear" to feminine pursestrings, immeasurably satisfying to her sense of the artistic and appropriate. No one, not even the most logical man, could deny the daintiness of the instinct that led women to bedeck their multitudinous heads with copies of the sweetest things Divinity sets down upon this rolling ball. So it was that all these years, from her palace in the center of her kingdom, Fashion each spring sent out her unassailable decree that flowers were to deck hats.

At first the word "artificial" was always used in speaking or writing of linen or silk posies. Old "fashion items" contain many allusions to "artificial roses," "artificial lilies-of-the-valley,"—always to impress upon the reader that real flowers were not meant. Of late years the adjective has been almost entirely eliminated from the dictionary of the writer who dishes up modish delicacies. Nowadays, a hat is trimmed with "violets;" a boa is of "forget-me-nots." No woman—and not often a man—is so ignorant as to imagine anything else but artificial flowers is meant.

The making of these beautiful imitations of Nature's handiwork became a vast enterprise employing the skilled labor of thousands of men, women, and girls. In many parts of the world the trade of artificial-flower-making descended from mother to daughter. Whole families for generations cut, pasted, stitched and colored the beautiful evidences of their skill.

Until recent years the aim was always to make artificial flowers successful counterfeits of Nature's own darlings. Every one knows that the work was often done so ably as to defy the eye's discernment. At this time the art of artificial flower-making attained its highest perfection. The more faithful the likeness of the imitations to the originals the better the pay of the maker, and the greater the stimulation to effort.

Then came a creeping in of the grotesque and unnatural. Now and then Queen Fashion sent out edicts establishing the position of green roses, red lilacs, purple carnations, and all sorts of inartistic, even ugly, effects in artificial flowers. The unending search for novelty began it. Newness, no matter how unseemly, appeals to most people for a time. Then comes a reaction, when the full commonness of a popular fancy strikes people, and they put the whole, good and bad, aside for a period of dormancy. When the imitation blossoms of fantastic proportions and bald ugliness came to be the style, artificial-flower-making was a doomed industry. Milliners looked about for some artistic and new substitute. The hat itself, which from our great-grandmother's time down had been a thing of shape only, offered great possibilities for ingenious ideas. About three years ago fancy braids began to flood the market; wire frames were made with greater care than ever; all sorts of fantastic and beautiful effects were brought out in straw hats, which needed no extra adornment other than a trifle of ribbon, chiffon, or lace—and artificial flowers went off Fifth avenue to dwell among the folk who live on the outermost edge of Queen Fashion's realm, and read her royal mandates through poverty's spectacles.

Last year there were more fancy straws, and dozens of carefully planned shapes in hats, and this season the demand for the new straws has driven many dealers in artificial flowers out of business.

Railroad Search-Lights.

One of the recent safety equipments of the fast mail-trains, which of necessity run at a high rate of speed through the night, is the electric search-light. A number of engines on the leading roads have been supplied with such powerful search-lights that objects on the track can be seen nearly a mile away on the darkest nights. A small dynamo in the engine supplies the light, and the lamp itself is so arranged that the fireman can operate it from his position in the cab to suit the needs of the moment. It was found that a permanent light attached to the smoke-stack, as the old-time reflectors were, would cast its path of light off the track instead of on it when rounding curves. The fireman can now touch a lever and throw the light straight ahead, sideways, or up in the air. The largest of these locomotive search-lights are 6,000 candle-power, which, compared to the old-time reflectors, are remarkable products of the age.

The fast mail-trains travel over the ground so rapidly that an ordinary head-light casting a reflection four or five hundred feet is practically of little use. It might reveal to the engineer trouble ahead, but it could never help to avert the accident. The engineer might be able to shut off steam and apply the brakes, but by that time the engine would be upon the object. It is almost impossible for one of the fast trains to come to a dead stop much inside of 1,200 to 1,500 feet, and the heavier and faster the train, the greater length of time must elapse before a stop can be effected. Consequently, the old head-lights were of little real value to trains running fifty and sixty miles an hour. With the new powerful electric search-light, however, danger ahead can be seen in ample time for the engineer to bring his heavy train to a dead halt. As a safety equipment of the record-breaking trains, the search-light has thus become a necessity of the day.

ing unable to get out is enough to drive me mad."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Sistra Leigh, impatiently. "You might ask that, with a better grace, if you had not lost control of yourself and alarmed the house last night. I must lock the door. But ring if your nerves get the better of you again, and I will come."

I had listened eagerly to this discussion, for I divined that the invalid's request had been as much with a view to my convenience as his own. But I was hardly disappointed that his appeal should have been in vain. When I had learnt the secret—if he could be induced to tell it—I must make the best of the situation I had created for myself. At all events, this game that I was bent on playing was more than worth the candle it would cost. And—sufficient for the hour was the evil thereof!

She went out and closed the door, locking it with a certain ostentatiousness. At the sound, despite my resolution, I felt a slight sinking of the heart. For it was not pleasant to think of being shut up for an indefinite period with that ghastly-faced, hollow-eyed creature, who might be—probably was—to a certain extent a madman. But I had chosen; and I must now abide by my decision.

I waited until I was sure that the woman in black must be out of hearing, and then I stepped from between the curtains.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Secret.

"When did Ermyntrude die?" the man demanded of me, abruptly, as soon as our eyes met.

I answered as concisely: "In April. One night your sister came and took her away from the theater, where she and I had gone. When she came back to the hotel where we were staying she was very ill. She tried to tell me something, to give me some directions, which I couldn't understand. And in a few moments she was dead."

"That night!" the man whispered, beneath his breath. "It was that night! Then—I am her murderer." His great eyes stared past me into space.

I was faintly conscious of a growing pity for him. "The doctor I called in told me that her heart must have been weak for a long time," I said, more gently.

"Her heart was weak!" he echoed. "Poor Ermyntrude! Poor tortured soul! And to think that it was I who tortured her through all those years. O Heaven! If I could only be sure that she knew now how I had suffered, that through it all I suffered as much as she."

"Perhaps she does know," I said.

"You—what do you know of it all?" he demanded, almost with scorn.

"I only know," I returned, "that she was never happy—never since I can begin to remember anything. And my memory goes back to the time when I was a tiny child—seventeen years perhaps. Now I am more than eighteen. It was on my birthday that she died."

"That awful night!" he exclaimed, more to himself than to me.

"She loved me, I think, and was always good," I went on. "But her moods were often strange. Sometimes she used to be stern with me when I could not tell what I had done that was wrong. Sometimes she would load me with presents and kindnesses; and again, perhaps in the same hour, she would seem to feel it a sin that I should be happy."

"She was thinking of the boy," the man among the pillows muttered, with a sigh that was like a stifled sob.

"The boy who died?" I finished the sentence for him. "Perhaps. She never spoke of him to me, never once. But Roger told me."

The invalid raised himself on his elbow and stared.

"What did Roger tell?"

"Only that the little boy died in some very sad and painful way; he did not say how. I always thought that he was my little brother, who died years before I was born. But after my mother—I mean, after Lady Cope—died, Roger told me that I was not her daughter. That she had only adopted me because she had lost first her little boy, whom she adored, then her husband, and had no one in the world to love."

"No one in the world to love!" he drearily repeated. "Yes, that's true, that's true. And to think that it was all through me. O Heaven! The horror of it! No wonder if these years of remorse have driven me to the verge of madness."

He was babbling on, with broken, inarticulate self-accusations, while I asked myself: "Is this the secret? Am I shut up not only with a madman but a murderer?"

"Is it possible that you killed the child!" The thought spoke itself.

"She thought that," he said, chokingly. "She thought so—until that night."

"Until the night of her death?"

He bowed his head for answer.

"And then—then she knew that it was not so?"

"She knew that it was not so. But the truth—it was the truth that struck her down. Shall I ever forget the look in her eyes when she cried out that what I had done was worse than murder—that she could forgive me sooner if I had killed the child in my passion for revenge? Heavens! How the look has haunted me! It's driving me mad. I can see her now as she rushed to the fireplace and held the poker among the coals till it was red hot, then, tearing away her sleeve she burnt out the scar, the one link that was left to bind us together. I can see her now, as if—as if—she stood there!" and he pointed a shaking hand towards the empty fireplace.

Involuntarily my eyes followed its direction. So strangely had his words and the horror in his eyes moved me that I half expected to see my adopted mother's spirit there, pale, beautiful, dressed as her body had been on the night of "The Bells."

As the vision came to me, growing in my brain as it grew in his, I did indeed seem to see her, exactly as she had been at the theater. I could see her eyes, black as wells of darkness, and hear her murmur: "I wish we had chosen another play for your birthday. The face of Mathias reminds me of someone I used to know."

I had only to look at this man's face to be certain who that someone must have been. I shuddered. She herself had burnt out the scar, if I could believe his word, burnt it out that the last link might be destroyed between her and a man she deemed to have sinned beyond murder and beyond pardon.

Once again he turned to me as the vision passed. "Did she speak of me when she was dying?" he inquired.

A Case of Appendicitis

James Callahan, who was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital a few days ago, suffering from appendicitis, was operated on by Dr. Halliday, assisted by Dr. McNulty. The patient, who is only fifteen years of age, is doing nicely.

Complimentary to the Choir

The choir of All Saints' Church were yesterday given a trip to Jubilee Point and return, on the North Star, by Rev. Mr. Armitage, the popular rector of that church. A delightful time was spent, all enjoying the outing thoroughly.

Men for the Shanties

Mr. George J. Chalmers is shipping a large gang of men to the woods on Saturday from Peterborough, for Edmund Hall, the well known lumberman. He still requires a large number, and those in the lumber business would do well to see Mr. Chalmers to-day. He pays the highest wages going.

Sneak Thieves on Lake Street

The residents in the south end of the town are complaining of being molested by parties stealing plants and other ornaments that decorate the lawn and verandahs of their residences. A few weeks ago Mrs. Robt. Boys, of 139 Lake street, had two plants stolen, and yesterday a valuable shell was taken from the verandah. The parties who took the shell are known, and if the same is not returned, the names will be handed to the chief.

Nervous and Sleepless

There is just one cure and that is plenty of food for the blood and nerves, which is best supplied in Ferrozone, than which no blood builder, nerve tonic or strength producer is better. Ferrozone promotes healthy digestion, which results in improved nutrition. The blood grows rich and furnishes stability to the entire system, and the store of nerve force and energy increases daily. A rebuilding of the constitution, new spirits, health and strength all come from the use of Ferrozone. This marvelous renovator is sold by all Druggists for 50c. a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

ANTI-PROHIBITION LECTURE

In a Few Words Delivered at the Snowden House

At the Snowden House the other night there was a warm discussion on prohibition. The genial proprietor and a traveller was arguing the pros and cons with great vigour. At last, in desperation, the former wound up in this way:

Water! What caused the death of every human being in this world except Noah and his family? Water! What wiped out the existence of Pharoh and all his hosts when they followed the Israelites? Water! And where do you find in the Bible anyone calling for it, except the rich man in hades—where he ought to be!

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

A Runaway Team Collides with a Buggy Yesterday Morning

While Mr. Rosborough, of Smith, was driving his team away from McAllister's mill this morning, the horses became frightened and bolted, throwing Mr. Rosborough, and a friend who accompanied him, out. The rig struck another occupied by Mrs. Henry Cox, Ashburnham, and her daughter, Mrs. Weir, and child. Their buggy was also overturned, but fortunately the horse did not get an opportunity to bolt. Not so Mr. Rosborough's team which, breaking away from the buggy, tore madly up Hunter street, and continued at their best clip to the west end of the town before they were brought to a standstill. Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Weir were severely shaken up and frightened, while the child, which was pinned beneath the top of the buggy in the upset, miraculously escaped injury. Mr. Rosborough and his friend shared like good fortune. There were many narrow escapes on Hunter street as the runaway team rushed by.

Singing in the Ears

This is an unfailing sign of catarrh, and if not checked will ultimately result in deafness. The simplest remedy is Catarrhozone, which if inhaled a few times daily, prevents the catarrhal condition from spreading. Catarrhozone quickly stops the ringing in the ears, head noises, gives permanent relief to catarrhal deafness. For Catarrh in any part of the system, Bronchitis, Asthma, Lung or Throat Troubles, Catarrhozone is a specific, and is guaranteed to permanently cure or your money back. DR. O'BRIEN'S RETURNS

CHAPLAIN OF ST. PETER'S T. A. S. RECEIVES A DEMONSTRATION

Met at the Station by Hundreds of People and Presented with an Address in the Cathedral

When the C.P.R. train arrived at the station at 7.30 yesterday evening there were several hundred people waiting on the platform and along George street to welcome back to Peterborough the energetic Chaplain of St. Peter's Total Abstinence society. With the return of Rev. Dr. O'Brien came the banner of the Total Abstinence Union of America, which ha since awarded to this society in competition with over one thousand Total Abstinence societies in the United States and Canada.

A large number of the members of the society met at the rooms on George street about seven o'clock, and marched to the station, headed by the band of 57th Regiment.

At the station the Rev. Doctor was received by several officers of the T.A.S. and the clergy, and escorted to a carriage, after which the procession proceeded to the cathedral. Here he was presented with an address from the society, and in the course of a lengthy reply, thanked those present for the enthusiastic reception, and heartily congratulated the Total Abstinence society on the honor they had won, not alone because it was a material honor, but because it showed the progress the society had made during the past year, and still continues to make. The address from Dr. O'Brien was followed by a few words of encouragement and approval from Bishop O'Connor, after which Benediction was given by His Lordship.

The banner will remain in the cathedral during the coming year, but it is scarcely likely that it will be held for more than one term, as it requires such an immense increase that it would be almost impossible for this parish to supply it.

THE STREET RAILWAY

The $5,000 will Probably be Paid Over and Work Proceed at Once

The action of the Council on Wednesday afternoon in requiring that $5,000 be paid over to the town by the Detroit Construction Company, in order to secure an extension of the terms under which the franchise is granted, will bring matters to a head.

The Times understands that the money will be forthcoming, and that work will probably begin on the road this fall.

It may not be generally known that the Detroit Syndicate has paid over to the old Street Railway Company $5,000 on account of the $30,000 purchase money. Should they not go on this money will be forfeited. The balance, $25,000, is payable before Sept. 1st, together with the $5,000 to the town, which latter sum will be returned after all the conditions are complied with.

Under the new conditions the time for the completion of the road has been changed from Sept. 1st, 1903 to May 1st, 1903.

A BIG SLANDER SUIT

In which the Manager of a Peterborough Company is the Defendant

One of the biggest actions ever taken out in Ontario has been entered by Mr. Taylor McVeity in the High Court of Justice on behalf of the Sapphire Corundum Company, Limited, against Mr. B. A. Craig, of Toronto, for slander and libel. Damages to the extent of $2,000,000 are asked.

The Sapphire Corundum Company is a concern organized within the past year in London, England. It has an authorized capital of $1,000,000, and some of the best financiers in England are said to be interested. The capital has been mostly subscribed. The mines to be worked are in Peterborough county, north of Stony Lake.

B. A. Craig, against whom the suit is directed, is the manager of the Canada Corundum Company. Carling Kelly is Canadian agent for the plaintiff company, and an office is being opened in the Russell Block, Toronto.

MISS M'COLLUM'S POEMS

The Christian Guardian Pays Tribute to Peterborough Talent

The Christian Guardian has the following interesting comment regarding the well-merited reference to one of Peterborough's most talented young ladies:

"Our publishing house announces the forthcoming publication of a volume of poems by Miss Alma Frances McCollum, of Peterborough. The work of the gifted young lady is said to show unusual promise. A competent critic well acquainted with Miss McCollum and the product of her muse, writes of her as a "rarely beautiful soul, a poetic genius, characterized by original conception, delightful fancy, melodious measure and pure, expressive diction." Miss McCollum was born on the shores of Lake Erie, in Kent county, but moved at an early age to Peterborough, where she has since resided. Like the late lamented Isabella Valancy Crawwhere she has since resided. Like the possessed of that pathos and humor ford, she is of Irish parentage, and ters of Erin, and which never fails to touch a vibrant chord in every human breast."

WAGGONER EXTENSION LADDER

A Unique Device That Combines Great Strength with Lightness and Efficiency

The Waggoner Extension Ladder is the handiest thing in the shape of a ladder ever put on the market, and the immense popularity into which it has jumped in the last two or three years vouchsafes for it a permanent position on the Canadian market. Anything that an ordinary ladder is useful for a "Waggoner" is also—and much more so. By the unique application of a high carbon steel wire reinforcement these ladders combine double the strength of the common ladder with only half the weight, and are the safest and handiest thing in the world to use. It is constructed in sections and can thus be used in positions where it is impossible to get an old fashioned ladder, and for picking fruit, house painting—in fact anything that a ladder can be used for, it has no rival. Probably the best proof of its growing popularity is the fact that so far this season the sale shave multiplied by 75 per cent, compared with the same period last year. If you need a ladder for any purpose write the Waggoner Ladder Company, Limited, of London, for their free illustrated catalogue.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—The law offices of Edmison and Dixon are being handsomely refitted.

—Lakefield is among the places recommended by the Grand Master in his annual report presented to the Grand Lodge in Toronto as being ready for the institution of a lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows.

—At the last two meetings of the Peterborough Cheese Board, records were broken in the quantity of cheese boarded. On July 23, 6,001 were boarded, and the record was broken last week when 6,820 were offered. The good pasturage is making the milk plentiful.

—The store of Dixson Bros., Maple Creek, N.W.T., was robbed of $2,000 Tuesday night. No clue to the thieves who went through two feet of brick wall to get at booty, which was in the vault. The firm are well known in Peterborough.

RIVER NOTES

Mr. C. F. Chapell joined the Rochester party at Jubilee Point yesterday.

Mr. A. E. Reynolds, of Denver, Colorado, is one of the guests at the Point, and is a tourist through Canada.

Mr. R. H. Sheppard, who was one of the guests on the pleasant outing held by the choir of All Saints' church to Jubilee Point yesterday, is justly proud of his fine catch of bass.

Among the party aboard the steamer North Star yesterday were Messrs. Myerson and Thos. Ritchie, formerly residents of Peterborough, and at present on a visit from their homes across the line. They left the steamer at Beaufort Bridge in the morning, and when taken aboard on the return trip had an exceptionally fine catch of bass to their credit. The Ritchie brothers are renewing old acquaintances in town.

LOCAL LEGAL

At Osgoode Hall yesterday judgment in the following case of local interest was given. The report says:

Wason v. Douglas — Judgment (H.) in action for damages for trespass and for injunction restraining defendant from further trespassing on plaintiff's land, part of lot 12, in the first concession of the township of Dummer, in the county of Peterborough. Both plaintiff and defendant derive title from a common grantor; their respective paper titles are undisputed. The main question is as to the boundary line between the land of each party. Held, that the middle of the creek or stream called the Blind River is the true and correct southerly limit or boundary of the plaintiff's land, and that such limit runs along the middle of the most southerly of the said channels at high-water mark. Judgment for plaintiff for $5 and costs. Thirty days stay. G. H. Watson, K.C., and G. Edmison, K.C., for plaintiffs. E. B. Edwards, K.C., for defendant.

NATURE'S FACING
FOR HORSE COLLARS.

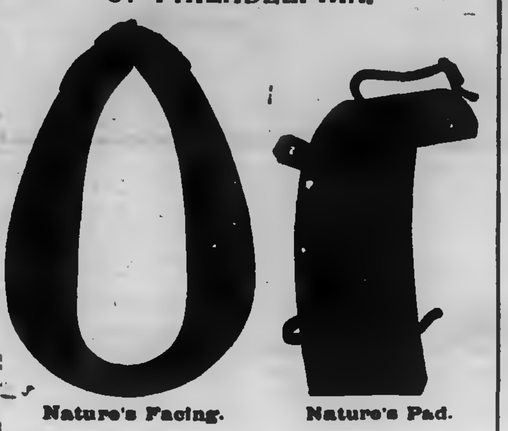
THE AMERICAN
INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO.,
OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 33,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most staple kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 10,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the next 10,000 Shares will be sold at Two Dollars Per Share, and the third 10,000 Shares at Two Dollars and One-Half Per Share. After which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the prices stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent., 15 per cent. and 12 1-2 per cent. on the investment, according to the allotment secured.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

We call your attention to the fact that the 30 per cent. interest only applies to the first 10,000 shares, and as considerable of this has already been sold, the balance will shortly be taken, so in order to secure the same and be on the ground floor send your subscriptions at once.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
100 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM HALPEN, GREEN & CO.

Wholesale Grocers, Nos. 12 S. Front St. and 17 Letitia St.
Philadelphia, December 28th, 1901.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours, truly,
HALPEN, GREEN AND CO.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well. Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

THE FUTURE RELATIONS WITH THE BOERS

Paris Figaro Says that They Do Right to Accept Britain's Outstretched Hand

Jewels Worn by Queen to be Placed on Sale—A Great Opportunity for Wives of American Millionaires

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 15.—The Times says: "Many elaborate descriptions have been printed this week of the crown which the Archbishop of York placed on the head of Queen Alexandra in Westminster Abbey last Saturday, but the fact has hitherto not been revealed that all the diamonds in it except the famous Koh-i-noor will soon be placed on sale. The wives of American millionaires may therefore deck themselves with diamonds placed on the head of Queen Alexanandra. As the crown will not be used again, when it is put among the other regalia in the Tower of London, its 3,688 stones will be displaced by paste jewels. The diamonds, some of which weigh 17 karats each, and some of which are small, were collected by the Carringtons, the Regent street jewelers, none except the Koh-i-noor belong to the State. The King and Queen can scarcely afford to keep in their possession such a bauble, worth, as it is, several hundred thousand pounds, and they have given the jewellers authority to sell the stones. Each will be sold with a guarantee that it was used in the Queen's crowning.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 15.—In regard to the King's gift to the nation of Osborne House, which is highly appreciated, the fact, says the Times, must still be borne in mind that by making the present His Majesty rids himself of a white elephant, because he does not like the place, and never intended to use it as a residence. It transpires that last year he suggested to Lord Salisbury that the nation buy Osborne House at a fair price and use it as a hospital or sanitarium, but Lord Salisbury replied that it was impossible, owing to the condition of British finances at the time. The King wanted to use the proceeds of the sale in order to build in his favorite Norfolkshire, but since then he has heeded the counsel of his friends, and has made a gift of Osborne House, for the admirable purpose to which it is well suited, ridding himself of the great cost of its maintenance and performing a benevolent act at the same time.

London, Aug. 15.—The Brussels correspondent of the Times says that he is requested to deny in an unqualified manner the statement that Wessels, Fischer, and Wolmarens are going to Southampton to try to persuade Botha, Dewet and Delarey to refuse British hospitality and to involve them in the Hollander campaign. It is equally untrue that it is proposed to send a Dutch vessel to the Solent to intercept the generals. It is the general opinion in Brussels that the Boer generals wish to collect funds for the assistance of their countrymen and to sound the British Colonial Office as to the return of certain members of the Boer party to South Africa.

Cape Town despatch to the Times says that the first train de luxe from Buluwayo arrived yesterday, having completed the journey in 74 hours.

London, Aug. 16.—The pro-Boer agency, says the Paris correspondent of the Times, asserts that Kruger does not acquiesce in the present conditions in South Africa and refuses to ask for leave to return there.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 16.—Apropos of Emperors William's telegram to the Prince Regent of Bavaria, says the Vienna correspondent of the Times, The Wiener Allegemeine Zeitung publishes an article headed, "The Telegraph Mania." The paper says that the Emperor's advisors ought to keep him as far as possible from the facilities for telegraphing, and provide lightning conductors, which would prevent the flashes so easily drawn from the imperial mind by every passing event, and from causing panic and confusion in public life. That would be of advantage, not only to Germany, but to the Emperor himself, who betakes himself to the wire whenever he is gratified or irritated, amused or saddened. The despatch is sent off in the twinkling of an eye, but the task of remedying the consequent evil is extremely slow. The paper remarks that the famous telegram to Kruger after the Jameson raid was followed by the adventure of Lord Roberts with the order of the Black Eagle.

London, Aug. 16.—A despatch from Melbourne to the Times says: The threat by the railroad men to strike if the Victorian Parliament adopts the Government's retrenchments proposals has caused excitement. The men's representatives were truculent but became more moderate though the threat was not withdrawn. The Ministers refused to consider overtures for a compromise until the threat was withdrawn. A latter despatch from the Times correspondent says that the men's delegates find they cannot rely for support on the Opposition, and it is believed that they have agreed, after a conference with the Ministers of Railways, to recommend the men to accept the Government's proposals, hoping for a favorable consideration later.

London, Aug. 16.—A despatch from Odessa to the Times says that M. Mamontoff, the "Russian Railway King," has projected the construction of a railway joining the existing Siberian railway with the Tashken Turkestan line, Tomsk being the head of the new line. The country through which the line would pass is quite unopened and rich in minerals. If the line is constructed it will be possible to open communication by the Rivers Tyme and Obi with the Arctic Ocean, and ultimately even to join the Arctic Ocean and the Persian Gulf by rail.

London, Aug. 16.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says that the Victor Hugo fetes began yesterday at Besancon, the poet's birthplace, and will continue several days.

Special to The Times

London, Aug. 15.—In an article quoted by the correspondent of the Times, Figaro discusses the future relations between the British and the Boers. The paper says that Great Britein's attitude toward the burghers possesses certain nobleness. Her admiration for heroism is sufficiently strong to cause her to open her arms and heart to the superb vanquished Boers, who do right to accept her outstretched hands. The Boers and British having the same religious faith and sentiment, are in duty bound to understand one another. If the Boers agree to be received as brothers, it is because they think the war has been loyally fought, and feel that there is no question of crushing them, but that the intention is to cultivate their pride.

SEEKING NATIVE LABOR FOR THE AMERICAN MINES

Agents Penetrate Mozambique and Central Africa, Looking for Men

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 16—The Times correspondent at Johannesburg says the agents of the native labor association, which is trying to supply native laborers for the mines and other industries in South Africa, have proceeded to the northern limits of Mozambique and to Central Africa, and that as soon as arrangement is made between the association and the [illegible] in this district recruiting will begin on organized lines. About [illegible] natives have already been procured and these were awaiting a boat to take them to Delagoa Bay, when a Portuguese warship appeared, and a party was sent ashore from the vessel to round up a few natives. By mistake some of the natives engaged in the association were taken, which caused a stampede among the others. It will take some time to correct the bad impression which these made on the natives. The correspondent says that no press gang methods have been employed by the association. At present there are [illegible] natives working in the mines, as against [illegible] before the Boer war.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM

A Writ Issued Against Geo. W. Brown, of Athens, for Breach of Promise and Seduction

Special to The Times.

Brockville, Aug. 16—On Thursday last Deputy Sheriff Traill, of Brockville, served upon Geo. W. Brown, a prominent resident of Athens, a High Court writ for payment of a claim for damages to the amount of $3,000. The writ was issued from the High Court of Justice at Picton at the instance of Miss Stone, by her attorney, E. M. Young, and charges Brown with breach of promise of marriage and seduction. T. Stone, her father is a nurseryman baker, who formerly worked in Athens, where Brown became acquainted with the plaintiff.

Naturally this case is attracting a great deal of attention in Athens, where both parties are well known. Brown is a widower of about sixty years of age, while Miss Stone is but a young girl. Brown has for many years held official positions in Athens and the county of Leeds. He has long been a county constable, and is also a bailiff in the Ninth Division Court. It is alleged that he has visited Brockville with the plaintiff and that they were at the Pan-American fair at Buffalo at the same time.

BITTER HATE EXISTS FOR PAUL KRUGER

Among the Boers who were Prisoners on Bermuda

WHO WOULD LIKE TO KILL HIM

Merchant Says the Ex-President Would Run Risk of His Life if he Went Back

Special to The Times.

Montreal, August 15—Mr. L. B. Harnett, of Hamilton, Bermuda, junior member of W. T. James & Co., the largest wholesale grocery and provision firm of Bermuda is in the city in company with his son and brother He is in Canada buying for this firm and for the purpose of extending trade relations between the Dominion and the island.

In an interview Mr. Harnett stated that trade between Canada and Bermuda was not so great as it should be. The business men of the island were anxious to handle Canadian goods, for the standard was fully equal to the American, but their prices prohibited it. In consequence most of Bermuda's trade came from New York, though a great deal of the merchandise was really Canadian shipped through by that route from Ontario, on account of cheaper rates, and not credited to Canada.

Mr Harnett's firm established branch stores on the prison camps of the Boers on the island, and he had exceptional opportunity of meeting with the Boer leaders. Nearly all of Steyn's staff were among the prisoners — General Wessels, General Cronje, Field Cornet Steyn, Mr. Brian (President Steyn's private secretary), Attorney General De Villiers and Commandant Nolan being among the Free State prisoners.

These men have often assured him, he said, that they were averse to the war, but were drawn into it be feeling bound in honor to support the struggling people of their own kin. They welcomed peace with as much enthusiasm as the British, and he was positive that they would become good subjects of the Empire.

"The feeling among the burghers is very strong against Kruger. I am convinced that were he to return to his own people he would be assassinated by some of the war's sufferers," said Mr. Harnett.

Only about 450 of the 4,000 prisoners had left for home when Mr. Harnett sailed from Bermuda on July 5. One hundred of these were officers, who left as private passengers, and 350 sailed in a ship that was provided. They were treated and quartered during their imprisonment, "far better than Tommy Atkins," said Mr. Harnett.

Two hundred of the number were children between 8 and 16 years of age but they could shoot all right. Most of them were caught herding cattle in rear of a force composed of their fathers and brothers and were brought along as prisoners with them All those whose guardians did not object were taught in schools established in the camps, and where they learned trades of various sorts.

"I find the Boers to be straight, intelligent and industrious," said Mr. Harnett. "Some of the older ones are very conservtive in their ideas and opposed to education, holding that what was good enough for them to prosper with is good enough for their children. But this feeling is being dissipated, and the younger generation will be first-class citizens."

Canada's Wonderful Development

Boston, Aug. 16—The Herald of this city, in a leading editorial on Canada says:

Canada is showing a wonderful enterprise in self-development. One sign of it is the projected fast steamship lines across the Atlantic in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway. Another is the projected new transcontinental railway, paralleling the present one, but far northward of it, so that as regards local business at any rate, they will hardly be competitors. There is a great West of Canada which is rapidly filling up with settlers. Thousands have emigrated to it from the United States during the present year, and thousands more have come from Great Britain. The new railway line is designed to encourage this population. Starting from Port Simpson, on the Pacific, it will go through the Pine or the Peace River pass, through the Peace River district in Athabasca, thence southward across the northeastern corner of Saskatchewan, passing north of Lake Winnipeg, through the district of Keewatin and Northern Ontario to Moose Factory, on James' Bay, through Northern Quebec to Chicoutimi, with extensions to Montreal and Quebec, and branches to Winnipeg and Toronto. Many of these names are strange to our people now, but they are likely to become familiar before the century gets old.

KITCHENER'S ESTIMATE OF BRITISH GENERALS

He Gives a Report on the Men who Served in South Africa

His Tribute to the Soldiers Who Fought the Battles of the Empire

Lord Methuen's Praises Sounded with General French as Second

London, Aug. 16—Lord Kitchener has closed his work in South Africa with a tribute to those—civilians and soldiers, who during his command rendered him "kind assistance or loyal service." Lord Kitchener adds that "notwithstanding all my care, there must necessarily be a proportion of officers omitted who have rendered equal, or even better service than those who have been mentioned. This however, is the fortune of war, and will, I am sure, be well understood by the army I have been so proud to command."

Here is a notable tribute:

"I find it difficult in the short space at my disposal to acknowledge the deep obligation of the army in South Africa to the governments of Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Cape Colony and Natal. I will only say here that no request of mine was ever refused by any of these governments, and that their consideration and generosity were only equaled by the character and quality of the troops they sent to South Africa, or raised in that country."

Next comes the list of fighting generals:

Lord Methuen "has done more than most officers towards maintaining throughout this campaign, the high standard for personal courage, modesty and humanity which characterise the British army. I share his own deep regret that his wounds have prevented him from remaining in the field until the conclusion of peace."

Major-Gen. French "has had a most difficult task to carry out. His willingness to accept responsibility, and his bold and sanguine disposition have relieved me from many anxieties, and, after I had appointed him to conduct the territories of the late republics."

Lieut.-Gen. Tucker: "I am indebted to this officer, who has never feared responsibility, or failed in giving emphatic pronouncement to the good common sense of which he is possessed."

Lieut.-Gen. Lyttelton "has latterly commanded in Natal, and I am sure that in his new position he will deal with the many important administrative questions which must now arise in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony to the satisfaction of all concerned."

Major-Gen. C. E. Knox "has given me satisfaction and has carried out his responsible duties with ability and discretion."

Col. Clements is possessed of fine soldierly qualities, which his misfortunes have rather served to accentuate than to obscure."

Col. Stephenson: "Excellent officer who has displayed good sense, wherever he has been employed."

Major-Gen. F. W. Kitchener: "Exceptionally hard and energetic officer, who has done good service."

Col. Maxwell "has an energetic mind and a sound judgement, which, coupled with his kindly and considerate disposition, have enabled him to render valuable service."

Major-Gen. Hamilton "is possessed of qualities of boldness, energy, and resolution in no common degree."

Col. Elliott "worked hard, and with some measure of success."

Major-Gen. Settle, "has rendered valuable service in the difficult position of G.O.C., Cape Colony. I have every cause to feel grateful to him for the judgment and tact which he has displayed when dealing with the innumerable difficult questions which have arisen in connection with the administration of martial law and other kindred matters."

Major-Gen. Wilson "did useful work and showed considerable capacity for organization."

Col. Plumer "throughout the campaign has invariably displayed military qualifications of a very high order. Few officers have rendered better service."

Col. Spens has proved himself on many occasions a reliable brigadier."

Col. Little. "has proved himself a capable leader of mounted troops in the field."

Col. Kekewich "has throughout this long campaign maintained his high reputation as a fine soldier of character, loyalty and discretion. He is well qualified to hold high command."

Col. Rochfort "is fearless of responsibility, never makes difficulties, and has I think, all the qualifications for a leader in the field."

Col. Park "is a deserving officer, and has done good service throughout the campaign."

Col. Scobell "is a cavalry leader of ability and resolution."

Col. Rimington "is a leader of mounted troops, who is particularly well qualified for the conduct of special and independent raids or enterprises. His knowledge of the theater of operations, his energy and his soldierly instincts have enabled him to render exceptional services."

Col. Barker, "excellent column commander, ready to take responsibility, and to disregard unnecessary details."

Col. Byng, "an ideal commander of an irregular corps."

Col. Sir H. Rawlinson "possesses the qualities of staff officer and column commander in the field. His characteristics will always ensure him a front place in whatever he sets his mind to." Lieut.-Col. Thorneycroft* "an absolutely reliable officer of great experience, common sense and force of character."

Lieut.-Col. Allenby, "a popular and capable cavalry brigadier."

Lieut.-Col Haig "is, in my opinion, one of the most thoughtful and best educated of our cavalry officers in his own rank. He has shown considerable skill in handling men in the field."

Lieut. Wing, "has a reputation for boldness and dash. He has rendered good service."

Capt de Lisle "is an officer of remarkable force of character. He has soldierly qualities, and is a fine leader."

*Col. Thorneycroft was, it will be recollected, placed in command of Spion Kop over the head of Sir Charles Warren and gave the order to retire.

Col. Park led the charge of the Devons on Wagon Hill.

ENORMOS LOSSES IN FINANCIAL BUBBLE

A HUNDRED MILLION WASTED IN LONDON AND GLOBE

Petition in Circulation on the Stock Exchange, and Signed by Many Influential Men, Demanding the Prosecution of Whitaker Wright

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 16—The official receiver announces that he has issued summonses against Whitaker Wright and Robert Leman to recover $750,000 in connection with share transactions between the British-America corporation and the failed London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited. In the same report the receiver says that for the present it is not proposed to prosecute the directors of the London and Globe Company for misfeasance.

The city, however, is displaying the deepest interest in the London and Globe group of companies and the demand that the public prosecutor act is increasing the public prosecutor act is increasingly insistent. A special petition has been circulated on the Stock Exchange, and signed by many influential men, demanding the prosecution of Whitaker Wright, as it is considered that the credit of the city and the Stock Exchange demands a thorough investigation of the London and Globe methods of Finance. Probably the full extent of the money lost to the public by the company will never be known, but financial experts now estimate it at upward of $100,000,000. The flotations for which Wright was responsible aggregated 41, with the enormous capital of $111,775,000, and with few exceptions, all these companies are either in liquidation, have been absorbed or are defunct. What the shareholders will receive from the crash may be imagined from the announcement that the creditors of the London and Globe will receive only 5 per cent, and that nothing remains for the shareholders.

COFFINS WASHED AWAY

The Heavy Rains Strip a Graveyard of 40 Bodies

Special to The Times.

Madison, N.J. Aug. 16—The cloudburst last night caused devastation in Hillside Cemetery. About 75 caskets were uncovered by the rushing waters and many of them were swept from the graves in which they had lain.

Some of the bodies were found today a mile from the cemetery. It is believed that others were washed into the Passaic River. Up to 10.30 o'clock 20 bodies had been recovered.

BIG HARVESTER COMBINE WILL INVADE CANADA

With a Capital of $120,000,000 They will Control the Business

THE WORKS BEING ERECTED IN HAMILTON

The Combination will be a Possible Menace to Canada—What a Local Man Thinks

The reported amalgamation of the interests of the leading farm implement manufacturing companies in the United States with a capital of $120,000,000 is a matter of no little importance to the manufacturers of that class of machinery in Canada.

Hamilton has been selected as the site of the Canadian end of the concern, and an immense factory is now under construction. The makers of agricultural implements throughout the Dominion will be affected by the operations of the new concern. A prominent dealer told The Times yesterday that it means death to all in the business, who will either be forced to the wall or compelled to join the trust.

Hon. Lyman Jones, General Manager of the Massey-Harris Company, being spoken to on the subject, said:

"With an enormous capital of $120,000,000, what such a corporation in the United States might do, with only an imaginary line between us, I cannot commence to say, or even conjecture. It would be a tremendous corporation for any Canadian firm to compete againt under existing circumstances should they decide upon a policy of capturing the trade of this country. If the report of the amalgamation is correct the effect would be so far-reaching that no one could say what might happen. It would depend altogether upon the policy they pursued. If they made up their minds to shut down the manufacturers in this country they would do so by selling their machinery away below cost for a number of years. This they could easily afford to do with such an amount of capital as that mentioned. On the other hand if they did not adopt that policy things would continue as they are. Canadian manufacturers at any rate would be at the mercy of such a corporation, and it would rest with our government in the arrangement of the tariff whether they should suffer or not."

HAMILTON ITS LOCATION.

Hamilton, Aug. 16—Hamilton is to be the Canadian headquarters for the International Harvester Company, incorporated yesterday in New Jersey, with a capital of $120,000,000. The Deerings, McCormacks, and all large American manufacturers of harvesting machinery are in the concern. The Canadian plant, which is of huge proportions, is now in course of erection in East Hamilton.

LACROSSE.

The Times is requested to state that Rev. Father McCloskey, of Campbellford, will hold his pic-nic in that town on Civic Holiday, August 21st, and the T.A.S. senior lacrosse team will play Hastings in the afternoon for a trophy, and the T.A.S. II. team will also play Campbellford. A special train will leave Peterborough in the morning, and it is expected a large number will go down with the boys.

The warning of the C.A.A.U. sent out to those who played against Griffiths and Barney Quinn has only tended to show the keepers of track athletics how powerless they are to interfere in that which is none of their business. Port Hope played without a murmur. St. Kitts lined up against Tecumsehs and Harry Griffits cheerfully and gladly. It is reported though that Brantford do not like the re-appearance of Griffiths any too well and that they sent a wire to St. Kitts before the game warning them not to play against Griffiths. And if all reports are true, the answer that Brantford got was almost in the nature of a snub. It read, "Let Brantford mind her own business and St. Catharines will mind hers."—Telegram.

Why Do You Submit to a Daily Life of Suffering from Common EVil

Paine's Celery Compound

Is an Infallible Cure for Distressing Summer Dyspepsia and all Digestive Troubles

The tortures and evils of summer dyspepsia are experienced by thousands at this time. The dyspeptic's train of evils may be enumerated as follows—feeling of dizziness, langour, nervousness sleeplessness, intense headache, distension of the stomach, loss of flesh, difficult breathing, and the heart's action is seriously affected.

All forms of dyspepsia are quickly banished by the use of Paine's Celery Compound. The use of this marvellous medicine allays the inflammation of the nerves centered about the stomach; it opens up the sewers of the body and removes all waste matter; it cleanses the blood; it makes new nerve fibre; it restores digestive powers; and promotes bodily strength and activity. Mrs. J. B. Orr, Lennoxville, P.Q., says:

I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia for ten years. At times I would suffer most intensely, notwithstanding great care in dieting and the best medical help I could get. Severe attacks were always attended with very violent headaches, followed by nervousness, and sleeplessness. Different physicians exhausted their skill in trying to affect a cure. Finally upon the advice of a friend I decided to venture an experiment with Paine's Celery Compound. The first bottle did me much good, and by the time I had used three bottles I was perfectly restored. I am now free from nervousness, sleeplessness, dyspepsia, headache and all the sufferings that arise from these distressing troubles."

A FINAL RESPONSIBILITY

"Get out of your khaki and into your overalls" is the Huron Signal's advice to the Canadian troopers returning from the war, says the Ottawa Citizen. And the advice is sound. Within the past ten days twenty-five hundred young Canadians have returned from South Africa and are putting in a few days of well-earned leisure greeting and being greeted by their friends. But the danger lies in the days of leisure being protracted into weeks of idleness resulting from a young man's habits of being unsettled by the excitement of even a brief period of military service in the field. One of the most important phases in the new method of evolving armies from the civilian population of the empire will be the subsequent reabsorption of these armies into industrial and business life after the necessity which created them has disappeared.

It is now apparent that in all future wars of any magnitude in which the empire may engage, the bulk of the army will be recruited from the civil population and the colonies will be expected, and no doubt be as eager as in the past war, to furnish a substantial proportion. As the colonies have no standing armies practically the whole of their quota will be called from civilian pursuits to take up arms. Actuated by a combined spirit of patriotism and desire for adventure there will be no difficulty in filling the ranks but the process of subsequently reabsorbing the army back into civil life may be less easy. It is a process demanding even a higher order of patriotic spirit than the mere volunteering for war, and one in which the co-operation of non-combatants as well as combatants will be demanded. The new methods of warfare facilitate the utilizing of the services of irregular troops. The value of barrack-yard accuracy of movement has diminished with the adoption of extended formation. The machine made soldier has to a large extent given place to the man capable of intelligent initiative who can shoot and who is imbued with inherent qualities of patriotism and personal courage. It is a fortunate evolution of the conditions for the empire because Anglo-Saxon peoples never have and never will tolerate the maintenance of large standing armies as a part of the body politic of continental nations. The new conditions of warfare give an immense advantage to the nation that has "got the man and got the money too" as compared with the conditions which prevailed in the days of smoky powder and fighting in mass. While other nations may have to keep up standing armies that mount up into seven figures, the British empire can rely on patriotism and martial spirit of its peoples to supply abundant material of adequate quality to swell its ranks when they are needed.

But the one important consideration which may or may not amount to a real drawback in connection with this fortunate condition of affairs is the dispersion and absorption of an army so created at the conclusion of a war. The consideration constitutes a problem which calls for the exercise of an intelligent patriotism on the part of the people generally as well as of the soldiers themselves to solve. Bearing in mind the fact that the system saves them from the burden of permanently maintaining a large armed force the public should be prepared even at the cost of temporary sacrifices to facilitate the process of absorption. With us in Canada in connection with the war just ended the problem is but a small one, yet it should call for the ready recognition of the measure of responsibility which exists on the part of the people towards the returning soldiers. Every employer should feel it to be a duty he owes to his country to assist in providing remunerative positions for the young men who have been in the field. And every returning trooper should feel that the duty of citizenship is coequal in importance to his country with the loyalty and patriotism which actuated him in risking his life for that country in the hour of need. The recognition of this dual responsibility should make the process of reabsorption very simple. It is a reproach of old standing that;

When the war clouds lower and danger's nigh
"God and the soldier" is the people's cry.

But in these days of great armies under the new system of warfare it would not be well for the future success of the new order of things in the British empire were the truth of the allegation to be established that when war is done and the danger past;

God is forgotten and the soldier slighted.

—At the last two meetings of the Peterborough Cheese Board, records were broken in the quantity of cheese boarded. On July 23, 6,881 were boarded, and the record was broken last week when 6,889 were offered. The good pasturage is making the milk plentiful.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When you read that anthracite coal is $9 a ton in New York, it is calculated to give you a coal chill.

Old Kruger evidently feels sore at the idea of seeing Botha, De Wet, Delarey and the rest of the patriots who "fit into the war" having a good time in England while he has to sit in exiled isolation on an alien shore and watch the empty champagne bottles floating down the channel with the tide.

Botha, De Wet and Delarey will arrive in England in time to witness the coronation naval pageant. They have probably seen enough of the British army and the change will please them.

CURE YOURSELF [illegible]

A High-Class Mining Investment

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital—AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

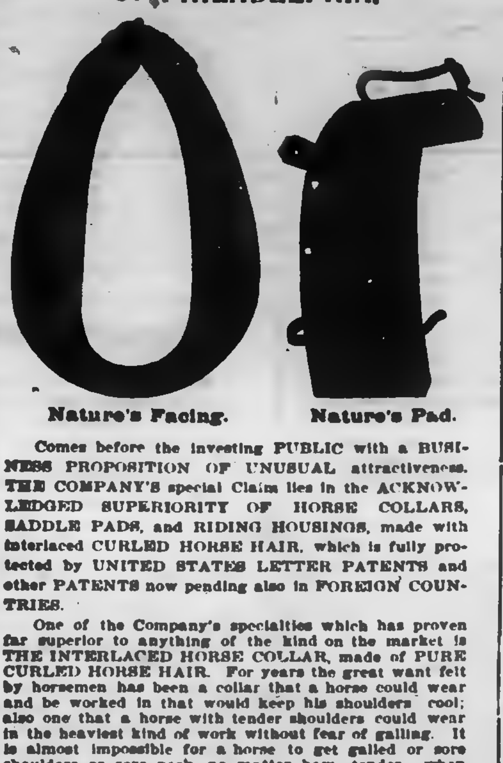
NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 32,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 10,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the next 10,000 Shares will be sold at Two Dollars Per Share, and the third 10,000 Shares at Two Dollars and One-Half Per Share. After which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the prices stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent., 15 per cent. and 12 1-2 per cent. on the investment, according to the allotment secured.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

We call your attention to the fact that the 30 per cent. interest only applies to the first 10,000 shares, and as considerable of this has already been sold, the balance will shortly be taken, so in order to secure the same and be on the ground floor send your subscriptions at once.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM HALPEN, GREEN & CO.

Wholesale Grocers, Nos. 18 S. Front St. and 17 Letitia St.
Philadelphia, December 28th, 1901.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours, truly,
HALPEN, GREEN AND CO.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well. Yours,

S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

A Ghostly Game of Chess.

"The International Hall of the Cafe Monico is a truly palatial chamber, ever so many feet broad by even as many more feet long. On the evenings of Friday and Saturday of last week," says London "Outlook," "it was divided by a barrier into two unequal parts. In the smaller sat, each at his board, the British chess-players competing against the American chess-players—who were not there. Through the larger roamed a selection of the chess public. . . . Inside the barrier, and next it, sat Mr. James Mason at a chess-board, facing us. We seem to have known Mr. Mason as a fine player these—well, say twenty years. On this occasion he is opposing Mr. J. R. Barry of America—who is not here; Mr. Barry is sitting in a room in Brooklyn three thousand miles away, under the eyes of American spectators. It is easy to say that the two men are connected by electric telegraph; but it is not wise to dispose of the mystery and romance of space in so rude a way. . . . But Mr. Mason, in this grand International Hall, seated opposite nothing better than a man with a book of telegraph forms who waits unconcernedly for the move, can he play thus dumbly and in absence against Mr. Barry in Brooklyn and think it chess? It is a very ghostly business, and we wonder Mr. Mason can get through with it at all. But he does. He is as solemn, as rapt in thought, as oblivious of all but the game as if Mr. Barry were opposite to him in the flesh, and not opposed to him only by electric telegraph. Clearly to him the play is everything, whether the opponent's move comes to him by actual touch, by telegraph, or by psychic suggestion. But for our part we cannot throw off a dread of the uncanny nature of the business. We feel inclined to look about for some manifestation of Mr. American Barry's spirit. What better evidence of it could we have than the arrangement of these wooden pieces on that wooden board? There is Mr. Barry—most effectually Mr. Barry, for he is causing Mr. Mason to think, and think, and think; to purse his lips in the old familiar way, to fall into immovable silences, wherein you would think he was revolving schemes of a new order of creation or puzzling out the mystery of man's origin and destiny; and Mr. Mason is doing the like to him in far Brooklyn. A strange and fascinating pursuit is chess, strange and unprofitable. Not politics, nor fame, nor wealth, nor love can so engross a man. These objects are usually compassed by flashes of passion, insight, and daring; but this slow, prolonged struggle of brain against brain, through the medium of pieces of fantastically carved wood, is pure devotion to an abstraction. The man who wins, who so hems in the piece of wood called a king that he may not move, gains nothing, proves nothing, establishes nothing but—"checkmate." Yet when he accomplishes that he tastes of a satisfaction deeper and more permanent than is accorded to statesman or lover, merchant or gambler. To accomplish it he deliberately, and for very love of the doing of it, undertakes an enormous mental effort, a thing which mankind in general shuns as if it were Satan himself. Truly a most mystical business this chess. In Paradise you will find politicians reading poetry, and poets studying morals; merchants will be cultivating the arts, and critics weeping on other people's necks; but the chess-players will be playing chess.

Dispensing With Early Rising.

Some genius has, according to his own advertisement, invented an apparatus to dispense with getting up so early in winter time to set the kettle boiling. As far as we understand it, you fix the new invention on your clock, and at the hour required it starts a fire under a kettle of water. As soon as the water boils a bell rings, and you wake up. This is not the sort of thing that takes the cake; it simply grabs it.

We once saw a remarkable invention of this nature in Sheffield. It consisted of a small, but powerfully built bedstead which had an ingenious clockwork arrangement attached, as you would expect, to the ticking of the mattress. In the morning a phonograph got up from under the bed, walked round to your side, and announced it was seven o'clock. After giving you two minutes to reply, one of the hands of the clock reached up and pulled your ear playfully. These were just preliminaries so to speak. If you didn't move then, the patent bed began business. It got up on its hind legs and ran downstairs with you inside it till it got to the garden, where you were shot into a modest little heap under the pump. By a clever arrangement of the process of suction you were drawn up to the mouth and a refreshing stream of cold water crawled down your back. If this didn't wake you, you had to wait for Gabriel's trumpet.

As a matter of fact, the inventor explained, it did wake most people. But in case you were too sleepy to collect your thoughts into fitting shape, by pressing a little knob in one of the blankets, a second phonograph would grind out a little appropriate profanity to ease your feelings. The invention is patented; and when it is put on the market it will beat all the spring mattresses going, as it does for summer, autumn and winter as well.—"Pick-Me-Up."

Hostess (to guests, who have come to spend a few days)—We're so glad you've been able to come, Mrs. Gushington; but I do hope we are going to have better weather, or I'm afraid you won't enjoy yourself much. Miss Gushington—Oh, but, my dear Lady Bore-[illegible], we didn't come here to enjoy ourselves. We came to see you!—"Punch."

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

"You forget," I said. "I am not even sure that I know your name. How, then, can I tell——"

"My name is Walter Leigh," he interrupted. "Did you hear it—from her?"

So desperate was he in his eagerness that I said "No," sadly. "When she was dying," I went on, "she only stammered a few broken words I could not piece together into meaning, though I have never forgotten, and I have often felt that she was dying, that there was something that she wished me to do; that was all of which I could be sure."

The man's eyes lightened in their deep hollows. "Since you haven't forgotten, tell me," he said, anxiously, "and it may be that I can help you to understand, even now."

Slowly I began to repeat the words that Lady Cope's dying lips had spoken. "The scar—the scar! After all these years." And afterwards: "Sheila, save—find—you must find——" Then silence, and nothing more.

"It was the boy she was trying to tell you to find and save," the man explained, excitedly. "She must have felt that she was dying, that there was nothing she could do. You were left, she still had hope; but even if she had lived what more could have been done?"

"Ah, what more," I echoed, "when the boy was dead so many, many years ago. Nothing could change that."

"The boy was not dead!" he exclaimed; and I started, in fear and surprise, for I thought that he must be mad indeed.

"Not—dead?" I stammered.

And I began to ask myself how I could soothe his excitement; for though I was still only on the threshold of the secret I was woman enough to shrink from the knowledge that I was imprisoned with a madman.

"No, no," he answered, almost fiercely. "Did I not tell you how she might have pardoned me if I had killed the child in the heat of passion? For she had sinned deeply against me, and so had Vincent, but she would not forgive when she knew the thing that Sintra and I had really done."

"What—did you do?" I whispered, dry-lipped.

"Did Roger Cope tell you nothing of the old story?"

"No. Nothing at all."

The sick man's eyes fastened once more on mine and held them, so that I could not remove my gaze. For an instant he was silent, then he spoke in a low, changed voice, a calmer tone than he had been able to command before.

"Ermyntrude begged you to save and find the boy," he said, thoughtfully, and with deep sadness. "Strange if it should be given to you to do so, even yet! Perhaps if I tell you the whole story from the beginning——"

"I beg that you will tell it," I pleaded, when he paused.

"Sit down," he said, abruptly. "There, in that chair by the side of the bed where Sintra always sits."

I had been standing until now, but I obeyed him.

"Sintra and I were half-brother and sister to Vincent Cope," he said at last. "We were twins. Our mother had gypsy blood in her veins. She was beautiful—famous for her beauty and her glorious voice. Her people were well-to-do; but because of that wild strain in her nature, which showed itself strongly after sleeping for a generation or two, she could not live the life of an ordinary, middle-class English girl. She went on the stage and became an opera-singer. She was but eighteen, your age to-day, and in the first company which she joined was a man whose father had been a gypsy. He was the leading tenor, and he was as handsome as she was beautiful, though a wild, worthless fellow. They married secretly. Then a time came when the marriage had to be announced. Our mother left the opera troupe, but our father stayed. Sintra and I were born. The husband and wife never saw each other again. He was killed in a railway accident, and as our mother had been disowned by her parents she was penniless. We were left with an old nurse while she went back to the stage, and for two or three years we were neglected, growing up like weeds in an uncared-for garden.

"Meanwhile, our mother met a young baronet, named Henry Cope, who fell in love with her beauty, and they were married. We were brought to this house as our home; this very room was our nursery, and we were happy enough until Vincent Cope, our half-brother, was born.

"With his birth everything was changed. Our step-father, who had never liked us, turned against us almost with hatred; even our mother took her love away from the poor gypsy twins, who recalled the sordid past, and gave it to the child who was born to good fortune. Sintra and I were devoted to each other; she perhaps caring more for me than I for her—as is the way sometimes with a brother and sister; and she hated the new baby as only a gypsy child can hate. One day, when Vincent was about two years old, she struck him, so that he fell and cut his forehead. And this act sealed our fate.

"Our step-father pronounced life unendurable while we remained under his roof, and we were to be sent away. The question was, where, for we were almost too young to go to a boarding-school; besides, we were so inseparable that it would have been cruel to part us; and neither our mother nor her husband had the active wish, I think, to be cruel.

"A circumstance trifling in itself decided our whole future. A child, Ermyntrude D'Esterre, a cousin of the Copes, who had been brought here on a visit by her parents, had taken a great fancy to the two gypsy children. When her father and mother, whose home was at Arrish Mell Court (which you must know well) heard that we were in disgrace with our step-father, they invited us to pay them a visit and share the teachings of their daughter's governess. We managed to win our way, somehow, into the hearts of our protectors; instead of paying a mere visit we continued to live at Arrish Mell Court, and were as much children of the house as Ermyntrude herself.

"So we grew up together. I was not a strong boy, and instead of being sent to a public school I had a tutor. Ermyntrude and Sintra and I were never an hour apart; and not a cloud arose between us until Sintra and I were seventeen, Ermyntrude thirteen. Then, mature beyond my years, I knew that I loved Ermyntrude, not with the brother-love I calmly gave Sintra, but a feeling very different. At last I was going to travel with my tutor, and before leaving I told Ermyntrude what was in my heart for her. She vowed that she loved me, too, and promised that when she grew up she would not

Whose Entire Plant is Now Under Roof. | of CENTRAL CITY, COLORADO
PRODUCTION OF 200 TONS PER DAY

185 Tons Milling Ore, $12.00, Net $10.00........$1,850
15 Tons Smelting Ore, average $80.00 (less transportation and smelting charges $10.00, $70.00 being low average.... Profit $1,050

$2,900 PER DAY. 350 DAYS

This is over 2[illegible] per cent. on the capital $5,000,000 at par, and at present selling price of 75 cents per share amounts to over 27 per cent. The above is one-third of the capacity. Full capacity—600 tons in 24 hours—would make these figures three times as great. Total amount to be raised fully guaranteed. This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having sums to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1.00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY is a going concern, the properties having produced $3,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

Labor Day Demonstration

A meeting of the Labor Day Demonstration committee is called for Tuesday night at 8 o'clock.

The Crossley Case

Yesterday Chief Rossel was served with a notice of a motion to be made at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, by Mr. D. O'Connell, solicitor for Minnie Crossley, who is serving a three months' sentence in jail for keeping a house of ill-fame. The motion asks that the prisoner be admitted to bail, pending the hearing of the appeal from Police Magistrate Dumble's judgment.

The Late Mrs. Graham

The death occurred at No. 314 London street yesterday of of Kate Anderson, wife of Mr. Adam Graham, in the 44th year of her age. The deceased was a native of Carleton Place, and leaves a husband and four children to mourn her demise. The remains were taken to Carleton Place yesterday afternoon by C.P.R., where interment will take place.

A Jolly Party

Mr. A. A. Hollingshead and Ald. Rush returned yesterday from Jacob's Island, Pigeon Creek, where the choir boys of St. John's church are camped. They report that the boys are having a delightful time, the fishing being particularly good. On Thursday morning four fine 'lunge were caught, while an 14 pounder was landed yesterday morning. The Masonic excursion to Fenelon Falls on Wednesday gave the boys a call and were hospitably received.

Pimples Blotches and Skin Eruptions

How unsightly, sometimes even disgusting, and certainly very mortifying to the sufferer. They are merely an evidence of impure, poisoned blood, and lowered vitality of the elementary organs, which can be quickly changed by taking Ferrozone after meals. Ferrozone cleanses the blood of all poisons and eruptions makes it rich in red corpuscles that manifest themselves in a healthy, ruddy complexion. To have a pure, soft skin, and good complexion simply use Ferrozone regularly. Price 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50 at Druggists.

Try Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake Pills.

Labor Day Souvenir

The official program of the coming Labor Day demonstration in Peterborough will be in the shape of a handsome illustrated souvenir in book form. It will be replete with views of Peterborough and district, and will also contain considerable information pertaining to the different trades and labor organizations in town. The program of the day's events will be fully detailed, and space apportioned for business announcements. Altogether the book will be one worth keeping as a memento of this year's Labor Holiday. 6,000 copies of this souvenir are to be published by the committee.

The Pt. Hamilton Excursion

The excursion held yesterday by the employees of the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company was one of the best outings of the season. The following are the names of the committee in charge, and they are to be congratulated for the thoughtfulness displayed in looking after the interests of the large crowd in attendance; Messrs. John Hart, Wm. Lang, R. Mulligan, Wm. Barrie, George Banton, jr., and D. Hamilton. The steamer City of Peterborough, Captain Lamb in command, pulled out from the dock at 8.30 a.m., and arrived at Jubilee Point at 11.10, after a very pleasant run, when all hands aboard made a rush for dinner, after which a football and baseball game was pulled off, together with a number of events, too numerous to mention. Dancing was participated in, both on the way down, and at the pavilion, the music being supplied by Mr. and Mrs. Hudson, and was greatly enjoyed by all present. Mr. Jas. Hamilton, representing the firm, was in attendance and carefully looked after the interests of all. The boat reached the dock at 8.30 p.m., with a well pleased crowd aboard, which quickly dispersed after singing God Save the King.

THE FORESTERS' EXCURSION

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—In order to add to the pleasure of the Foresters delightful annual excursion to Niagara Falls, I would suggest that, if not already provided for, arrangements should be made with the Electric road at the Falls to give the excursionists the privilege of going up one side of the river and returning by the other, as the views from either side present two different aspects of the gorge, owing to the fact that the road on one side runs along the dizzy summit, while on the other it wends its serpentine course along the depths of the gorge. This ought to be easily arranged, as both lines are under one management. The scenery thus enhanced by the variety would be an incentive to repeat the trip after following the one line both ways for so many years.

Trusting Mr. Editor that you will bring this to the attention of the management, I am, yours, etc.,

The Peterborough Race Meet

Yesterday's issue of the Canadian Sportsman has the following reference to the Peterborough Fall Meet:

"It has long been a matter of surprise to horsemen that Peterborough, one of the most prosperous and progressive commercial centers in Ontario, should have so long gone without a race meeting.

"It is conveniently located in the midst of a rich agricultural district, has first class railway accommodation, and altogether the surroundings are rich in promise of liberal support to a Club that will race on proper lines and honestly strive to deserve the support of the best class of people.

"A Club has at last been formed there, and though in their inaugural meeting they are not offering a large amount of money, they present a two days' card which is likely to receive a liberal entry list, and as they have a good half mile track they ought to score a gratifying success. A reference to their advertisement in our business columns will show the names of three substantial citizens of Peterborough as the club's chief officials, and we desire to remind owners that entries are due on the 10th of September, and should be addressed to E. Rountree, Sec'y, Peterborough."

PLEASANT FOOD

The Kind That Brings Health to Old Age

When people have ruined health by the use of improper food, and then change to the right kind and get well, they feel like shouting it from the house-tops.

"I wish I had the power to tell every fellow being who is suffering, the story of my deliverance and persuade them to avail themselves of the same means that I used," says a lady of North Cuba, N.Y., "I am 61 year old. From earliest girlhood it has seemed imperative during the waking hours for me to be constantly at work. In the getting up of my meals, the paramount consideration was pleasing the appetite rather than the preservation of health.

As was to be expected, years of toil and constant living resulted in the gradual 'break down' of my whole system; I did not realize it until three years ago when I was such a wreck, mentally and physically that life was a burden. I had frequent attacks of severe headaches, accompanied by nausea, terrible to endure, sluggish liver and kidneys, circulation weak, appetite gone, digestion seriously impaired; I was on the verge of total nervous prostration, and my condition seemed hopeless.

A friend who had suffered from stomach trouble and indigestion, told me of the great benefit she had received from Grape-Nuts and I decided to try the food, and I am thankful for the impulse that lead me to do it. I began by using three teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts softened in milk three times a day. In a week I was conscious of renewed vigor. My aches and pains lessened; the nervousness disappeared; the fog that had enveloped my brain, and obscured my memory was lifted, and in place of restless wakefulness came refreshing sleep.

I continued to improve until at the end of three weeks I could add to my breakfast and supper a baked apple or a dish of some kind of fruit, and also more hearty food at the mid-day meal. I have had no relapse, my recovery of health is of constant character and unbounded thankfulness to me and mine. I have not found the fountain of eternal youth, but I have found something that so nourishes and strengthens my vitality that I can endure as great an amount of fatiguing labor, and accomplish as much as any woman of my age can reasonably expect." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MARRIED IN PORT HOPE

Mr. J. Alex Culverwell and Miss Jessie N. Hill United in Marriage

Port Hope Guide: One of the prettiest as well as most fashionable weddings that ever took place in Port Hope, was that of the Culverwell—Hill nuptials, which were solemnized in St. John's church, at noon to-day.

The bride was Miss Jessie N. Hill, daughter of Mr. J. L. Hill, of New York, and sister of Mrs. Capt. H. H. King, of Penryn Park, whilst the groom was Mr. J. Alexander Culverwell, Manager of the Central Ontario Power Company.

Rev. E. Daniel, Rector, officiated, assisted by Rev. Dr. Symonds, of Trinity College school.

Shortly after 12 o'clock the contracting parties took their places in the church, where the impressive ceremony was performed.

Miss Winnifred King, niece of the bride, made a very pretty bridesmaid, and carried a large bouquet of pink sweet peas; while Mr. Jack Dykes, of Toronto, nephew of the groom, performed the duties of groomsman.

After the ceremony the many guests departed to their homes, excepting the very intimate friends and relatives of the bridal pair, who were driven to the home of Mr. H. H. King, Penryn Park, where the wedding breakfast was served.

Their hosts of friends join in wishing the happy couple many years of happiness and prosperity.

THE FARMER UP-TO-DATE

(By our Junior Reporter.)

The farmer sat in his easy chair
  Smoking a Henry Clay,
A Turkish rug lay under his feet,
  And he hadn't a word to say.
He smiled as he read the Morning
    Times
  The price per bushel of corn,
And the market figures for beef on the hoof,
  And his proud smile smacked of scorn.

His glance swept waving fields of maize,
  And a countless, fattening herd;
A pile of bank-books met his gaze,
  And he wasn't saying a word.
But he thought of his boyhood comrades, who,
  Less fortunate than he,
Were struggling along 'mid the cry and hue,
  Just fairly successfully.

A banker, one, with merely a wad
  Of a hundred thousand or so,
And one was a railroad president
  With only a million to show.
And one was the head of a soulless
    Trust,
  And one was a plumber king;
And the farmer sighed in his melting pride,
  But he wasn't saying a thing.

WHITE BREAD and APPENDICITIS

NOW FOR A FEW SOLID FACTS

Don't let anyone scare you about food and don't be a fool the other way.

Your food either makes or breaks you. That's easily understood.

The way you now feed yourself is RIGHT (FOR YOU) if you are perfectly well. Stick to it.

But you can wager your last dollar your food IS WRONG IF YOU ARE AILING IN ANY WAY.

Perhaps a word from a food expert might help you.

APPENDICITIS suddenly sets in after the bowels can no longer stand the abuse of too much starchy food like white bread, potatoes, pasty wheat or oats, sago, tapioca, &c., &c. These are nearly solid starch, and starch is required by the body, but when white bread for instance is eaten in quantity, a part of the starch sours, ferments, and makes gas that inflames and irritates the bowels, producing constipation and peritonitis, or appendicitis.

Don't think you can leave off all starchy food, that's being a fool the other way. Starch helps furnish the energy for the body, PROVIDED that starch is digested and does not ferment in the bowels.

A practical knowledge of these facts led to the invention of

GRAPE-NUTS

In this food the starch is changed into Grape Sugar in exactly the same way it is in the digestive organs of the human body, so when you eat Grape-Nuts you get the needed starchy food, already passed through the first form of digestion, safe and ready for immediate assimilation by nature, it is thereupon quickly taken up by the blood, and carried to the parts of the body for nutrition and strength.

No gas, no overtaxing of the digestive organs, no constipation, and no danger from either peritonitis or appendicitis.

Remember the wheat and barley in Grape-Nuts are not predigested by any sort of treatment except moisture, heat and time to let the diastase in the grains grow and thus change the starch. It's only in the "know how" and you have the good of it by using Grape-Nuts.

Another and most important thing is that, white flour, in order to be white, must have the most valuable part of the wheat berry thrown out in milling, because the Phosphate of Potash, for rebuilding the gray matter in brain and nerve centres, the lime for teeth and bone, and several other most important elements lie up close to the shell of the wheat berry and in the dark colored part. The white flour miller throws this out.

The makers of Grape-Nuts keep these ingredients in. That's why steady users of Grape-Nuts are Brainy, Nervy, Healthy People.

Does Grape-Nuts food taste good? Try it dry and crisp, just as it comes from the package. It's already cooked and ready to serve with cream or rich milk poured over. Or try some of the delicious recipes found in the free recipe book in each package.

The above is just plain old common sense applied to the subject of food, and the statements are absolute scientific facts that may be relied upon.

Grape-Nuts food is sold by all first-class grocers and served at all first-class hotels and made at the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd, Pure Food Factories, Battle Creek, Mich.

KING'S VISIT TO IRELAND WILL NOT TAKE PLACE

The Story was Made Out of Whole Cloth by a Correspondent

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 17.—There is said to be absolutely no truth in the report that King Edward intends to visit Ireland. The report originall came from Cowes from a correspondent, who heard the statement in one of the clubs that one or two loyal Irishmen would like the King to visit Ireland. Out of this the reporter wove the story, on what he called "reliable authority," that the King was going to visit Ireland. One of the King's secretaries says that the whole thing is ridiculous. The King has no idea of visiting Ireland in the near future.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 17.—There has been no conference between Laurier, Choate and Lansdowne on the Alaska boundary question. Henry White, secretary to the American Embassy, says the idea of such a conference is ridiculous, and that the existing modus vivendi is very good.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 17.—The Bonapartists, says the Paris correspondent of the Times, have been giving evidences of internal dissensions in their party. There are two wings, one called the Imperialist committee and the other Traditionalists. The former, which is presided over by Paul De Cassagnac, accuses the latter of being tainted with republicanism.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 17.—The Times says that the struggle going on about Helens, Isle of Wight, between the retail tradesmen and the co-operators is an indication of what is proceeding throughout England, except in the south, where hitherto the co-operative movement has not gained a foothold. The grocers feel this competition most keenly, particularly as they are also threatened by various companies, like the Lipton's. In all the big northern towns the co-operative business is enormous; 1,600 societies existing, while one company has 240 branch shops in London along. The ordinary retail grocer, therefore, is likely soon to disappear.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 17.—An article in the Dublin Evening Telegraph on the statement that five Nationalist members of Parliament were present at the coronation ceremony at Westminster Abbey, is quoted in a despatch from Dublin to the Times. The paper says: "Let no Nationalist delude himself in the belief that he can be sometimes a loyalist. A Nationalist cannot serve two masters. Let the weak-kneed Nationalists who would be loyalists read, ponder inwardly, digest and make their choice. If the King visits Ireland the Nationalists are forewarned how even the most perfunctory demonstrations of loyalty will be interpreted."

London, Aug. 17.—The Times' Odessa correspondent says that brigandage is increasing in Manchuria. In the vicinity of Port Arthur bands of Hunguses continually raid, plunder and murder, and are increasing in boldness.

BOTHA, DE WET, DELAREY WERE WARMLY RECEIVED

Fx-Boer Generals Met by Chamberlain, Roberts and Kitchener in Southampton

Lessons Drawn from the Boer War—Boer Markmanship Not the Principal Feature of Their Work.

Special to The Times.

Southampton, Aug. 17. — Generals Botha, DeWet and Delarey arrived here yesterday morning, and met with a great reception, both from Government and public.

The Boer generals looked remarkably well, and evidently were much pleased with the heartiness of the welcome accorded them. Soon after landing they boarded the steamship Nigeria, where Joseph Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary, Earl Roberts, and General Lord Kitchener greeted them. They were also introduced to Mrs. Chamberlain and Lady Roberts, with whom they chatted for some time.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS.

London, Aug. 17.—It is likely to be 1904 before any of the scholars who received appointments under the terms of the will of the late Cecil Rhodes will arrive at Oxford University. The executors of the will find so many intricate details to be arranged that there is little hope of getting the curious system working earlier.

George Robert Parkin, principal of Upper Canada College, Toronto, who has been appointed by the executors to prepare a plan for the allotment of the scholarships provided for in the will, and who left London August 12 on the White Star steamer Oceanic for New York, will make a tour of the British colonies to ascertain the views of the local authorities, and report thereon. The executors will then draw up regulations governing the eligibility of candidates for scholarships, and with regard to other matters involved in the bequest.

So many complicated questions have been submitted to the executors by Governors and Colonial Premiers that they feel it would be unwise to expedite matters without a thorough knowledge of the opinions of all the various shades of thought and nationality embraced in Mr. Rhodes scheme.

Berlin, Aug. 18. — Gen. von der Goltz, for many years the instructor of the Turkish army, has just published in the Deutsche Revue a noteworthy article on the lessons to be learned from the Boer war. After showing that the nature of the seat of war explains much, if not all, that happened there, he says that the secret of the resistance of the Boers has been erroneously stated to be their marksmanship. But, he adds: "The experience of European officers who were in the war convincingly proved that the Boers, on the average, were not better riflemen than the average well-drilled German soldier, apart from the fact that many who fought with the Boers came from towns and cities, or were immigrants who were not in the possession of the 'inherited' virtues of the old colonist. Also the tradition that every Boer is a hero sans peur e [illegible] has long been abandoned. The majority of the leaders and soldiers, however, were essentially aided by their robust constitutions, their hard lives, and their keen eyesight; but this cannot solve the whole riddle. It is equally incorrect to ascribe the protraction of the war to the abnormal incapacity of the English troops. It is true that the tactics of the English leaders are open to criticism; but it must not be forgotten that the first events at the seat of war, especially the locking up of the English troops at Ladysmith, Kimberley, and Mafeking, contributed a great deal to the protraction of the English operations. The anxiety to relieve those places brought about a division of the troops seeking to relieve them, until Lord Roberts put an end to the nuisance, and advanced with united forces, via Bloemfontein, against Johannesburg and Pretoria."

FIGHTING QUALITIES.

With regard to the fighting capacity of the English troops, I may add the answer given by one of the German officers who was in the campaign to General von der Goltz —"They behaved almost like German troops during the manoeuvres." This is the highest praise that can be bestowed on them by a German general. Baron von der Goltz calls attention to the strange fact that the extraordinary superiority of the English artillery proved without effect in nearly all the hard fighting. He attributes it to the circumstance that "the effect of modern guns greatly decreases when they are drawn up to close together, so that an increase of their number is absolutely valueless if the room at their disposal does not increase in proportion to their strength. This clearly shows that the massing of guns alone never decides a battle. This was proved at Auerstadt, where two hundred and forty-four Prussian guns could do nothing against the forty-four French guns. The same thing was noticed by a Prussian officer who had fought at Beaugency, one of the severest battles of the Franco-German war, and who was at Colenso. He told the General that the attack of the English artillery made an indescribable noise, but had next to no result, adding, however, "the only question is whether the nerves of civilized soldiers could stand the moral effect of such a terrible fire. The Boers have no nerves."

After pointing to the fact that the engagements of infantry with infantry in South Africa have again shown the strength of a pure defensive in face of a frontal attack, General von der Goltz arrives at the conclusion that the value of a most careful use of natural cover, and of the greatest circumspection on the part of the leaders, has been fully proved in the Boer war. He commends the extensive use of mounted infantry, which, he thinks, may also be employed advantageously in European wars. In conclusion, he emphasizes the fact that the value of faith, liberty, and patriotism has once more been asserted, and that the education of youth, especially in the military service, must be directed to this end. "The objection that the Boers were not saved from subjugation by these qualities is only partially true. They were, and must have been, defeated in the long run because their warfare was only defensive, without any definite aim. It is a great advantage to the English that they always pursue a decisive policy, directed towards great and positive objects. During my lengthy stay in the East, a high Indian officer told me, about twenty years ago, 'We shall lose India one day, not through Russia, but through the Indians themselves. They are commencing to shake themselves free from tutelage, and a nation of three hundred millions cannot be kept down forcibly by a few hundred thousands. We shall then need compensation, which we shall find in Africa.'"

INDIAN TROOPS REVIEWED.

Their Brilliant Uniforms Made a Gorgeous Picture of Coloring.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 16.—The Indian coronation troops to the number 1,300 were reviewed by King Edward at Buckingham palace this afternoon. The arrangements were similar to those of yesterday, when a body of colonials was reviewed. The Prince of Wales presented medals to the men, who were all picked troops, including Lord Curzon's bodyguard. They presented a fine spectacle in their handsome vari-colored uniforms. The Princess Victoria and other royal persons took snapshot pictures while the ceremony was in progress. Queen Alexandra and many notables were present. The King wore a bejeweled sword which cost $50,000, which was presented to him yesterday by the Maharajah of Jaipur.

The scene on the terrace was a very brilliant one, the European military and levee dress being quite outshone by the splendid apparel of the Indian princes. The Queen wore a heliotrope costume with a small toque of the same shade. She received a greater ovation than the King, as both passed down a line of notables, bowing and shaking hands. The young sons of the Prince of Wales, Princes Edward and Albert, constituted themselves aides to the King and fetched several general officers who smilingly obeyed their summons to an audience with their grandfather.

The great lawn below the terrace was a marvelous sight in red, yellow, green and blue. The Bengalese, Sikhs, Gurkhas, and Punjab cavalry made a strong contrast to a single khaki spot, where the British regulars from India stood. At the word of command fluttering lances, rifles and carbines were grounded, and the contingents, one by one, filed past the royal canopy, saluting their Majesties, and receiving medals at the hands of the Prince of Wales.

At the close of the review the troops were drawn up in front of the King, who addressed the officers as follows:

"I wish to convey to all ranks the high satisfaction it has given me to see this splendid contingent from India. I almost feared, owing to my serious illness, that I would be prevented from having the advantage of seeing you, but I am glad to say that, by God's mercy, I am well again. I recognize among you many of the regiments I had the advantage of seeing at Delhi, during my tour of India. I hope the contingent has enjoyed its stay in England, and that all may return in safety to their homes. I wish you to convey those sentiments from me to all ranks of all your commands."

MEXICAN MINE A MONEY MAKER.

Interesting History and Data of the wonderful La Bianca, Owned by Minneapolis Capital

BELONGEC TO CROWN OF SPAIN.

In Spite of Immense Amount of Work in Former Years, It will Still Yield Vast Fortunes

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 18.—Mining in Mexico has, during the past two years, attracted an unusual amount of attention in capitalistic and mining circles in this country, particularly on account of rich discoveries in properties formerly owned and developed by the natives, and which at the time of the invasion by the Spanish, were made a part of the holdings of the Spanish crown.

One of the most promising mining propositions in Mexico today, according to recent reports from that country, is the La Bianca mine, of Sonora, Mex., owned by the Sonora Gold and Silver Mining Company of this city. The mine is one of the richest in Mexico and was at one time the principal source of gold and silver production in the state.

The Bianca is in the very heart of Sonora, in the midst of the Hermosillo mining district, seventeen miles from the Yaqui river. The gold and silver mines of this region long ago made the country famous. Its history is varied and full of thrilling events, embracing as it does, the days way back in the misty past when the Indians were master of the realm—as well as the period when the Catholic fathers had tamed the savage souls of the red man—past the conquest and down to the present time. But from the beginning, the mines of this territory have yielded seemingly unlimited wealth to both church and state.

The crown of Spain issued long ago two maps of this vicinity—probably the only ones in existence—signed and stamped with the official seals of the crown. They give the locations of La Bianca and Las Alamos mine and included a note to the office: that these were the heaviest producers of bullion in the western possessions of the government. The La Bianca is now owned by the Sonora Gold and Silver Mining Company and the Las Alamos is lost.

No stronger evidence than this could be offered of the immense value of these mines. In those olden times modern methods of course, were unknown and naturally none but the richest mines were operated. When the mule and burro mode of transportation (necessary in that period) is considered, only those mines were available which yielded practically pure metal. The "dump" of the La Bianca demonstrates the immense amount of work these ancient miners did for the enviable ore they obtained and the thou- their endeavors is admirable testimony of their enterprise.

The remnants of the near-by Indian village of the Vantanas with its ruins of stone houses, tanks and smelters, half crumbled, in the center of the piles of slag from its dead furnaces, speak in silent evidence of the number and worth of the inhabitants of long ago, and their appreciation of the gold and silver which was theirs for the digging. Many of the mines have since been re-opened and worked to the colossal financial advantage of their present owners. The Las Cruses of Don Pancho Floras, in one year produced $600,000 by the old style Mexican mining, and is now being worked at a depth of 400 feet. The old town was and feet of old workings left as relics of quite deserted for many years. Fever carried away most of the people in 1776, and those who withstood its ravages

Detailf of the Tragic Death of Robert Dunsmore, Fernie

Guelph, Aug. 18.—A letter received by Mr. C. Liplardt tells of a thrilling experience his son, Mr. William Liphardt, had in his endeavor to reach the summit of the Three Sister mountains at Fernie, B. C., a height untrodden by man. The story of the adventure and the suicide of Robert Dunsmore, is as follows:

On the night of Friday, Aug. 8th, Mr. Liphardt and his two companions, Keith Whimster and Robert Dunsmore, prepared their packs and got everything in readiness for an early start the next morning for the summit of the Three Sisters, a point considered by everybody as impossible to reach. To reach these mountains it was necessary to climb Mount Fernie and cover a distance of fourteen miles. The altitude of the Three Sisters is 5,800 feet above the town of Fernie and 9,200 feet above the sea level.

Miss Lottie Evans, of this city, who is at present visiting her sister, Mrs. Liphardt, at Fernie, prepared breakfast early Saturday morning for the party and took a snapshot of them as they were leaving with their packs on their backs. It was agreed that they should build a fire on Saturday night to show where they were located. The start was made shortly after seven o'clock, and they headed for the summit of Mount Fernie, which they reached at twenty minutes past eleven. Here they had lunch. The journey was continued at one o'clock. They passed down through a gully, over a ridge of about a thousand feet, then through another valley. This place Mr. Liphardt described as one of the most beautiful spots he had ever seen. The growth is luxuriant and mountains rise to lofty heights on all sides. Some of these massive cliffs reach a height of 2,000 feet. This valley was crossed, then another incline of 500 feet and down the valley to the base of the first Sister. Lunch was again taken here, and after a rest of three-quarters of an hour the packs were shouldered and the heavy ascent started. The first thousand feet was easy climbing, as the incline was only about thirty feet in the hundred.

AT HIGHEST TENSION.

After that distance had been covered every nerve and muscle was kept at the highest tension to retain what ground had been gained and made still further progress. The last 2,000 feet of the first Sister was a rise of 6 feet in 10, and the footing was doubtful, as the mountain at this height is covered with shale and loose stone, usually flat and from three to twelve inches across. The party went as high as the timber line and camped for the night on a ledge about three feet wide on the side of a ravine 1,500 feet deep. The town was in plain sight and at 9.30 a fire was built as had been decided upon, which was distinctly seen by the watchers at Fernie. Before lying down for the night the three tied themselves together to avoid falling off the ledge during their sleep.

The journey was resumed about half-past five o'clock Sunday morning, and the summit of the first Sister was reached after an hour and a half of climbing. They then made for the centre Sister, and had succeeded in getting about three-quarters of the way up when Robert Dunsmore took pains in the stomach. A short rest was taken, and as he did not improve his comrades arranged a blanket in a depression in the rock and advised him to lie down. He did so and then requested that the other two go on up and stated that he would remain there till they would return. His companions were loath to leave him but finally yielded to his persuasions. They had reached within fifteen or twenty yards of the summit, when on looking around they saw Dunsmore in a position as though he were vomiting. They looked again and he was in the same position, but resting on the other arm. They next saw him roll down the hill, and made a hasty descent to see what was the trouble, believing that he was only in great pain.

CUT HIS THROAT.

When they got down they were horrified to find that he had cut his throat from ear to ear with his penknife. Keith Whimster was on the road to Fernie for assistance within ten minutes. He arrived at Mr. Liphardt's home, pale and almost breathless and inquired for Albert Liphardt. Startled by his excitement, Mrs. Liphardt asked if anything was wrong with her husband, to which he replied that Dunsmore had committed suicide at the top of the centre sister and that Mr. Liphardt was still with the body. Miss Evans took the distressing news to Mr. Rennie, uncle of the unfortunate young man. The police authorities were also notified and a relief party was started up the mountains at 6.30 Sunday evening, and reached the top of Mount Fernie at ten o'clock. They were then about one-quarter of the way up and remained there till day-break Monday. Mr. Liphardt saw a bonfire they had lighted and was relieved to know that some one was endeavoring to reach him. He was also overcome with the cold and exhaustion, and could not possibly have stood the ordeal over a few hours. He was about two miles from timber and had no fuel with which to make a fire. As wild animals roam about the mountains, he would not leave the body, fearing it might be devoured. When the rescue party reached him about nine o'clock Monday morning he was quite stiff from the cold. He had then been alone with the body twenty-four hours, as Whimster had left him about nine o'clock on Sunday morning.

BURIED ON MOUNTAIN.

in a position a though he were vom-body back to the town, but after going a considerable distance the task had to be abandoned and the remains were buried in the mountain at seven o'clock Monday evening. The party camped beside the grave over Monday night, as Mr. Liphardt was unable to continue the journey. When they had been an hour on the road he completely collapsed, but under the care of a doctor who was with the relief party he was soon restored. About nineteen men went out altogether, some of whom left Sunday night, and the others Monday morning at four o'clock. Those to reach Mr. Liphardt first were Joseph Bricker, Ed. Wigglesworth, and Archie Farquharson. They reached the town on their return at one o'clock on Tuesday.

Robert Dunsmore had only been out from Scotland about six weeks, and was making his home with his uncle. Referring to his rash act, Mr. Liphardt says: "I do not believe poor Bob knew what he was doing when he committed the deed. He died at eleven o'clock Sunday morning."

Brest, France, Aug. 15. — Soldiers and gendarmes left here last evening to protect the commissaries in closing religious schools at Plougouvelin and Ploumoiser, Finistere, and the schools were closed this morning, despite protests by the inhabitants of the towns. It was rumored at first that the troops were going to St. Meen and Folgoe, and the peasantry flocked to to those places, remaining on guard guard until 6 o'clock this morning, when it was learned that the soldiers had gone to Plouguervelin and Ploumoguer.

At Ploudaniel the barricade of carts which barred the way to the sister's school, has been replaced by a net work of barbed wire and pointed stakes have been driven into the ground to injure the horses of the gendarmes. A moat has been dug beside is in front of the school door and filled with filth.

MEETING OF CABINET.

The Cabinet met at the Elysee Palace to-day. The Premier, M. Combes, communicated reports on the situation in Finistere, one of them being from the superior of the congregation of the Holy Ghost, to which the resisting sisters belong. In this report the superior said that the sisters had been ordered twice to leave their schools, but that these orders had not been obeyed owing to opposition by the peasantry and by the owners of the properties on which the schools are situated. M. Combes declared that official reports showed that the agitation over the closing of schools in Finistere was purely a Royalist movement. There had been grave occurrences, he said, which came within the penal laws, and which would result in prosecutions, instruction for which had been sent to the Procurer-General.

London, Aug. 14.—I have the highest authority to deny the statement published here to-day that the Canadian Pacific has joined forces with the Allans, the Dempsters and Furness for a fast mail service between Montreal and Liverpool. The Canadian Ministers left London while the matter was still in state quo, leaving the final decision until their return to London, or even to Ottawa.

SPLIT OF COMBINED TENDERERS.

It is quite true that the Allans submitted independent tender for about an eighteen-knot service, with Quebec as the summer and Halifax the winter port, for a subsidy of £225,000, of which Canada would pay £150,000 and Britain £75,000. The Allans are very keen to secure the contract. This separate tender indicates a split among the combined tenderers. The split is probably the result of the success of the Canadian Pacific's offer.

Hon. A. G. Blair, however, when interviewed to-day, favored a twenty-knot mail service between Queenstown and Sydney in the summer and Halifax in the winter, the steamers proceeding to Montreal in the summer with passengers at slower speed after the delivery of the mails. The mail delivery would thus equal the New York service. Shipping experts do not expect a higher speed than twenty knots, for the reason of the tremendous expense. Official estimates show the whereas a twenty-knot boat now costs £600,000, a twenty-three knot boat would cost £900,000.

AN OUTCRY IN BRITAIN.

Regarding the new service to South Africa, some criticism is expressed here at the British Government subsidizing what really is a Canadian freight service in opposition to British manufacturers from the South African market.

Montreal, Aug. 15.—The Allans have put in a special tender for the fast Atlantic service. When the tender of the Canadian Pacific and the tender of the Allan-Elder-Dempster combination was announced from London Mr. Hugh Montague Allan and Mr. Hugh A. Allan at once sailed for London. It was supposed that they had gone to support the All-Elder-Dempster combination tender, but it was announced to-day that they had put in a tender on their own account for a fast service.

The announcement made from London this morning that a contract had been awarded for a South African service to the Allan, Furness and Elder-Dempster Line came as a surprise to the agent sof those lines here. They were unprepared for the announcement. A meeting of the agents called by Mr. James Thom, of the Furness Line, is now taking place to consider rates and other matters connected with the service.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Aug. 16.—King Edward's reply to an adress from the city of Portsmouth yesterday was handed to the Mayor of Portsmouth to-day. On behalf of himself and Queen Alexandra, His Majesty thanks the city for its congratulations on his coronation, the recovery of his health, and the conclusion of peace, and adds:

"We are unfeignedly thankful for the mercies which it has pleased Almighty God to vouchsafe to us, and to our people, and we trust now that we are happily at peace with all the world, that the recent rejoicings, wherein the whole Empire shared, may send us forward each in his own station, to work with renewed earnestness for the maintenance and improvement of our noble heritage and the accomplishment of the ends that become a great people. For myself, I shall ever be stimulated in my exertions for the welfare of the Empire by the ineffaceable recollection of a tribute of loyalty and affection which has touched me deeply."

The King and the Prince of Wales landed at East Cowes to-day and visited Osborne House.

During the morning the King marked the spot occupied by the coffin containing Queen Victoria's body on the deck of the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert. A brass cross was set into the deck, bearing the words:

"Here rested the beloved remains of Queen Victoria, from February 1 to February 2, 1901.
Born May 24, 1819.
Died January 22, 1901."

Tromsoe, Norway, Aug. 17.—Evelyn B. Baldwin and several members of the crew of the America have made statements before a notary public regarding the dispute between Mr. Baldwin and Capt. Johannsen, of the America. According to Mr. Baldwin's statement Capt. Johannsen refused to obey the orders of the ice-pilot, Premier Seddon has refused a baron the command. Balwin also says that Capt. Johannsen left the vessel at Honingsvaag without Baldwin's consent or knowledge. The relations between Baldwin and the ice-pilot was always of the best, the statement asserts, and it is added that while the death of half the dogs from worms hindered the party from reaching as far North as intended. Baldwin is confident that within 12 months the America will reach the intended latitude, enroute to the north pole. The consulate at Christiana, to which Capt. Johannsen complained, has referred him to the consulate at Bergen.

Montreal, Aug. 14—Mr. A. B. James, C. P. R. Superintendent of Transportation, with headquarters at Winnipeg, predicts that the enormous western crop will be handled this year without difficulty, provided the railways are given half a chance.

"The C.P.R.," says Mr. James, "has an abundant supply of new box cars, and 25 new locomotives have been distributed over the western division. This division has now close on to 14,000 box cars.

When navigation closes the additional elevator facilities which have been provided will practically ensure against a blockade. Interior elevator capacity along the C.P.R. has increased from 12,000,000 bushels to 14,000,000 bushels, and at the lake ports the elevator capacity has been doubled."

Mr. James also pointed out that the C.P.R. will complete several new branch lines this fall. Among them are the Forest extension, the Kirkella Branch to Pheasant Hills, 100 miles; the Wakada extension, 20 miles; and the Snowflake extension, 20 miles. All parts of the road are in good shape.

Up to the end of July, 119 loading platforms had been erected under the provisions of the amendment to the Manitoba Grain Act.

THE BOER AND BRITAIN AT PEACE TOGETHER

A Boer Leader and English Officer Travel Together, They are Now in Canada

Montreal, Aug. 16—One of the prettiest pictures of Briton and Boer ever in this city was to be seen in the St. Lawrence Hall today, when Mr. R. C. Hosking, now of Natal, who went through the entire South African war as a member of Gen. Buller's staff, and Mr. A. L. Villiers, a nephew of Chief Justice Villiers, who fought for the Boers under the Middelburg and Pretoria commandos went away side by side to continue a trip around the world, and will both return to South Africa to try and help to make it a loyal British colony.

With them on the trip are the Misses de Villiers, sisters of Mr. de Villiers, who reside at Paarl, Cape Town, Mrs. Stephen of Cape Town, and Mr. D. J. Van Wyk, a young Transvaaler. They had met on the steamer on the way to Durban from Cape Town and after finding out that they had been fighting against one another for many months and told of the many tricks that both armies had tried in order to effect a capture they became staunch friends and are of the opinion that the same will be the case in every case in which a real Boer will meet a Briton.

In the course of conversation with a Star representative both Mr. de Villiers and Mr. Hosking spoke interestingly of some of their exploits and of the possibilities of the country.

At the opening of the conversation there was a rather amusing incident as the Briton wanted the Boer to take precedence while the Boer was anxious that the Briton should first tell of his impressions. Then Mr. de Villiers retorted by saying that he was no longer a Boer, but a British subject, and as he was a comparatively young one at that he should be allowed to think for a while of what he had to say.

"As an Englishman who has come in contact with the Boers every day since the close of the war," Mr. Hosking went on to say, "I can certainly say that everywhere we have been received with much courtesy, and in the cities especially the best of feeling prevails. In the country districts, however, where the people have to start again to build homes for themselves it would be asking far too much to expect that there should not any longer be any enmity."

"But everywhere there is much satisfaction that the war has been terminated and it is hard to say whether the English soldier or the Boer was more pleased when the announcement of peace was received. As a soldier who fought under General Buller, I can say that there was not a single member of the rank and file who does not still retain the highest opinion of his qualities as a soldier. As a fighter it is doubtful if the English army had any greater in the South African campaign. No matter what has happened since owing to any messages that he might have thought necessary to send to General White, he still retains the esteem of everyone who has known him as a soldier. Up to the present time English merchants have been well received by the Boers, and it is only a matter of a little time before there will not any longer be any question whether you are an Englishman or not."

"As a Boer who is now, I trust, a loyal British subject," Mr. de Villiers said "I think I can safely say that from a commercial point of view South Africa is now sure to become a greater country than if it had remained under the control of Boers. In many ways I will admit that we are not a very progressive people, but we can learn very quickly and now that we have to, we will.

"Being obliged to come into constant contact, and obliged if we want to succeed, to work just as hard as they do, a general impression exists throughout the country that we have fought a noble fight and have gone down before a superior foe. Of course in certain districts, it may be years before the feeling of enmity is lived down, but I can assure you that there will never be any resumption of hostilities. There is every prospect of there being much activity in the districts of Pretoria where the mines should prove just as productive as those around Johannesburg. Mr. Van Wyk who is also a member of our party, went through the entire war. I can tell you that it was with much regret that all of the Boer officers heard of the Buller incident, for we all thought he was one of the greatest fighters the English had. The best of soldiers are human, and like everyone else can make mistakes."

PRINCE WANTS A NEW YORKER

Emperor William's Son would Wed Miss Gladys Deacon

CASE OF LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT

The Young Woman's Wealthy Father Shot and Killed a Frenchman in Paris Ten Years Ago

Paris, Aug. 16—The Matin says that Miss Gladys Deacon, daughter of the late Edward Parker Deacon, is the object of the German Crown Prince's affection. The paper adds that Miss Deacon told Prince Frederick Wilhelm that she would never consent to a morganatic alliance, and if he desired to marry her a religious legal ceremony would be necessary.

Three days after Miss Deacon's avowal the Crown Prince presented her with a ring which he had sworn to give to nobody except his wife., it being a present he had received from his grandmother, the late Empress Frederick.

Miss Marie Gladys Deacon, who is credited with having won the affections of the young prince, is the eldest daughter of the late Edward Parker Deacon, who, on Feb. 17, 1892, at Cannes, France, shot and killed Emile Abeille, a wealthy Frenchman, whom he suspected of being his wife's lover. Deacon was imprisoned at the time, tried at Nice, convicted and sentenced to one year's imprisonment. In September of the same year he was pardoned by President Carnot and released.

Mrs. Deacon is a daughter of the late Admiral Charles H. Baldwin, U.S.N., and was a New York belle at the time of her marriage to Deacon in 1879.

Miss Gladys Deacon is the closest friend of Consuelo, Duchess of Marlborough, formerly Miss Vanderbilt. The Prince and Miss Gladys met at Blenheim on the occasion of the prince's visit to his grand uncle, the king of Britain. Both prince and the fair commoner are of the same age, and it was a case of reciprocal love at first sight.

Last spring the prince got permission to visit Lucerne for three days, which he extended to ten days because he met Miss Deacon there.

Being chastised by the Emperor for his disobedience, the prince threatened to do as did the Austrian Archduke, who took the name of John Orth, renounced his right to the throne for the sake of the woman he loved. The prince said he would rather have the heart and hand of the American beauty than the rank or purple, or even the throne of the German Empire.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 18, 1902.

THE NEGRO IN SOUTH AFRICA

That the attitude of the Boers in South Africa toward the negro is very similar to that of the people of the Southern States is shown by a writer in the Fortnightly Review, who says that "The Boer Challenges as untrue, as unscriptural, as a standing danger to life and property, and as a menace to civilization, this negrophilist, black-man-and-brother theory." The Boers' dread of English interference, he says, is due very largely to the impression and apprehension that it will bring to South Africa trouble and confusion by unduly lifting up the negroes, and thus reversing "one of the cardinal features of their native policy." Contact with the negroes in Africa in recent years, however, has brought about in the religious missionary societies working there a very marked alteration, if not of ideals, at least of prescribed courses. For instance, marriage between black and white is not now recommended even by the pioneers of French missionary enterprise in Basutaland, and the London and Scotch missionary societies have come to show like reserve. The Jesuits and Trappists in Matabeleland and in Natal do not deny the validity of such a union, but they do not encourage it. At all the missionary centres, too, there is "an increasing perception that not literary training, but training to labor, is what is required as the first European lesson to the black man." A movement started of recent years by the Kaffirs to form themselves into a separate church in South Africa is viewed with disapproval by the missionaries as fraught with possible political danger. Former President Steyn, and the Boers generally are troubled by the report of the "importation from the United States of a negro bishop of any African Episcopal Church." "The people will endure no equality of black and white in church or in state," declared the Transvaal constitution of 1857, and they are of the same mind still.

THROUGH BELLE ISLE

Sir William Van Horne is reported by the New York Journal of Commerce to have said to a representative of the Dow-Jones News Agency that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company already had the support of the Dominion Government for a fast Atlantic line under Canadian Pacific domination, and that the scheme only awaits the completion of arrangements between the Canadian and British Governments. "Our project," he said, "has nothing whatever to do with the so-called Morgan combine. We had our plan in mind almost in the identical shape in which it has been offered to the Dominion Government long before the Morgan combine was mentioned in public. I do not think that there is any project for a combination of all Canadian roads and waterways such as has been talked about. In fact, I may say that the combine idea is not with us at all, and that Canadian Pacific is proceeding as an individual property, without any collaboration with other railroads in Canada or elsewhere. Grand Trunk has its own terminals and its own traffic connections at Portland, Me., and there is not the slightest sign that the road will give up present arrangements."

The terminals selected are Quebec and Halifax, and Sir William says that when the line is fully established the summer route will be via the Straits of Belle Isle during the best part of the summer, and south of Newfoundland when the route by the Straits becomes impracticable. The winter port will be Halifax.

THE FARM LABORERS

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company does all it can for the comfort of its passengers. It is not arbitrary in any particular and those who travel over this line are sure to receive fair treatment.

Twenty thousand farm laborers are needed to take off the crops in the Northwest and the C.P.R. and the Manitoba Government are doing all they can to secure this number of men. In order to induce laborers to go to this country, the Railroad Company has announced that male or female farm laborers from the East, who have arranged to work with farmer friends, or for the same farmers they worked for in former years will be conveyed free, prior to August 31st, 1902, from Winnipeg to their destinations in Manitoba or Assiniboia on presentation of farm labourer's certificate to C.P.R. station agent at Winnipeg, without rendering it necessary for such farmers to go to Winnipeg to certify they have engaged them.

This must be considered fair treatment and the papers that the C.P.R. does not treat farm laborers right is erroneous.

The trouble last year in connection with the farm laborers who went to the Northwest was caused by the sending of too many to one point. This will be guarded against this season, and the men will be generally distributed. No man who understands farming, need stay at home this year because he fears he will not be well taken care of. Everything will be done for excursionists that can be and they will not have the slightest trouble in the matter of securing employment.

moved north, and their descendants are now the famous tobacco growers of Grenada, the Apaches made playthings and camp items of the houses they found there and only in recent years did the country become safe for white men to prospect or mine. Lately, through peace and government, its growth has been astonishingly rapid; so much so that in the past couple of years, according to the United States consul at Monterey, over $200,000,000 has been invested in northern Mexico, and some of the most noted producing mines of the world are neighbors of ours—the celebrated Copper Queen of Sonora and Arizona, the Green Copper Company with its 3,000 workingmen, the marvelous Colorado and the Grand Central. These are but a few of them.

F. B. Dickinson, secretary and general manager of the Sonora Gold and Silver Mining Company, who has recently returned from an extended visit to the property, in an interview with The Tribune said regarding the future prospects of the La Blanca mine—

"We are located in the western foothills of the Sierra Madre chain of the Rocky mountains, just south of the Arizona border. Sonora is the talk of the world. The old Zubiate mine at Torres has more ore in sight under old works than she can mill in years with her new plant. The same can be said of Las Cruces, near Ures. Indeed, the modern history of Mexico proves that no ancient Spanish mine has ever been opened up in a modern way with up-to-date machinery, and American push that has not developed into a veritable bonanza to its shareholders. After two years in constant personal charge of La Blanca, I am certain we have one of the oldest and richest mines known and each foot we attain again and again verifies these facts. Only a short time ago we assayed 1800 ounces from six inches of ore in the old works. Frequently 1,000 ounces have been gotten from our vein. There is every indication of productiveness for the ore obtained is more than rich, and promises big dividends to shareholders in the very near future.

INCORPORATED.

"The Sonora Gold and Silver Mining and Smelting Company was incorporated under the laws of Arizona in the fall of 1900 and early part year, with the installation of the hoist, active work was begun. To attempt to clean out and utilize the ancient shafts and tunnels was not successful. After wasting two months in the endeavor we finally constructed our shaft No. 1 on the east side of the Lodge. It is five by seven feet in size. Rapid work soon brought us to a depth of 150 feet—low enough to permit a cross-cut under the old works. Early in November a cut had been made through the 9 feet 4 inch vein—with a tunnel of 177 feet behind.

NO RISK TO SHAREHOLDERS.

"Not since Nov. 9," continued Mr. Dickinson, "has there been any risk to share holders. On that day we really proved our mine. All chances of loss were immediately dissipated and shareholders found themselves partners in a great, grand, true tangible business investment.

"We drifted north and south on our vein in December, cross-cutting to walls at each end, 60 feet apart, and found that our vein widened in both—sixteen feet at the north end and thirteen feet at the south end of the drift. We were then forced to stop drifting for want of air, but the drift had been improving with every foot gained.

It was decided in September to sink a connecting shaft just to the west of the vein, which would serve a double purpose—an air shaft and a main working shaft—also saving the long truckage underground to shaft No. 1. We have now gained a depth of 120 feet in this new shaft. About 25 feet more and our workings will be connected. Then we can pursue our operations with an abundance of air. We plan to go down an additional 250 feet, 500 in all, and at the same time develop the vein at the depth we have already reached, opening stations at 200 and 250 feet. We have explored the old works with 210 feet of tunnels and have also gone into the outcroppings of ledge on the north side of Blanca mountain in two places, with 85 feet of work. It all demonstrated that our vein is better than 1,200 feet long.

"The management of the company is in business hands. Not a cent of salary is paid to any officer. There are no large elaborate offices to eat capital. Our only expenses are at the mines, and even there the hoist, pumps, tools and houses are all paid for. The mine has been proven by the cutting in November of over 9 feet wide of ore with values averaging more than 120 per ton. The 1st foot shafts and tunnels are well timbered, and, to make a long story short, the mine is in active healthful operation, and on the eve of producing well-nigh fabulous returns."

All of this just now furnishes the careful investor an opportunity unequalled by any of the alluring offers being made elsewhere in oil, real estate, or other fields of enterprise.

A High-Class Mining Investment

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital—AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

PRODUCTION OF 200 TONS PER DAY

185 Tons Milling Ore, $12.00, Net $10.00 .... $1,850
15 Tons Smelting Ore, average $80.00 (less transportation and smelting charges $10.00, $70.00 being low average.... Profit $1,050

$2,900 PER DAY, 350 DAYS

This is over 20 per cent. on the capital $5,000,000 at par, and at present selling price of 75 cents per share amounts to over 27 per cent. The above is one-third of the capacity. Full capacity—600 tons in 24 hours—would make these figures three times as great. Total amount to be raised fully guaranteed. This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having some to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1.00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

Mainly About People.

A High Church stranger who was visiting a rural church in England enquired: "Have you matins in this church?" "Oh, no, sir," replied the rustic verger, "but we have oilcloth right up to the chancel."

An Argyllshire elder was asked how the kirk progressed in his locality. "Ah, weel," said he, "we had four hundred members. Then we had a divession and there were only twa hundred left; then a disruption and only ten left. Then we had a heresy trial; and now there's only me and ma brither Duncan left, and I ha' grave doots o' Duncan's orthodoxy."

The great Mendelssohn was once compelled to accept the office of bookkeeper with a banker who was a very ignorant man. A few days after the banker said to Mendelssohn: "Do you think God works things wisely? You He made to be a bookkeeper, and me a rich banker." "Just notice the wisdom of God," promptly replied Mendelssohn. "If He had made me the banker, do you think I would engage you for a bookkeeper?"

The story is told that President Roosevelt was once traveling in Idaho, and passed a bookstore in the window of which was a copy of his "Winning of the West." Going into the bookstore he enquired, "Who is this author Roosevelt?" "Oh," said the bookseller, "he's a ranch-driver." "And what do you think of his book?" asked the President. "Well," said the dealer, slowly and deliberately, "I've always thought I'd like to meet the author and tell him that if he had stuck to running a ranch and give up writing books he'd have made a powerful more of a success at his trade."

The chief of the Leslies is said to have prayed before a battle: "Lord, be on our side! An' gin ye canna be on our side, aye lay low a bit, an' ye'll see thae carles get a hidin' that must please ye." An old Covenanter, who ruled his household with a rod of iron, is said to have prayed in all sincerity at family worship: "O Lord, hae a care o' Rab, for he is on the great deep, an' Thou holdest it in the hollow o' Thy hand. An' hae a care o' Jamie, for he has gone to fight the enemies o' his country, an' the outcome o' the battle is wi' Thee. But ye needna fash Yersel' wi' wee Wully, for I hae him here, an' I am cawpable o' lookin' after him mysel'."

Lord Kelvin, the great British scientist, now in this country, is much given to preoccupation. It is said his students were wont to accompany the endless repetition of the definition of an ideal magnet, "an infinitely long, infinitely thin, uniform, and uniformly and longitudinally magnetized bar," by a stately tramp of feet. At the conclusion of this staggering performance, Professor Thomson, as he then was, would invariably shout, "Silence." One day the boys put it up to keep absolutely still, but the cry of "Silence" came at the end just the same. It is told of him, too, that he once went sound asleep presiding at a banquet. It was the penalty of overwork.

Opie Read, the Southern novelist, who lives in Chicago, has accepted the nomination for alderman from a Republican convention in a Republican ward. Until the last Presidential campaign Mr. Read had always affiliated with the Democracy. During the campaign of 1896, however, he made speeches in the West in behalf of the sound-money ticket. When his bill of expenses went to Mr. Hanna the chairman noticed that Mr. Read's expenses in Denver were much larger than at any other place. Mr. Hanna called Mr. Read's attention to this. "I reckon as much," Mr. Read replied, "but did you ever play poker in that pesky town?" Mr. Hanna made no answer, but put an "O. K." on the account.

Clark Newton of the Parker House, Boston, is telling a good story at his own expense. When a small boy on the farm his folks often sent him to the neighbors to buy a dozen eggs when their hens failed to lay enough. He noticed that the old farmer always held each egg before a lighted candle and examined it carefully. In his innocence of Yankee shrewdness, Newton supposed that this was prompted more by honesty and intention to detect whether the eggs were bad or not. One day, however, when he counted his eggs, according to custom, there were only eleven in the basket. With a determination not to be cheated, the lad trudged proudly back to the house, and quickly made known his discovery. "Oh," said the old farmer, "that's all right, my boy; one of them has a double yolk."

Written on the Face.

We write our characters on our faces; yet, though we are quick to read our neighbor's face we are slow to realize that our own is open for him to read. But it is. The story is there, and we are writing it every day of our lives. Not only do smiles and frowns leave traces, but every passion which sways the heart stamps its record upon the face. Even a ride in a street car on a short railway journey gives proof of this. Look around you. These two strangers opposite you never saw before, yet you know that one is passionate, the other mean, and your heart warms to the little old lady near by. You want no one to assure you she is kind and gentle, while a whole network of wrinkles about the eyes tells you that the old gentleman in the corner loves his joke. Character, indeed, is written plainly on every face. Some speak of tragedy, some of comedy, and not a few give you a distinct warning.

marry anyone but me. I wanted her to prove this promise. I wanted to be sure that she belonged to me; and I persuaded her to let me tattoo on her arm the mark of a heart, which was to be the fac-simile of one on mine.

"She was afraid and unwilling, but consented at last; and I made the hearts as best I knew how, in my amateurish way, with a purple ink which I bought from a man I knew.

"While I was fashioning the heart on Ermyntrude's arm, copying each detail from my own, with my sleeve rolled up that I might have the model ever before my eyes, Sintra looked in upon us. She was furious with jealousy that Ermyntrude should share something with me that was denied to her. From that moment I believe that she hated Ermyntrude.

"When I had gone away on my travels, Sintra made a heart on her own arm, and told Ermyntrude that it had been done by my desire, but that was not true. I knew nothing of its existence until Ermyntrude wrote me that, since Sintra now wore the symbol, she had ceased to value hers as before.

"For years, though the two families lived in Dorsetshire, not fifty miles distant from each other, we saw little of Vincent Cope, for our mother died, and the boy and his father went abroad together. It was while I was traveling with my tutor that we met—my half-brother, his father and I. Only the day after the meeting, which took place in Switzerland, Sir Henry Cope had an accident in climbing. He lay ill for a few weeks, and finally died, so that Vincent became Sir Vincent, though he was but a boy.

"My tutor, who was a good fellow, made himself very useful to Vincent, and we all went back to England together, taking the body of the dead baronet with us. After this Vincent and I remained friends, though Sintra's continued dislike of him kept us from accepting his invitation to share his home. Arrish Mell was the home of our hearts, and our friends there seemed no more desirous of sending us away than we were of going. But Vincent and I went up to Oxford together, and in those days he had our three portraits painted, to be hung in the library in this house, where you may have seen them.

"Vincent was sent down from Oxford on account of an audacious prank. I left at about the same time because of a severe accident at football. He went abroad with friends; I back to be nursed into health at Arrish Mell Court.

"By this time I showed signs of latent talent as an artist. Ermyntrude's people, who were simple and unmercenary, believed that I might make my way in the world, and when they found out that we had loved each other for years they consented to our engagement.

"Then, as Ermyntrude and I both longed for Italy, and she would have plenty of money for us both, it was arranged that we should be married without delay. Ermyntrude was twenty, I twenty-four.

"I was perfectly happy, despite Sintra's jealous depression. My heart was full of good feeling for all the world, and I was delighted when Vincent wrote that he would come and be best man at the wedding.

"Well, he came, and arrived at Arrish Mell Court, where he was to pay a visit, only a week before the day set for the marriage. He was a handsome and brilliant young fellow, not much older than Ermyntrude. They had not met for some time, and I might have seen a danger signal in their eyes when they looked at each other. But I loved Ermyntrude so passionately that I did not dream her feeling for me might be nothing stronger than the affectionate habit of years, which I had thought her to misunderstand.

"When Vincent had been in the house for three days she begged me to release her from her engagement, eleventh hour though it was, alleging no reason except that she did not care for me as she had thought. I was half-mad, and I refused to give her the freedom she asked for. She seemed as much mine as if she were already my wife; she had been mine ever since I put my heart on her arm, hers on mine.

"On the morning of the day that should have given her to me for ever she was gone—she and Vincent together. They went to Scotland, and were married almost before we had time to guess what had happened.

"For weeks I lay at death's door with brain fever. Sintra nursed me through the illness as no one else could have done. But I was never the same man again. The blood in my veins seemed turned to gall. I believed that I hated Ermyntrude as much as once I had loved her; and I thought of nothing but some way of making her feel as I felt.

"Perhaps if her parents, who had been like father and mother to me, had lived, I would after all have done nothing against their daughter. But while Sintra and I traveled, trying to forget, they died. A year or two later, my chance came, and — with Sintra's promptings in my ears—I took it."

CHAPTER XXV.

Danger.

For a moment the speaker was silent. He had forgotten me, and gone back into the past. But my patience was short, and in my eager wish to hear the sequel, I broke in upon his reverie.

"The chance came—you took it," I prompted him. "What was it that you did?"

"Vincent and Ermyntrude were at Arrish Mell Court," he said, in a weary, toneless voice. "They had been married three years when Sintra and I came back to England from the land where my wife and I were to have been happy together—if another man hadn't stolen her away. Their boy was two years old. Sintra and I made our plans; we had thought of the punishment which would hurt the mother most. One day the child ran away from his nurse, who was gossiping with a friend, and was not seen again. But his little hat and toy he had been playing with were found hours afterwards close by the water on a lonely part of the sea beach, a mile or two from the gates of Arrish Mell Court.

"From that day to the night on which you tell me she died, Ermyntrude believed her son had been drowned, and that I was his murderer. There was no proof of any kind against Sintra or me; we had managed the affair far too carefully for that. But we were known to be in the neighborhood, and it was easy to imagine the suspicion in Ermyntrude's mind. For a time I rejoiced in it. I wished her to think that her great sorrow had come through the man she had injured, yet to feel that she was able to do nothing—nothing."

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

A Bicycle Lost

On Friday last a lady's bicycle was taken from the front of Sutcliffe's store. The wheel is well known and marked. The party who took it will kindly leave it at Lynch's drug store, and no questions will be asked.

Saturday's Market

The market was fairly well attended on Saturday, but prices were high. The following prices prevailed: Green corn, 15c. per doz.; apples, 25c. per peck; butter, 20c.; eggs, 15c.; beans, 5c. per quart; potatoes, 20c. per peck; lamb by the quarter, 8c.

Ho! for Rice Lake

The Steamer North Star will run two special trips to Gore's Landing on Wednesday next, in connection with the Bazaar in aid of St. George's church of that place. There will also be a football match at 2 p.m., paddling and sailing races, etc. The steamer will leave Peterborough at 9 a.m., and leave Gore's Landing at 8 p.m., instead of 4.15.

Very Little Hard Coal

Hard coal is still $7 per ton in Peterborough, although it is almost certain to go higher. There is very little in town—not nearly sufficient to supply the regular customers of the dealers. It takes from ten to twelve thousand tons of coal to put us through the winter, and there is not much more than half this quantity in sight. People who can do so will have to go back to wood, as this appears to be the only way out of the difficulty.

Stomach and Bowel Troubles

A promptly satisfactory cure for cramps, colic, indigestion, heartburn, biliousness, sick stomach and summer complaint, is a few drops of Nerviline in sweetened water. Nerviline at once relieves pain and suffering, eradicates the cause of the trouble and cures permanently. Polson's Nerviline is the best general purpose remedy for internal pains known; it acts so quickly that no household should be without it. Buy a 25c. bottle of Nerviline to-day, it's all right.

OBITUARY

On Saturday, Aug. 16, Timothy Cronin, aged 27 years, died at the home of his father, 29 Elm street. The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock to St. Peter's cathedral, and from there to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

The death occurred on Saturday morning of Mr. Cornelius O'Connell, youngest son of Mrs. Timothy O'Connell, of Ashburnham. The deceased was 30 years of age, and has been a resident of Clifton Springs, N.Y., for the past ten years. Last May he came to Canada in search of health, but the change did not appear to be of any benefit. He leaves a wife and one child to mourn his demise. The funeral will take place at 8 o'clock this morning from his mother's residence, Ashburnham.

CONGRATULATIONS

Harmony Lodge, I. O. G. T., Tender Their Good Wishes to the T. A. S.

At the meeting of St. Peter's Total Abstinence society, following Rev. Dr. O'Brien's return from the convention at Dubuque, the following communication was received;

To the officers and members of St. Peter's T.A.S.

At the last meeting of Harmony lodge, No. 437, Independent Order of Good Templars, I was instructed to convey to you our heartiest congratulations on the magnificent success scored by your society in the capture of the banner at the recent convention at Dubuque.

We wish to express the pleasure it gives us as a total abstinence organization to note the rapid growth and thorough, genuine work of benefit of the T.A.S. in town, and hope that that work will continue to enlarge.

Kindly convey to Rev. Dr. O'Brien, to whom is due much of the credit for the spread of the total abstinence sentiment in town, our heartiest greetings, and our wishes for the continued success of the society. Fraternally yours,

W. DREDGE,
Secretary Harmony Lodge.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE AND ITS ENEMIES

A Booklet Written and Published by an Eminent Lawyer

Concord, N.H., Aug. 16.—An eminent lawyer, of Baltimore, Maryland, John Henry Keene, has recently written and published a wonderful booklet entitled "Christian Science and its Enemies," in which he startlingly condemns the pulpit's unjust attacks on Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy on Christian Science.

A representative of the press called on Mrs. Eddy to inquire as to her endorsement of this book. In reply she said. "Upon reading the grand preface of Mr. Keene's grand book I laid it aside for lack of time just then, and sent my compliments to the author with an order for said books. After perusing his book thoroughly, I changed my opinion, not of the author's talents, scholarship and high intent (although I have never seen him), but of the advisability of publishing the book, and immediately requested the parties to discontinue publishing it in its present form of treating the subject. I did this solely, because the author's vehemence in denouncing the pulpit's furious attacks upon me was not consonant with my Christian sentiment. It is written of our great Master, whose life and teachings furnish my model, "that when He was reviled He reviled not again."

WOMAN ON WAY TO CONVICT OR KILL CHAFFEE

Arizona Widow Bound by a Pledge to Dying Husband

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 16—Prepared to take the law into her own hands, Mrs. Amie White of Verde, Arizona, is on her way to New York, where she expects to have a settlement with Gen. Chaffee when he arrives from the Philippines.

She is the widow of a discharged soldier of the Eighth Infantry. On his deathbed her husband exacted a pledge that she would prefer charges against General Chaffee for alleged cruel treatment at Camp McDowell, a post near the San Carlos reservation, Arizona.

Mrs. White charges that General Chaffee, who was then a major, sent soldiers to their home, which was just outside the reservation, burned their house and drove off all their cattle. When seen at El Paso she said:

"I am going to New York to meet General Chaffee, and if he does not give me satisfaction I'll shoot him dead in his tracks. I have preferred charges, but he prevented them from getting before congress. I have told General Miles about it and he says for me to wait. I have waited long enough. I want a settlement, and I'm going to have it. I'll have his life or satisfactory reparation."

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain. This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries, we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent. guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.
THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO.,
OF PHILADELPHIA.

Nature's Facing.

Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 33,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an Immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 12th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well. Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

SHAH WAS RESPLENDENT IN BLAZE OF DIAMONDS

Persian Ruler Covered with Jewels When He Arrived in London

Unwilling to Face British Crowd — Ex-Boer GeneralS Object to Repeating the Ordeal of Saturday

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 19. — The Shah of Persia, Muzaffar-Ed-Din, and his suite, who arrived at Dover yesterday, and stopped at the Lord Warden Hotel, reached London to-day and took up their residence at Marlborough House, as guests of King Edward. In accordance with the Persian monarch's express wish the train only travelled 20 miles an hour. His Majesty therefore had plenty of time to array himself in full state uniform, and when he left the train at Victoria Station he was resplendent in a blaze of diamonds. On his tarboosh (cap) a bugle diamond stood out like a headlight, his epaulets were adorned with large emeralds, and his breast was covered with jewels of all kinds. The gems worn by the members of the Shah's suite were only a little less rich than those of His Majesty. The Prince of Wales, Lord Lansdowne, the Foreign Minister, Lord Roberts, the Commander-in-Chief, and the members of the Persian Legation, and others met the royal traveller at the station. The Prince of Wales and the Shah shook hands, and the visitor was introduced to the prominent persons present. The Prince of Wales subsequently conducted the Persian monarch to a royal carriage, and they drove off, escorted by a detachment of Life Guards and followed by other carriages. The route to Marlborough House was lined with troops. The weather was miserable, so the sightseers were not numerous.

TRAVEL IN SECRET.

London, Aug. 19.—The ex-Boer generals, Botha, Dewet and Delarey, start for Brussels tonight. After Saturday's experience they are not willing to again face the ordeal of a British crowd, so the generals chartered a special steamer and are keeping the railroad station where they will entrain and their port of sailing a secret.

Captain O'Donnell, who served on Dewet's staff throughout the war, will start immediately for America, in order to prepare the way for the visit of the generals. He says that altogether about 500 Americans and 600 Irishmen were with the Boer forces.

NAVAL MANOEUVRES.

London, Aug. 18.—The naval manoeuvres in the Solent to-day were marred by the weather. Torrents of rain and half a gale of wind drove the spectators from the sea front and it was noon instead of 10 o'clock when the royal yacht Victoria and Albert left Cowes and took King Edward through the lines of the fleet. Subsequently an array of battleships and cruisers, to the number of nearly 80, unmoored, formed in two columns, and passed on either side of the Victoria and Albert. All the war vessels manned ship as they passed the royal yacht.

FIGHTING IN COLUMBIA GOES BRISKLY ON Government Forces are Practically Surrounded.

The Revolutionary Army Likely to Win Out.

Washington, Aug. 18—Under date of Aug. 4, the United States Consul-General at Panama reports to the State Department that the Peace Commissioners who left Panama for Agua Dulce July 29, found severe fighting there upon their arrival. After remaining two days and being unable to get any communications from Gen Herrera, they returned to Panama without accomplishing anything.

Another despatch received at the State Department from the Consul-General, at Panama, dated Aug. 4 reports that fighting was begun at Agua Dulce on July 29 and continued until July 31, on which day there was an armistice for several hours for the purpose of caring for the wounded and burying the dead. He says:

"The Government forces are said to be practically surrounded by the revolutionists, who have cut off all communication with Panama and the outside. The Padilla, a revolutionary gunboat, is at the mouth of the river, guarding the entrance to the port. In addition they have a number of soldiers there, and it is said have captured the port some two miles distant from Agua Dulce.

"On the morning of July 30 the Chucuito and Boyaca, Government vessels, started to go into the river to take soldiers, provisions, &c., to Agua Dulce. They were met by the Padilla, and after some firing, the Chucuito left and arrived at Panama the next day. The Padilla chased the Boyaca in a southern direction, and from then until now no word has been heard from her. She had a limited amount of coal and provisions, and in addition to the crew had on board some two to two hundred and fifty soldiers. As the Padilla returned to the mouth of the river, the supposition is that the Boyaca was not captured. Not hearing from her, the Government has serious apprehensions that she is either in distress on the high seas or stranded somewhere.

The American Invasion of Canada

Chicago, August 18 — American farmers, rushing into the Northwestern States, and, in even greater numbers, into the British Northwest, are causing a land boom in the west and filling the remaining arable lands at an unprecedented rate.

According to statistics furnished by real estate men from Kansas north to Winnipeg, land values have increased nearly 50 per cent. in the last two years. It is estimated over 21,000 American farmers have settled in the Canadian Northwest in the first seven months of this year, and that before the year is over the number will be 50,000.

American syndicates and farmers have purchased over 6,000,000 acres of land in the Canadian Northwest already this year. Hundreds of thousands of acres of Minnesota land have been filled, with prices advancing in a marked degree; the Dakotas are having a land boom which is greater than those States ever knew; and the unoccupied lands are filling fast, with values rising rapidly, over 50 per cent. in many cases.

Iowa, Illinois, and Indiana farmers form the majority of the emigrants. Kansas reports a land boom. Nebraska a steady demand for land at advancing prices, and indeed, the entire Northwest shows a great demand for farming lands.

IN SOUND SLEEP FOR SEVENTEEN YEARS

Case which Stands Alone in the Medical Scientific World

HE WAS SELDOM CONSCIOUS

And Took but Little Nourishment — Is now Awake and in Good Health

Winona, Minn. Aug. 16—The story of Herman Harmes, of Winona, Minn. the man who has slept 17 years almost constantly is said to stand absolutely alone in the world of medical science.

Every person of sound health is supposed to spend one-third of his life in sleep, but here is a man who has been in a somnolent state over one-half of his entire lifetime of 61 years.

During Mr. Harmes early years his life was normal. It was not until 1873 that he was overtaken with a disease which resulted in his being unconscious of the world around him, except for brief periods of respite.

Mr. Harmes was well to do at one time. At least he had a large farm near St. Charles in one of the most fertile sections of Southern Minnesota. He also had other property. It is now all gone, and Mr. Harmes and his family are eking out a living on a parcel of land near the small town of Douglas, Minn.

Less than six months ago Dr. Adams of Rochester gave Mr. Harmes his first permanent relief. Since that time Mr. Harmes has been able to live much as other men, although he still suffers from his long years of sleep.

Mr. Harmes was at New Memphis, Ill., when he was first affected. He had been compelled to work in the marshes which surrounded that place, and his system became filled with malarial germs. In order to rid himself of the malady he took a large dose of medicine. This acted as a poison upon his system. It cured the ague, but it brought upon him 17 years of sleep.

At first he thought little of the drowsy feeling which was wont to come over him. He would be tired out apparently, when he retired for the night, and it would be with the greatest difficulty that he could be aroused in the morning. As time went on he would have to retire earlier and would sleep longer in the morning.

Conditions went from bad to worse and his family became alarmed. A physician was called, but no relief followed except that temporary relief due to heavy stimulants. The reaction would leave him more sleepy than before.

Finally the time came when he would sleep for two or three days at a time. He would be partially aroused about the middle of the day and forced to take some liquid nourishment. More doctors were called, but to no avail, for he would still sleep on.

The Harmes family moved to Minnesota during one of his normal periods, and settled on a fine farm near St. Charles. They had not been there long when the slumber period came on. He was asleep the greater part of the time, but there were always periods, sometimes very brief, when his condition would be almost natural.

Finally the time came when he did not arouse from his somnolent condition. He slept for a month, only resisting such nourishment as could be forced through his teeth. Physicians were sent for. They were entirely helpless. Heroic treatment was resorted to. Everything was attempted without avail. Harmes slept on.

The period of sleep stretched out to two months, three, six, a year, and still the slumber was unbroken. Daily a little nourishment was forced between his teeth and down the throat.

One year of sleep became two, then four, then six, and finally covered a period of seven long years. In all that time there had hardly been a moment of consciousness. At first it was the wonder of the community. Finally family, friends, and all who heard of it became accustomed to the report that Harmes slept on, and little was thought of the matter. It became an old story.

At last there came evident signs of returning consciousness. The family waited anxiously. Almost with bated breath. But it seemed ever so long before the sleeper was aroused. The faculties which had slumbered so long regained their functions slowly. Gradually they became more active, and finally he awoke.

These were anxious times. Although he conducted himself as the ordinary person when he retired at night, no one knew if he would wake on the morrow. Dr. Adams, of Rochester, was treating him. Harmes seemed to derive some benefit. He still had drowsy spells, but they were separated by longer periods. For the past six months he has been almost normal. He says that he feels well and strong and that he can do some work. But he lives in the fear that he will again fall asleep.

He was married in 1868 to Miss Kate Hassmann and to this union have been borne a family of eight children. They are strong and healthy and none exhibits traces of this drowsiness. But the rearing of this family and the attention required from physicians has exhausted his property.

Seventeen physicians were called in on the case at different times. Some of the most skillful in Chicago and St. Louis gave it their attention, and were compelled to admit themselves baffled.

NEW FORM OF SOLDER TO MAKE BIG CHANGES

William Whitney's Invention withstands all Tests

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 18—An invention that is expected to revolutionize the aluminum manufacturing of the world has just been perfected by William H. Whitney, of Clark University, in the form of a solder, which has been tested by the faculty of the university with results said to be astonishing.

One reason for the importance of such a discovery is that in trade circles aluminum is considered to be the metal of the future. It has been brought into public notice recently, and the industry is in its infancy in the mercantile world. Its products have been few and the manufacture of these have been hampered to a vast extent because the metal could not be welded, brazed or soldered. This meant that in its preparation for the market joints had to be made with rivets or similar devices and these are too clumsy for small articles. The only alternative is to stamp the articles and this can be done only with those of a certain shape.

The introduction of a solder that will make a sure hold fast job puts an entirely new complexion on affairs, and the firm in possession of the process will have an immense advantage over rivals.

All that Mr. Whitney will say about his invention is that he has perfected it to a certain degree and that the solder he has used is sound and practical. He had used it in instrument making and is using it at Clark University. The solder is applied with an iron, as in ordinary work of the kind.

The solder can be used both in joining aluminum plates and in uniting separate pieces of wire. The latter has been the harder problem of the two heretofore and is exceptionally valuable to manufacturers of aluminum, as it enables the wire to be used in greater lengths and makes it valuable for long distance telegraph or telephone work.

Members of the faculty of Clark University have made practical tests of the strength of this solder. Mr. Whitney has made joints and allowed two men to attempt their separation with pincers. The joints have lasted longer than the aluminum itself.

$1,000 A YEAR OR NO WIFE

Rule Against Which Chicago Bank Clerks are Kicking

Special to The Times.

Chicago, Aug. 18—The employees of the First National Bank of this city are said to be in revolt because the bank has a rule which prohibits employees from marrying until they receive a salary of at least $1,000 a year. This obstacle is said to have barred the way to many weddings recently. Bank officials deny the existence of the rule, but employees say that matrimony on less than $1,000 a year is almost certain to result in dismissal. An open protest was made and a strike was threatened yesterday. A manifesto was prepared and submitted to the banks officers. It called upon them for an increase in pay, for shorter hours and for additional help to transact business.

SKAGWAY'S EARTHQUAKE

Water in Lynn Canal Rose Five Feet Suddenly and Damaged Many Boats

Special to The Times.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 18—The steamer Amur arrived tonight from the North with details of the earthquake at Skagway. The earthquake occurred while the people were at church and terrorized the congregations. They were dismissed. The people arriving home found crockery, clocks and all movable articles out of place or on the floor and many chimneys toppled over. The water in Lynn Canal rose five feet in a few seconds and as suddenly subsided, damaging many boats.

Lieut. Emmons has left Skagway for Porcupine to make another investigation into the reported destruction of the Russian boundary post by British surveyors.

The Finch wrecking party has located the steamer Islander wrecked by an iceberg a year ago with heavy loss of life and a million of treasure. The wreck is in but 100 feet of water and it is thought that the treasure will be recovered.

DIED FOR THE RIGHT TO SING

Race Fight Because Negroes would not Keep Quiet at Their Work

Special to The Times.

New Orleans, Aug. 19.—The question as to whether negroes have a right to sing at their work has led to a race fight in Harrison county, in which one negro has been killed, one negro and one white man fatally wounded, and others less seriously wounded. The shooting occurred at the creosote works near Houston, where both whites and negroes work.

The negroes have been in the habit of singing while at their work, as is the way with nearly all negroes. The whites objected to the singing as disturbing them and announced their resolution to stop it. Nelson, Randell, one of the negroes, armed himself with a rifle and declared that he intended to fight for the right to sing.

A conflict occurred in which there was heavy firing on both sides. It continued until it was suppressed by the mounted police. It was then found that Randell was dead, William Anderson, colored, and William Hamilton, white, fatally wounded, and several others hurt.

MOROS STAB SENTRIES

Two American Soldiers Killed and One Wounded by a Forman

Manila, Aug. 18—A small party of Moros surprised an outpost of the Twenty-seventh infantry at Camp Vicars yesterday.

Sergeant Foley and Private Carey were killed and private Van Dorn was severely wounded.

The Moros, who numbered only a dozen were armed with spears and swords.

The morning was dark and foggy. The attacking party crawled to within a few feet of the sentinels and then sprang upon them suddenly.

The entire outpost rushed to the relief of the sentinels, but they were too late and the Moros escaped, though possibly a few of them were wounded.

The American sentinels were terribly cut by the swords and spears.

The attacking Moros were all from Bacolod, and the occurrence probably will result in a move against that town, which has a strong fort and other defences.

ARMENIAN CONGRESS VIEWED WITH MUCH FEAR

Discussion Might Provoke the Sultan to Harshness, When he Seems Disposed to Be Friendly

Special to The Times.

Constantinople, Aug. 17.—The approaching Congress of Armenians is viewed with great apprehension by many of their co-nationalists at Constantinople. Its object is ostensibly to call the attention of the European powers to the disabilities under which the Armenian people labor in the Ottoman Empire, but the result will be to attract the notice of the Sultan to a possible danger, real, imaginary, to himself. The powers of Europe are well acquainted with the situation through their representatives at Constantinople, and an assembly of agitators is not likely to exercise any pressure to bear upon the action of Europe. The following remarks will probably bring forth protests from secretaries of the various revolutionary societies, but it is opportune to state that the only accredited representatives of the Armenian people are their clergy, headed by the Patriarch at Constantinople. His efforts have never been aided, but very frequently countered, by the heedless conduct of the irresponsible and unauthorized committees in Europe. In spite of all that can be said to the contrary, it has been abundantly proved that the character of several of these committees is distinctly anarchic and revolutionary, and, whilst the Patriarch is endeavoring by protestations of loyalty and promises of good conduct, to obtain better treatment for the Armenians in Turkey, the committees leave no stone unturned to provoke the Sultan to reprisals by exciting the nation to insubordination, and appealing to the powers to interfere within his dominions. It would, indeed, be a case of "save me from my friends" if the committees could, by any stretch of imagination, be looked upon as the friends of the suffering provincial Armenians, who pay with their blood for the rash and unjustifiable acts of a few of their compatriots living in security outside the Sultan's authority.

AROUSING THE SULTAN.

If there is one thing more calculated than any other to excite the antipathy and resentment of the Sultan, it is the holding of congresses with the avowed object of securing foreign intervention in Turkey. Those who call together these meetings and participate in them have no mandate from the mass of the people and are self-constituted champions of a cause which, if it is a good one, requires no such free-lance support. As a matter of fact the Armenian Patriarch has lately received considerable favors from the Sultan in the matter of full permission to establish an orphanage at Prinkipo, and the remission of all dues in connection with the transfer of property, landing of material, etc.—a remission equivalent to a gift of one thousand pounds at least.

There is no cause whatever to apprehend a massacre at present, and it is a pity that a congress should strive to provoke one. It had been repeatedly observed lately that the strong point of the Sultan is his capacity for maintaining the peace when he wants to, as he has shown in Macedonia, in the face of great difficulty and provocation. The construction of barracks for regular troops in the Armenian centers of Asia Minor should be considered rather as a guarantee against the Kurds in case of need. The conduct of the regulars in Macedonia and elsewhere has always been subordinate, and, if told to preserve order, they will preserve it. It is only if the wrath of the Sultan is aroused by revolutionary meetings and acts that there is any ground for fearing that other instructions might be given to them. With a Patriarch on good terms with the authorities at Constantinople, the meeting of a congress in Europe is worse than superfluous, and those who attend it incur a grave responsibility towards their compatriots, in whose name, though unauthorised they profess to speak.

TWO AMERICANS KILLED

By Their Fast Automobile Running Into a Tree Near Paris

Evreaux, France, Aug. 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fair, Americans, who were related to Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, jun., (Miss Virginia Fair) were returning to Paris from Trouville today, when their automobile swerved, and crashed into a tree fifteen miles from here. Both were killed. The chauffeur became insane as a consequence of the shock.

Mr. and Mrs. Fair had a very fast 40 horse power automobile, which attracted considerable attention.

Mrr. Fair himself was driving his automobile at a high rate of speed, when one of the pneumatic tires burst. The machine swerved, collided with a tree with a terrible crash and was overturned. Mr. and Mrs. Fair were killed outright, and their chauffeur was badly injured.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 18.—Chas. Fair was the son and one of the heirs to the immense estate of the late Senator Fair. It is peculiar that the son of the late John W. Mackay, one of Senator Fair's partners, was also killed near Paris a few years ago by being thrown from his horse.

Paris, Aug. 18.—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fair, who were killed in an automobile accident yesterday, near Evreux, were embalmed and placed in coffins today, pending instructions from the family as to their disposition.

The chauffeur said today that before the accident, he noticed that the tire of the left hind wheel of the machine was deflated, and that the rim of the wheel was rubbing on the ground. He told Mr. Fair, who tried to stop, and the accident followed.

Peasants who saw the automobile say it was going at such a terrific pace at some stages that it was impossible to distinguish its color.

The firm which sold Mr. Fair the automobile last June says he paid $12,000 for it, and ordered another at the same price to be of 60-horse power. The second machine was almost ready for delivery.

Mr. Fair was passionately fond of automobiling, and never missed a day on the road. Several times he attempted to beat the one-hour record.

PRINTING POSTAGE STAMPS

U. S. Government Decides That Private Concerns Do the Best Work

Washington, D. C., Aug 18 — The opening bids at the United States Postoffice Department for the printing of postage stamps marks the beginning of the end of the government's costly experiment of printing its own stamps. For many years and up to eight years ago the stamps were printed by private contract, the work being done by a well known engraving company of New York. For some reason or other the government decided that the work could be better, and more cheaply done in the big government printing office in Washington, and finally the contract was taken away from the New York firm. The first stamps turned out by the government printing office were rank failures, as the business public well remembers. The [illegible] lacked a staying quality and the [illegible] was pronounced [illegible] of low grade. After awhile, however, the government printers got their hand in, and of late years there has been little complaint regarding the stamps. But it is now found that the work is costing too much, and that the private concerns can do it for less. The bureau of engraving and Printing has turned out five million stamps in eight years, and during the last year alone, it is estimated that the bureau lost $70,000 on the job. The explanation given is that the private concerns can do the work cheaper because they do not have to pay their employees the same wages that are paid by the bureau and give them all thirty days leave on full pay annually.

GOOD WILL RESULT FROM THE VISIT OF BOERS

Belgian Newspaper Deprecates Hospitility to Great Britain.

Public Manifestations in Connection with the Reception of Botha De Wet and De Larey in Holland to be Avoided

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 19.—The Independence Belge, in an article quoted by the Times correspondent in Brussels, thinks that much good will result from the visit of the ex-Boer generals to King Edward. It deprecates the idea that either the generals or Kruger favor the creation of a party in the Transvaal hostile to Great Britain, and trusts that the Boer leaders understand that their worst enemies are those who would compel Great Britain to adopt a pitiless line of action. Owing to the death of Lucas Meyer, says the correspondent, public manifestations in connection with the reception of Botha, DeWet, and Delarey, in Holland, will be avoided as far as possible. The warmth of England's greeting to the generals is not unfavorably noticed by the Dutch press, which interprets their absence from the naval review as a natural mark of respect for the memory of their late colleague.

THE FIREMEN ARE MASTERS

When a Fire Occurs They Have Full Control of the Property

A case of considerable interest came before Police Magistrate Dumble at Police Court yesterday, when the Assistant Chief of the Fire Brigade had a charge against John Alexander of interfering with the firemen in the discharge of their duties. The case arose out of the recent fire in the Compound Department at the Electric Works, Alexander being the night watchman at the works.

The firemen were not represented by counsel in the court, but Chief Rutherford and Assistant Chief Haggart handled their case. Mr. R. M. Dennistoun appeared for the defence.

It appears the defendant undertook to prevent the firmen putting water on the burning building, and a row occurred.

After the evidence was taken, Chief Rutherford addressed the Magistrate, and was followed by Mr. Dennistoun for the defence.

The Magistrate, in giving judgment, said this information was not laid for assault or as one man, but was laid by the firemen in a body to determine whether being called to a fire they are to have control of that fire, or whether any one, no matter what his interest sare, is justified in impeding or interfering with them. The firemen were the servants of the municipality, and not of the insurance man. It was true that the rates charged for insurance depended on the fire protection furnished and that the insurance companies had to pay the loss, but they were paid for taking the risk, and the firemen were the servants of the people. If a fire takes place in a block where there may be different tenants with different interests, it would not do to let the owner of the building control the firemen. The firemen were men of skill, of experience, and judgment, and it was only right that such men be given control. In this case the firemen when they arrived saw hose being put through a window, saw water being put on where there was appearance of fire, and they naturally concluded that there was fire to be put out. He thought in all they did they acted naturally and were justified. He did not think, however, that the practical question arose as to whether the firemen were in control or not. The night watchman could not assume to take control in case of fire. He might be a man of skill and judgment or he might not. The firemen when asked to turn off the water did so. Alexander, when the water went on him, lost his temper and committed what might be assault, but there would have been no difficulty if he had not lost his temper. He did not think the question in the charge need be raised.

"I think," said the Magistrate, "I will be doing all that is necessary under the circumstances, by saying that the firemen, even as against the proprietor, are masters of the situation where there is danger affecting the community. In cases like the Electric Works there are large interests represented by those who are not here and one man's judgment, though he be an official, is not to be set up against that of the firemen in their duty to the community. I think the firemen at all times where interests are concerned will listen to suggestions and act on them. In this case I think the watchman was hasty, but I do not think there was any intended clash with the firemen, and I don't think it necessary to assert what the community recognizes that the firemen are the masters of the situation at a fire."

He concluded by discharging the defendant, saying he hoped the position of the firemen had been clearly enough defined.

LOTH WAS IN AT THE DEATH.

Minneapolis Deputy Sheriff was on the Ground When Tracy Gave up the Ghost

Minneapolis, Min. Aug 19. — Deputy Sheriff, George Loth, who has just returned from a mission to the Pacific coast, is about the best informed man in Minneapolis regarding the capture of the outlaw Tracy, having been on the ground during the most excited period in the chase, and only a short distance away from him at the time he was shot, himself being wounded by pursuers.

Speaking of the wonderful escapes and the fight made by the outlaw, Mr. Loth says that there is no question but that he was assisted by people around Seattle. Many morbid persons of that section labored under the delusion that he was a great hero, and they gave him assistance at all times, which made it easy for him to elude capture.

Pursuers were Determined.

"Some people here have an idea that the men chasing Tracy were men of moderate stamina," said Mr. Loth, speaking of the matter. "The fact is they were mostly men of the greatest determination I ever saw. Sheriff Cudihee is a remarkable man, full of determination, and it was [illegible] to give Tracy a chance to see that the fugitive was finally brought to bay. Sheriff Straub the man whose long distance shot brought Tracy to earth, is a man who would have followed him single-handed and alone if he had to. I do not believe anything would stop that man from carrying out a purpose, but death. Sheriff Brower, of Everett is another man who is as brave as they make them, and absolutely knows no fear. Tracy made a great fight, but in the long run he was certainly up against it.

Shot While on Horseback.

"I saw Tracy when he was brought in. He had been shot while astride of his horse, and the main artery in his leg was severed. The bullet he put into his own head, entered at the junction of the left eyebrow and the nose and passed upward. Radiating from that point there were three splits in the skull, but the head was not blown open as reports say. Tracy was not a large man, and he was not bad looking.

"He managed to keep well shaved, and his short sandy mustache was always well trimmed. He had very little provisions left when his career was stopped. A half loaf of bread, a trifle of flour, and a strip of bacon was all that he had left. Straub's shot practically ended his career for the man never could have been saved by surgery at that time. The stories that he was insane are untrue. He was acute, bold and resourceful. Desperation answered with him for bravery.

Are now Tracking Lord.

Mr. Loth says that the chief of police of Everett, through whose bad judgment the prisoner, Lord, escaped, has called down the wrath of the people of the city upon him. The same sheriffs who tracked Tracy are enlisted in the service to capture Lord and Loth thinks they will succeed. The Everett chief was lenient with Lord because he told the chief that he was wanted back here on some of the municipal house-cleaning charges.

"It was so long ago that I have forgotten what it can be about," he said. "'I used to be a deputy auditor, and I suppose they think they have found something wrong at that office. That's all I can think of its being. It will all come out right.'"

Peculiar Wedding

Binghamton, N.Y., Aug. 18—A peculiar and romantic wedding took place this afternoon when Prof. Elbert Thomas, of Milwaukee and Miss Martha Dorr, of Hardstown, Ky., were married.

The couple met accidentally, but both are theosophists and each believes the other has existed before at some previous period.

Each had seen the other in visions, and they looked upon this accidental meeting as a thing arranged for them ages ago. They were made man and wife by Rev. Mr. Babcock less than an hour from the time they saw each other for the first time.

If You Are Conscious of failing Strength and Energy This Month, Make Use of Paine's Celery Compound
THE GREAT HEALTH AND STRENGTH GIVER

No Other Medicine Can Afford or Guarantee Such Happy Results

Men and women, young and old, of every rank in life, freely admit that they are more conscious of overtaxed nervous strength in the hot weather than at any other season.

When such a condition is experienced Paine's Celery Compound affords advantages and results that no other remedy can offer with honesty. It vigorously cleanses the blood and regulates the tardy circulation. It strengthens and encourages the kidneys and enables them to filter from the blood all waste and morbid matters; it secures strong, firm nerves, gives sweet and natural sleep to the nerve-tired and brain-weary. In a word Paine's Celery Compound is a true summer life-giver and health-builder. Mr. J. Ralston, of Nixon, Ont., says:

"It is now a year past since I had a severe attack of nervous prostration caused by chronic dyspepsia and I could not sleep at night. This condition of sleeplessness brought on delirium. I was attended by four of the best doctors, and took a great quantity of medicine, but it all failed to do me any good. I thought I would try your Paine's Celery Compound. After I had used four bottles the nervousness and dyspepsia left me, and I have done more work since than I have for years past. I now enjoy excellent health, and consider myself completely cured."

UNION LABEL

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 19 1902.

AN IMPERIAL STATESMAN

Lord Rosebery is calmly and impassively carrying out his expressed intention of "ploughing his lonely furrow," and long may he continue to do so. He was driven out of power, office and leadership because the Liberal party in Great Britain would not follow him. If the end of politics is compromise sufficient to remain in power, then Lord Rosebery is a failure. But if it is higher than this, and does not admit of the abandonment of principle and an outward semblance of union, where the inward reality does not exist, then Lord Rosebery is the strongest man in British public life today. Great Britain is in danger through not altogether unjustifiable revulsion against the present government, of plunging into an anti-Imperial policy which would threaten the Empire with disruption. No one, who keeps in touch with the pronouncements of the Daily News and Daily Chronicle, the great organs of Liberal opinion, can have a moment's doubt of this. But Lord Rosebery blocks the way. The Liberal party would not follow him before. Very well, he will not follow it now. He will make no compromise to be premier of Great Britain. Lord Rosebery's imperialism is of the right sort. It rests upon an inherited and deeply ingrained belief in the fundamental principles of democratic autonomy, and is coupled with a strong sense of Imperial responsibility and a profound grasp of Imperial problems. The colonies in particular should keep a watchful eye upon Lord Rosebery. It would not be surprising if within a few years they were lending him their moral support in controlling the destinies of the British Empire. [illegible]

IMPERIAL DEFENCE

The views of the Earl of Dundonald upon the subject of Imperial defence are entitled to respect, the more so as they appear to be practical, and unlike too many people's ideas, not to aim at too much. In the first place, he considers that the colonies should be encouraged to provide their own peace garrisons, and that English regiments should be withdrawn. In the second place, he does not think that commissions should be offered to colonial candidates in the home army. The cadet who enters the home army loses his identity as a colonial. He may have a very distinguished career, but it is a career in which his native country takes no interest. Lord Dundonald, however, would have an interchange of officers between the home and colonial branches of the service. He would have colonial officers admitted to the Staff college and a thoroughly imperial staff built up in this way. It is now admitted that the conditions of life in a colony develop a pretty knack of soldiering, and produce a brand of food for gunpowder superior to the variety which bears the Sandhurst label. To disturb it in the home service is both impossible and undesirable. Lord Dundonald would prefer to see it developed according to the genius of the different colonies, and made available for the purposes of Imperial defence by the interchange of officers and a representative Staff college. Lord Dundonald displays an amount of common sense in his ideas, whether they are wholly right or not, which will be highly grateful to the country of whose military organization he is now in command.

GET UP EARLY TO FISH

Dawn the Time When the Bass Bite Best in August

"The man who wants fish, many fish, in August must be an early riser. More now than at other times of the year the bass are striking just at daylight." Thus spoke a local nimrod to the Times yesterday.

Through the hot hours of the day they are shielded from the sun in deep holes or under the lilypads and are indisposed to move. They resume feeding about half an hour before sunset, and keep it up as long as they can see, but they do not strike with the voracity of the early morning hours.

Anglers at fishing resort hotels or at the fishing camps who wish to make scores during their vacation are up betimes. They do their casting between 4 and 8 a.m., and between 6 and 8 p.m. They find, too, that they take a third more fish in the morning than they do in the evening.

When the bass wakes up after a night of rest it is hungry and puts in two hours or so satisfying that hunger. Afterward it is disposed to loaf. Toward night it lays in a fresh supply of provender to last it through the dark hours, but this is more in the nature of a provision than supply of an actual need.

There are charming things about early morning fishing not seen and heard by those who are lazier. The lake or stream is deadly still when the first light comes and a slight mist hangs over, making things shadowy.

As the mist begins to rise birds in the woods wake up and start their chorus, and the notes come out to the man in the boat a half-mile away, with great clearness. He could swear that there were a dozen finches, warblers or grosbeaks within twenty yards of him.

Before the sun comes up sullen splashes will show that the bass are beginning their work and the circles in the water will lap against the sides of the boat in little waves. It is a good thing to keep the eyes open then and to cast immediately at any splash thirty yards. If the frog lands within five yards of it the bass which made the disturbance is apt to see it and to make a swift dash for its morsel of the day.

The sun engoldens the tree tops some minutes before it hits the surface of the lake, and the first beam lies along the oily waters like a ray from a lantern. Five minutes afterward all of the surface is aglow, the light penetrating to the bottom of shallow places and the day is fairly on.

The higher the sun climbs the slower the fish will be striking, not because they are afraid of the light, but because under the surface they are busily stocking up with minnows and other small swimming things. In a couple of hours every bass which has not been caught will have its belly full and be disposed to indolence.

If the man gets back to the hotel or camp with a dozen of the beauties he will be happy all the rest of the day and will be content to lounge about until the evening hours telling envious and less active companions just when, where and how he did it.

All fish from the little sunfish, commonly called punkin seed, up to the great muskallonge begin feeding just at daylight in the full summer and that is the time to go after them. This is especially true of bass and trout, though the trout being insect feeders are apt to be slower in starting.

INDIAN TROOPS REVIEWED.

Their Brilliant Uniforms Made a Gorgeous Picture of Coloring.

London, Aug. 16.—The Indian coronation troops to the number 1,200 were reviewed by King Edward at Buckingham palace this afternoon. The arrangements were similar to those of yesterday, when a body of colonials was reviewed. The Prince of Wales presented medals to the men, who were all picked troops, including Lord Curzon's bodyguard. They presented a fine spectacle in their handsome vari-colored uniforms. The Princess Victoria and other royal persons took snapshot pictures while the ceremony was in progress. Queen Alexandra and many notables were present. The King wore a bejeweled sword which cost $50,000, which was presented to him yesterday by the Maharajah of Jaipur.

The scene on the terrace was a very brilliant one, the European military and levee dress being quite outshone by the splendid apparel of the Indian princes. The Queen wore a heliotrope costume with a small toque of the same shade. She received a greater ovation than the King, as both passed down a line of notables, bowing and shaking hands. The young sons of the Prince of Wales, Princes Edward and Albert, constituted themselves aides to the King and fetched several general officers who smilingly obeyed their summons to an audience with their grandfather.

The great lawn below the terrace was a marvelous sight in red, yellow, green and blue. The Bengalese, Sikhs, Gurkhas, and Punjab cavalry made a strong contrast to a single khaki spot, where the British regulars from India stood. At the word of command fluttering lances, rifles and carbines were grounded, and the contingents, one by one, filed past the royal canopy, saluting their Majesties, and receiving medals at the hands of the Prince of Wales.

At the close of the review the troops were drawn up in front of the King, who addressed the officers as follows:

"I wish to convey to all ranks the high satisfaction it has given me to see this splendid contingent from India. I almost feared, owing to my serious illness, that I would be prevented from having the advantage of seeing you, but I am glad to say that, by God's mercy, I am well again. I recognize among you many of the regiments I had the advantage of seeing at Delhi, during my tour of India. I hope the contingent has enjoyed its stay in England, and that all may return in safety to their homes. I wish you to convey these sentiments from me to all ranks of all your commands."

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain. This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries, we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING
FOR HORSE COLLARS.
THE AMERICAN
INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO.,
OF PHILADELPHIA.

Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 32,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an Immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM HALPEN, GREEN & CO.

Philadelphia, December 28th, 1901.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours truly,
HALPEN, GREEN AND CO.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH.
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well.

Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER.
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

Interesting Items.

The Gloucester, Mass., fishermen regard Kipling as a hoodoo, as every one of the twenty fishing-boats belonging to their fleet named by him in "Captains Courageous" has gone down at sea, the last two of the ill-fated boats foundering in the recent big storm off the Massachusetts coast.

Only a little while ago a woman was arrested and taken to the police station for smoking on Broadway, New York. In the dining-room of a New York first-class hotel an engraved card is now placed on each of the tables each evening bearing this inscription: "Gentlemen and ladies wishing to smoke may do so in the grill room." So the world moves.

For the first time in the history of Paris art exhibitions, photographs have been received as exhibits at the annual Salon. The photographs were submitted by Edward Steichen, a young New Yorker, and are regarded as a great triumph. It is said that the decision to admit photographs almost caused a split in the jury. The pictures were, therefore, entered under the title of engravings.

The experiment is being tried by the New Zealand Telegraph Department of issuing telegrams in typewritten form. The operators have, of course, not only to acquire speed at typewriting, but also to accustom themselves to the clicking of the keys of the typewriter as well as of the telegraph instrument. So far the experiment has worked well—to the receiver of the message it is certainly a great improvement upon manuscript telegrams.

According to the "Pall Mall Gazette," Gondersheim, a German village, has recently been en fete. The occasion was the honoring of a hen which had laid its thousandth egg. Many of the houses were decorated with flags, while in the evening the proprietor of the hen entertained his friends at a supper at which the principal dish was a gigantic omelet. The function was a splendid success, and the health of the hen was drunk with great enthusiasm.

There seems no limit to the variety of uses to which a man-of-war can be put when past her work. Here is the latest. A syndicate of sporting men is said to be considering a scheme for purchasing the old American ship "Vermont," should the bill for her preservation fail to pass. The idea is to fit her up as a floating boxing-ring, which can be moved out to sea, so that the merry mills of the fancy may be brought off without police interference.—"United Service Gazette."

The "search-light telephone" is announced from Washington. The beam from a powerful light has been employed in lieu of a wire, and talking done to the distance of half a mile. The telegraphic account adds that the inventor has not yet taken out his patents. There are several reasons for this. It was in the same city of Washington, twenty years ago, that the excellent Dr. Graham Bell made his famous experiments with what he first called his photophone. It is curious that this amazing work is so little known. Dr. Bell talked over a ray of sunlight to a distance of near two miles. A pair of parabolic reflectors served for sender and receiver, and a pair of selenium cells answered to the magnets of an ordinary telephone.

The Kansas City "Journal" alleges Biblical authority for the declaration that the good die young. "Seth," it says, "lived 912 years. Enos lived 905 years, Cainan lived 910 years, Mahalaleel lived 895 years, Jared lived 962 years, Methuselah lived 969 years, and Lamech lived 777 years. Of Enoch, the only good one in the lot, the chapter says: 'And Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him, and all the days of Enoch were 365 years.' Being good, Enoch lived a measly little period of only 365 years, while the others, being given to sin, lived to grow up to manhood. It always seemed strange to us that preachers pay so little attention to the facts of the Bible."

A contract was let last week for carrying Uncle Sam's mail in Alaska by dog-sleds. The successful bidder was Oscar Fish, and his route lies between Eagle and Valdes, a distance of 414 miles. He makes two trips a month, and receives nearly $1,500 a trip, or $36,000 a year. Only 300 pounds are carried per trip, and this is usually made up of letters, few newspapers. Post-Office Department officials say that the sum paid to Fish is very reasonable when it is considered that he makes the trip by dog-sledge, and that he has the most dangerous route of any mail-carrier in the world. He has several times been given up for dead by residents of Valdes and Eagle, but so far he has always managed to reach the end of his journey, although sometimes overdue, and occasionally very much battered up. He has fallen down precipices, got mixed up in avalanches, and has been starved and frost-bitten.

"A farmer ought to read a great deal, just the same as any other business man."

"Yes," answered Farmer Corntossel. "It keeps me so busy posting up on railroad rates and the tariff that I'm sometimes afraid I won't have time to raise the stuff to send to market.—Washington Star.

Keble's Mistake.

Apropos of the rather slighting remark in Cecil Rhodes's will, with reference to the college authorities of Oriel, that they "are like children as to commercial matters," someone recalls the story once current of John Keble, who in his time was bursar of Oriel. The worthy poet was thrown into a panic by the discovery that the college accounts came out about two thousand pounds on the wrong side. The learned and pious men of Oriel tried in vain to find out where the error was, and it was not until an expert was called in that it was discovered that Keble, in casting up a column, had inadvertently added the date of the year to Oriel's debts.

did with the boy," I breathlessly reminded him.

"The plan was Sintra's," he answered, dully. "It was all her idea from the first—for she can hate well, and feel no relenting. She hated Ermyntrude first for taking my love, and afterwards for throwing it away. She proposed that the petted darling of those who had spoilt my life should grow up as a child of the streets—a waif, a vagabond. And there seemed a certain poetic justice, to my mind, in the thought. We would lose sight of him ourselves, she said, so that, in no circumstances whatever, would it be possible for us to restore the child to his parents.

"I agreed. But when I saw the little fellow, and he looked at me with Vincent's eyes, already I half repented what I had done, and what I was about to do. Unknown to Sintra, I put on his arm the mark of the heart which had once symbolized so much to his mother and me——"

"The heart-shaped scar!" I exclaimed aloud, springing up from the chair by the bedside. "Oh! then the boy is found—he's found!"

Walter Leigh stared at me as if I had gone mad; for in the joy and excitement of the knowledge that he had suddenly given I was laughing and crying at once.

"It is true," I assured him. "Unless—unless, indeed, there are others in the world whose arms wear the same mark. I know the heart-shaped scar—so well—too well. I saw it many times on Lady Cope's arm. I saw it on your sister's, and —on one other. All three were exactly the same, as if one hand had made them."

"Tell me about that other," he commanded, almost fiercely.

I told him about John Bourke—told him in as few words as I could the story of the young man's life as I had heard it from Mrs. Jennett. "The mark is near the left wrist, on the inside of the arm," I said at last.

"It was there that I placed it on the boy," the sick man answered. "He was a brave little chap, and would not take the bribe that I offered him, though he was only two years old. I remember that he hardly winced, though I must have hurt him, and he did not shed a tear. I believe, child, that you have done Ermyntrude's bidding. You have found her boy."

"If you were sorry for what you had done, why did you never search for him?" I demanded, reproachfully.

"I did; I even advertised, and engaged a private detective to find the child if he could. But that was years after the thing was done; and there was little enough I could tell. A dozen years before, a little boy, with a purple heart tattooed on his left arm, had been set down to play with some ragamuffins in a street in Whitechapel—a far worse neighborhood then than now. There he had been abandoned, and nothing had been heard of him since. The detective spent a good deal of money, but he made no discoveries. The child's fate remained a mystery; and though years have passed since I made those few spasmodic efforts to atone for my sin, it was a mystery still, until you told me to-night of this young man of the people, John Bourke. I would give all the life I have left in me—save enough to look once in his face—if he could be brought here. I should know even more surely then."

"Somehow you shall see him!" I exclaimed. "I don't see yet how I am to get away from this house, where your sister brought me to please Roger Cope. But I know that I shall do it. And I shall meet John Bourke again—there can be no wrong in that now—I shall tell him the truth about himself. Why?" I exclaimed, in the surprise of a new thought which had come to me suddenly for the first time. "Why, everything is really his! This place—which was his father's, Sir Vincent Cope's, Arrish Mell Court, and—even the title. All—all that Roger Cope thinks belongs to him!"

"Pray Heaven that Roger Cope does not find out the truth before the rightful heir knows it!" Walter Leigh exclaimed.

"Why?" I asked him, breathlessly.

"Because I believe there is nothing Roger Cope would not do to keep what he has."

I drew in my breath sharply, and was silent, intently thinking.

I, speaking out on some unreasoning impulse, had told Sintra Leigh of the heart-shaped scar on John Bourke's arm. No wonder she had shown emotion. I understood the meaning of it now; for doubtless I had given her as great a shock of enlightenment as I had given her twin-brother to-night. How she had come into communication with Roger Cope and why she and Walter Leigh were living in this house I did not yet know. But I did know that the woman in black was on friendly terms with Roger; that she had seen him since I had told my all-important piece of news; and that Roger had today gone off to some place unknown, carrying with him a portmanteau. With these things shaping strangely together in my mind, Walter Leigh's words sent an ominous creeping chill through my nerves.

"I did not know," he continued, slowly, "that Ermyntrude was dead; therefore I did not know that Roger Cope had anything more than his title, and this house, which came to him long ago on his cousin Vincent's most untimely death. But you say that Arrish Mell Court is his—that everything is his. Does that mean that Ermyntrude left him all that was hers in a will?"

"No," I said. "There was no will. Roger was her solicitor, and he told me that he had often advised her to make a will, but she kept putting it off. If I had been her daughter, as I believed, I should have expected the dear old home and the money to be mine if I had ever thought of such things at all. But Roger undeceived me. And, rather than marry him, as he asked me to do, I went away and lived for a while with my own people."

Walter Leigh looked at me more closely than he had done yet. "So Roger Cope wished to marry you, in spite of knowing that you would have nothing but yourself to give?"

"Yes, I suppose," I admitted, reluctantly, "that he must really have cared for me."

"That is not hard to believe," said the sick man, in the curious hollow voice that seemed somehow to put him outside the world of living human beings. "You are no ordinary girl. But his head may have prompted the wish as well as his heart. I don't believe for a moment that Ermyntrude died without a will. If he was her solicitor he may have made the will and destroyed it. Besides, she kept a diary, I know. I knew it of old, and she spoke of it on that last night in April when we

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital — AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $2.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

Brooch Found

A small brooch was picked up on hte street yesterday. The owner can have it by calling at Times Bookstore.

Last Night's Supper

The members of "C" Squadron, C.M.R., gave a complimentary banquet to Capt. Nasmith last night at the Snowden House. The local members of the corps were out in force, and and the affair was very enjoyable. The boys assembled at the fire hall and, headed by the band, marched to the C.P.R. station, and escorted the guest of the evening to the hotel. A feature of the evening was the presentation of a sword to the gallant captain.

Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons decorated the dining room with their customary artistic taste.

Lost His Way

Justice Bloat, of town, invited two friends to go for a drive to Lakefield on Sunday, and while driving around Justic ethought that if he followed the telegraph poles he would be alright, but to his surprise he found that they ended at a railway crossing two miles out of the way. On their way back Justice saw a good road and started to drive up it, and at the end of it was a farmer's barnyard.

The Late Timothy Cronin

The funeral of the late Timothy Cronin will take place this morning at nine o'clock to the Roman Catholic cemetery. The deceased was the second son of Mr. John Cronin, and passed away on Saturday morning last. He had been ill for some time, and was greatly esteemed and beloved. The Times extends its sincere sympathy to the afflicted family.

The Crops in Peterborough County

A citizen who has just returned from a trip through the country, reports that the crops are so abundant that the farmers cannot store their grains in the barns. Large stacks of barley, oats, and wheat, are to be seen on every farm. The second growth of clover is nearly two feet high. Men cannot be secured to do the harvesting. Even the women have to assist in getting in the crops. The farmers do not expect to get all their grain stowed away till the end of September.

Weary Brain Workers

All fagged out, ideas flow slowly, as molasses, snap and energy gone! The buoyancy that made work a pleasure, has gone also. A doctor would say you are run down, enervated, neither eating or digesting enough. It's Ferrozone you need to brace up that fitful appetite and improve assimilation and digestion, so that lots of pure strong blood will be formed to nourish the broken down system. Ferrozone will drive away the tired feeling restore your spirits and energy, revive your ambition and strength for work. No tonic or rebuilder like Ferrozone—try it. Price 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50 at Druggists.

Hamilton's Pills cure Constipation.

Picking Potato Bugs by Machine

A Times' representative was shown a machine for picking potato bugs that will probably be used extensively in the near future. A farmer, who is of an inventive turn of mind, took portions of a fanning mill and installed them on a low dog cart, rigged up a mechanical device connected with the wheels, hitched a horse to the wagon and drove through the rows of potatoes in his field. The bugs are brushed off the vines into a receptacle, the labor of several men being saved by the method. In two hours the inventor gathered a bushel of potato bugs with the aid of his machine.

Married at Cobourg

Cobourg Post: A marriage has been arranged and will take place at St. Peter's church, on August 23rd, between Miss Vivien Sartoris daughter of the late Algernon Charles Frederick and Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, Warsash, Hampshire, England, and grand-daughter of the late General Ulysses S. Grant, and Mr. Frederick Roosevelt Scovel, son of Chevalier and Madame Edward Scovel, nee Marcia Roosevelt. Mr. Scovel is a cousin of President Roosevelt, a nephew of Mr. Frederick Roosevelt, of New York, and of Madame Ricardo Diaz-Albertini, of Cobourg. The announcement was made at a reception given by Mrs. Grant-Sartoris on Thursday afternoon at the "Hill," the beautiful summer home of Mrs. U. S. Grant, where a brilliant company of Americans had assembled. The guests numbered over one hundred, and there were representatives of nearly every State of the Union. The affair promises to be one of the most brilliant ever witnessed in Cobourg. A large number of prominent American people have been invited to the wedding.

The following was received from Mr. James Stewart, who has, with Mrs. Stewart, been enjoying himself in Scotland. It is written on a postcard on which appears a Highland piper, dressed in the well known Robertson tartan. Mr. Stewart says:

Aberdeen, Aug. 8, 1902.

Dear Robertson:

I came across this post card the other day. You ought to be proud of your clan. I sail from Glasgow for New York on Coronation Day. Have had a delightful time. Kindest regards to all friends. Yours sincerely,

INJURED AT SARATOGA

A Brother of Mr. Sam Ray Met with an Accident on Saturday

A despatch from Saratoga says: "But for the accident in the steeplechase there would have been nothing to dim the lustre of one of the greatest days in the history of the Saratoga course. At the fourth obstacle near the start for six furlongs race Rising Sun stumbled after landing and threw his rider, 'Nat' Ray with such violence, that his senseless body was picked up limp an dinert, and carried to an hospital, where at the moment of writing his condition is not positively known. Meanwhile, the riderless horse, Rising Sun, continued over the full steeplechase course, more or less impeding Sallust, whose rider dare not make a strong move for fear that he would go down. Kophone therefore had an easy task in winning, with Rising Sun second, a length away, without its rider, and Sallust, four lengths behind. Ray lives in Toronto, and won his way with the New York public by his skilful handling of Inspector Stephen, G. W. Jenkins, and other jumpers."

"Nat" Ray is a brother of Mr. Sam Ray, of town. Mr. Ray has received no information from Saratoga other than the above despatch.

MAN HOUSEKEEPER

Tried It Thirty Days

There is one case on record where a man had a good easy time of it while his wife was away and she tells the tale.

"Circumstances made it necessary for me to leave husband for a month to pursue his bachelorhood as best he could. He resolved to give Grape-Nuts a thorough trial as he had for years been subject to bilious attacks and indigestion.

During my absence he gained in weight and his health seems perfect, therefore I give you the benefit of suffering men in particular, and women in general. His menu for 30 days: four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts sprinkled with a little salt and covered with good cream, one slice of bread and butter, one large cup of Postum Cereal Coffee (made according to directions) and all the fruit he wanted.

He worked during the time nine hours a day and never realized he possessed a stomach. This diet my husband earnestly recommends to office men, students and to all people of sedentary habits especially, and let me add it to all wives, this meal can be prepared by an inexperienced servant, a young son or daughter, thereby saving yourself hours of labor. Try it. It will make your work lighter, your purse heavier, your body healthier and all of you happier." Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

DEATH OF MRS. TELFORD

An Old and Respected Resident of Smith Passes Away

There passed away on Saturday last, Mrs. Wm. Telford, an old and esteemed resident of Smith. The deceased, whose maiden name was Hannah Nicholson, was the daughter of the late Isaac Nicholson, of Smith, and was born on the same farm on which she died, 75 years ago. Over 50 years ago she married the late Wm. Telford, who predeceased her about 8 years. The following sons and daughters survive her: Messrs. John, of Ennismore; Robert, on the homestead; and William, also of Smith; and Mrs. John Logan, town; Mrs. Wm. Nicholson, of Bridgenorth; and Mrs. John Grant, of town.

The deceased lady was greatly esteemed and beloved by all who knew her. She was a life-long member of St. Paul's church. Her husband was well known throughout the country as the "bard of Smith," his poems being in the libraries of many people in the district.

The funeral took place from the family residence, Communication road, at two o'clock on Monday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

Arrangements for Peterborough's Big Show Progressing Favorably

The Peterborough Central Fair promises to be a record breaker. The details are being arranged, and the outlook is bright for a large number of entries.

The committee on whom devolves the duty of making arrangements for the accomodation of the exhibits of ladies' work and fine arts, are placing some of the exhibits in another part of the building, so as to afford more room. The prize list in these departments has been enlarged.

Bandmaster Slatter, of the "Kilties," the famous band of the 48th Highlanders, which will be the special attraction of the fair, has forwarded the programme for the evening entertainment, which shows that a rich musical treat is in store for those who attend. It will not be possible for the crowd to hear this celebrated band at any other time for the small admission fee that will be charged. Further announcements will be made in this regard.

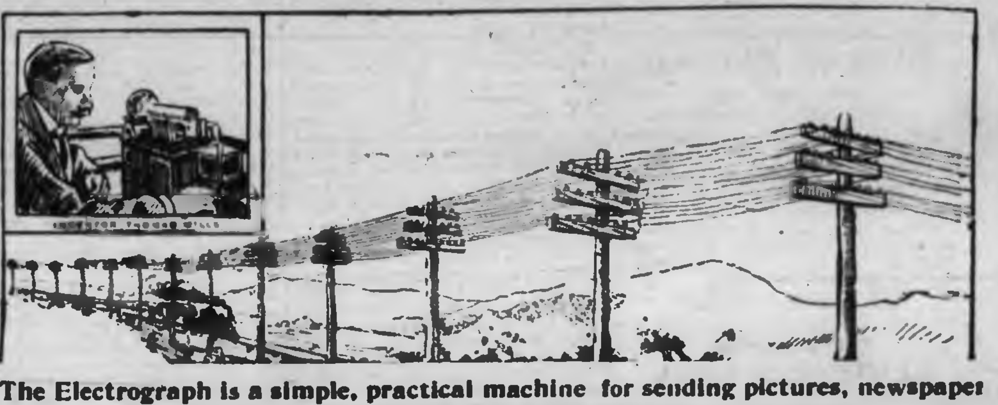
STOCK SOLD ON INSTALLMENT

To Investors! A Chance of a Lifetime.



The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000 $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $600 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realised a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realise the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

ENGLAND EXTENDING HER FOOTHOLD ON RED SEA

German Newspapers Sensitive Over Her Great Strides in Persia

Said that War is Very Probable—England is Not Worrying, However, and May be Depended on Holding Her Own

Berlin, Aug. 20—The German press shows a curious sensitiveness regarding the alleged extension of British influence in the Red Sea. Taking the present visit of the Abyssinian deputation to St. Petersburg as the text, the Kreuz Zeitung delivers a sermon on this subject calling attention to the onward march of England in Arabia and to the approaching struggle between England, Russia and France for mastery in the Red Sea. The object of the leading Conservative journal is doubtless to call attention to the subject of France and Russia and cause alarm:

"England (says the Kreuz Zeitung) has been gradually obtaining a mastery over the Turkish Provinces of Hajaz and Yemen., while the attention of Europe has been occupied with the Boer war. English newspapers, it says have described a state of insurrection there which did not exist, with the object of assisting the Government. Lord Curzon's plan is to become master of Mecca and Medina and the masters of Mecca and Medina are the masters of the Mohammedan world. Military conquest of the land is not intended by England; only a peaceful change. But Russia and France must be reckoned with These Powers cannot permit England to become master on both littorals. If they did, Obok would cease to be of importance, and Russia would see her dream of establishing herself at Raheita or elsewhere on the Red Sea vanish. This is why the Negus is now negotiating with Russia. He wishes to prevent his country falling into a state of vassalage to England."

The Kreuz Zeitung professes to believe that the Abyssenian question may speedily become acute. Its solution will certainly not contribute to a better feeling between England and Russia. I hear that the Russian Synod intends to send a number of orthodox priests to Abyssinia during the autumn, whose mission will be to draw closer the bonds said to exist between the orthodox Russian and Abyssinian churches.

TURKISH EMPIRE IN THROES OF DECAY

Creditors Clamor But no Money is Available

OUTLOOK EXCEEDINGLY GLOOMY

Scheme for Unification of the Public Debt Apparently Shelved and no Other Effort Made to Straighten the Porte's Finances

Constantinople, Aug. 19 — Interest in Young Turkey has been revived by the report of the discovery of a conspiracy among the Arab Sheikhs in Constantinople, a dozen of whom have been banished. The conspirators are believed to have been the organs of the Young Turks in Europe, and the Sultan has, therefore, instructed the Porte and his representatives abroad to keep him informed of the movements of Young Turks.

The Grand Vizier has been unwell—his illness is said to have been of a diplomatic character—and in order to hasten his recovery the Sultan has presented him with a large sum. Said Pasha feels sorely his helplessness and powerlessness as Grand Vizier, and he is believed to retain his office, in which he is, like his predecessor, a mere figurehead, because of the financial advantages it procures to him. A Turkish Grand Vizier is paid better than an English Prime Minister, and, besides other advantages, he is very frequently the object of his sovereign's generosity. Said Pasha is somewhat of a miser, and he is even said to count every evening, before going to bed, the money that he has in his house.

Besides the Grand Vizier, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Tewfik Pasha, has received a valuable token of Imperial favor and of recognition of his diplomatic successes. The Sultan has presented him with the mansion in which he now lives, and which has for the last fifteen years been the official residence of the Turkish Foreign Minister. It was built by Baron Blanc, formerly Italian Ambassador here, and cost about £40,000; on his departure from Constantinople the Baron sold it to the Government.

The Minister of Finance is so hard up that an Irade issued a fortnight ago instructed him to pay a month's salary to State officials remains a dead letter. The garrison of Constantinople, which had given unmistakable signs of unrest owing to non-payment, received a month's pay yesterday, the necessary amount having been borrowed from the Tobacco Regie. This company is anxious to obtain an extension of the term of its tension of the term of its concession, and, in the hope of winning the good graces of the Sultan and his Government, it readily consented to advance £150,000 to the Treasury.

The civil functionaries, however, are not so fortunate, and they will have to wait until the Minister of Finance can scrape together the £120,000 required for the purpose. Messrs. Lorando and Tubini are also waiting for the payment of the fourth instalment of the indemnity which the Government has engaged to pay them, and the date for the fifth installment is fast approaching. The Porte has dropped the pretext that it retains the July installment as compensation for the arrears of taxation due by these gentlemen—a pretext which was wholly untenable in view of the terms of the agreement with France, but confesses its inability to pay, and promises to do with the first money which comes to hand.

SLASHED HIS BRIDE WITH A STILETTO

Spurned by a Pretty Italian Woman, Who Married Another

REGUNTO DISFIGURED HER FACE.

The Assault was Committed when the Bridal Party was Leaving the Church

Special to The Times.

New York, Aug. 19.—While leaving the church in which only half an hour before she had been married, Mrs. Josephine Bracco, 21 years old, an exceptionally pretty Italian woman, was yesterday attacked by a discarded admirer, knocked down on the sidewalk, and slashed across the right cheek. She is now in the Flower Hospital in a serious condition, with a stiletto wound extending from her mouth to her right ear that will leave a life disfigurement. Her assailant said by the police to have been Pasquale Regunto, nineteen years old, of 322 East Sixty-third street, escaped, with an angry crowd of a hundred or more at his heels.

Mrs. Bracco, formerly Josephine Morgono, came to this country several months ago. She is light and pretty, and prior to coming to this country was the sweetheart of Pasquale Regunto. When she left Italy Regunto followed. But the young woman's affection grew cold and yesterday she was married to Guiseppe Bracco, a wealthy fruit dealer, living at 333 East street.

Regunto pleaded that the young woman marry him, but she put him off from time to time. She finally refused to go out with Regunto, and remained at the home of her uncle, Antonio Gerono, 330 East Sixty-third street, and received the calls of Bracco. The fruit merchant had much money and gave the young woman many handsome presents. Regunto had nothing to offer but his affection. It was not long until the girl had to decided between the two suitors. She chose the merchant and cast off the laborer.

One evening Regunto met the girl and declared that if she did not marry him she would never marry anybody else.

Yesterday Bracco led his bride-to-be to the city hall, where a civil marriage ceremony was performed. Following the couple was Regunto.

From the city hall the couple went to the Church of St. Catherine of Sienna, in Sixty-ninth street, between First avenue and Avenue A. There a church ceremony was performed. Regunto followed the party into the church and stood in a shadowy corner while the marriage words were said.

When Bracco and his new wife left the church they walked home. No one saw Regunto. In front of 187 First avenue Bracco felt himself jostled to one side. He turned to see the offender, but heard instead a scream from his bride. He saw her lying on the sidewalk, stabbed.

Regunto dodged through the crowd and ran to Fifty-ninth street, where he jumped on a cross town car and escaped.

The bride's condition last night was said to be serious.

GERMANY AND SAMOAN ISLAND

Occupation of the Country Not Satisfactory to Traders

Berlin, Aug. 20—Judging by letters which reach this country from Apia, the German occupation of the Samoan Islands Upolu and Savaii, has not resulted in the anticipated blessings to these possessions. A good deal of discipline has been introduced into the Government and of iron regulations vigorously carried out there is no lack, but this is about all. Instead of attending to their plantation work the natives are engaged in road making, which is unnecessary. Planters complain of a want of laborers and demand that Malayan and Chinese coolies be imported. Owing to the roseate descriptions of the islands circulated in Germany a crowd of impecunious Germans have arrived to plant cocoanut trees, but do nothing but hang around the hotels. The imports have sunk 25 per cent., and the exports 20 per cent. German traders complain that Australia and New Zealand have the lion's share of the trade.

BOER ACCOUNT OF WAR AT NO DISTANT DATE

Tim Healey Praises The Irish Foresters—Emperor William Was Generous

Special to The Times.

Rotterdam, Aug. 19.—De Wet, Delarey and Botha, the Boer generals, and their party landed here this morning. They were given a hearty welcome by the municipal authorities and representatives of Boer associations. Many ladies presented bouquets to the generals' wives. The ships in the harbor displayed their flags. The party proceeded to The Hague.

The Hague, Auf. 19. — A public reception was accorded the Boer generals on their arrival here today from Rotterdam. Gen. Eyter, in a speech paid a tribute to their heroic deeds. Gen. Botha replied, expressing the appreciation of the Boer officers at the warmth of their reception, and referring to the consolation which it had been to them to know that while they fought, their women and children were being supported by Dutch generosity. The time, added Gen. Botha, had not yet arrived to make public it they know, but probably at no distant date they would publish their account of the war.

The visitors were escorted in procession through the town in open carriages and were everywhere loudly cheered by the crowds assembled. A number of Boers who served during the war formed a guard of honor for the generals.

London, Aug. 20.—A telegram from Dublin says that Timothy M. Healey, M.P., speaking at Dundalk at the opening of the Irish National Forester's Hall, referred to the fact that the Irish Foresters had severed themselves from the English organization, and never again, Healey declared, would the Union Jack or lion or unicorn stain their own immortal green. Healey said that the Foresters had given an instance of practical home rule, everything they used being made in Ireland, whereas all things the Tories used, even policemen's clothes, were made in Germany. He had once asked in the Commons that the policemen's batons and handcuffs at any rate being made in Ireland.

EMPEROR MET WALDECK-ROUSSEAU.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 20.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says that Figaro has published the log book of the French yacht Ariane, owned by Gaston Menier, on which ex-Premier Waldeck-Rousseau was a guest when he recently met Emperor William in Norwegian waters. When the Emperor went on board the Ariane in his yachting dress and wearing white shoes, he asked to be presented to the ladies, and to be allowed to inspect the yacht in detail. He spoke with everyone, talking French fluently. He gaily congratulated Waldeck-Rousseau on looking so well, and complimented the women on being such good sailors, confessing that the sea sometimes made him ill. His Majesty was then shown over the yacht. He examined everything, even questioning the cooks and saying that he regretted that there was no French chef on the Hohenzollern. He then went on deck again and talked for an hour about naval, philosophical, social and foreign questions. When he was entertaining Waldeck-Rousseau's party at dinner on the Hohenzollern, the Kaiser talked about the theatre and Paris fashions to Mme. Waldeck-Rousseau, who sat on his right. French music was played during the dinner, and Rhine and Bordeaux wines were drunk.

NOT OBSERVING TREATY.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 20.—The Times' correspondent at Hong Kong says that the Chinese have not been observing the terms of the convention of 1886. In spite of the fact that the British Foreign Office declares that it has not received consular information on the subject, the opium trade has been completely stopped at Canton and Swatow for several months. The officials are endeavoring to levy an extra tax of £40 per chest. The correspondent remarks that, coming while the new British-Chinese treaty is under negotiation, this attempt is significant.

HELP FOR AMERICAN MINERS.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 20.—The Times announces that William Abraham, M.P., and President of the South Wales Miners' Federation, speaking at Rhondda Valley on Sunday, urged that the Executive of the Federation be recommended to send £1,000 to the United States to assist the 140,000 miners on strike there, as they were fighting for the principle dear to all workers in Europe, viz., the formation of a Board of Conciliation to settle the strike. If Morgan failed he (Abraham) hoped the Welsh and English miners would give their American colleagues every support. Both the Rhondda and Pontypridd districts voted in favor of sending money.

Montreal, Aug. 18.—Hon. Mr. Justice Girouard, of the Supreme Court, has returned to Canada after a two months' stay in England and a short visit to France. What struck his Lordship more than anything else was the affection of the British people to the King and Queen. He is convinced that there is no reigning family in Europe that begins to be so beloved by its subjects as that of the Mother Land. But, he added, that if the people of England were loyal to their King, His Majesty also pays a great deal of attention to all classes of his people. He has yet to see a country where individual liberty is appreciated and so properly protected as in Great Britain. He was, of course, brought into contact with a great many of Britain's leading statesmen, and did not lose sight of the fact that although Premier Balfour is a safe man and less objectionable to the continental nations than Mr. Chamberlain, the latter is the big man in British public life, just as Lord Kitchener is the great English soldier of his day. Kitchener is not so expensive after all, and he is a man of surprisingly few words."

Canadians, says the Judge, cannot realize without being on the spot what Lord Strathcona and Mr. Colmer have done for Canada during the last year, and all would be glad to learn that the High Commissioner enjoys the best of health, spite of unceasing activity.

His Lordship also visited France, and for the first time saw the home of his ancestors. The first Canadian member of the Girouard family came from Montlucon, 200 miles south of Paris, and there His Lordship spent several pleasant days, and secured some interesting data respecting the family tree.

London, Aug. 19.—In an article quoted by the Paris correspondent of the Times, the Fiargo discussed the future relations between the British and The Boers. The paper says Great Britain's attitude toward the burghers possesses a certain nobleman. Her admiration for heroism is sufficiently strong to cuase her to open her arms and heart to the superb, vanquished Boers, who do right to accept the outstretched hand. The Boers and the British, having the same religious faith and sentiment, are in duty bound to understand one another. If, says the Fiargo, the Boers agree to be received as brothers, it is because they think the war has been loyally fought, and feel there is no question of crushing them, but that the intention is to cultivate their pride.

COAL AT $14 A TON

Such is the Prospect Which Confronts the People of New York

New York, Aug. 19—Anthracite at $14 a ton is in prospect here, according to one firm of miners and dealers. This, of course, is contingent on a continuation of the strike for a few weeks more. While anthracite, which has been bought at $3.50 a ton wholesale, is expected to be put on the market in a week or so at $11 and $11.50 a ton retail, some of the dealers have raised the present retail price to $16 a ton. A member of the coal firm mentioned said: "All the coal that had been hoarded up is practically cleaned up, and those who happen to have small stocks on hand are not parting with it except to favored customers. It is impossible to fix a price now. Anthracite sells simply for what it will bring. It is a luxury and is only bought by people who must have it, and who have the money to pay for it." The representative of another large firm said, "I went along the line of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad between Jersey City and Scranton and found all the yards empty. There were not even coal dust in them. At other places I found barges laden with anthracite. What they carried might seem a large quantity to laymen, but it would be only a drop in the bucket so far as the needs of New York are concerned." Presidents of the coal-carrying companies will not undertake to predict when the strike will be over. They are inclined to extend the probable time when it will end from September 1 to October 1.

ENGLAND TO RESIST AMERICAN INVASION

REALIZES IN IT A MENACE TO HER COMMERCIAL LIFE

Colleges of Commerce and Journalism to be Established to Create Captains of Industry and Good Newspaper Men

London, August 19—London has at length decided to resist the American invasion. This is to be done by establishing faculties of commerce and journalism at the principal universities and producing home made captains of industry and editors of newspapers. Thus, it is expected, Britain will once more take her stand in the van of progress.

The invasion of British newspapers by American editors began even before the commercial invasion of Yerkes and the Morgans. But the Englishmen did not know it for some time. They saw that they were getting better newspapers to read, but as that was satisfactory they were not concerned as to the cause.

When the commercial invasion began it was different. English contractors began losing their jobs, and the situation became more exciting. One American bought up all the train lines, another all the steamships, and another all of something else.

The Englishmen began to think the thing over. They did a lot of thinking, and the faculties of commerce and journalism are the result. Now, with Pierpont Morgans and Horace Greeleys turned out right at home, duly and authoritively labelled as bachelors of business and masters of literature, the Yankee invaders will be expected to pack up at once and come home. For will not their occupation be gone?

The University of Birmingham has taken the lead in the matter of making business men. A faculty of commerce has been endowed, a professor and assistant professor engaged, and classes will open in October.

Professor Ashley, dean of the commercial faculty, has been created first master of commerce, "M. Co." He will have an assistant, and a professor of accounting will be engaged before the university term opens. Two scholarships have already been opened by different chambers of commerce, and more are looked for.

Professor Ashley has just given an interview, in which he tells what he expects to accomplish. Besides teaching the things ordinarily associated with a business life, the Professor counts on instilling ideas of political and social economy into his undergraduates, which will enable them to calculate to a nicety whether it would be advantageous to lessen the hours of labor, or the reverse; whether it would be better to compromise with threatened strikers, or let the strike come, and so on. Here is what Professor Ashley says:

"A man wants to know the experience of others who have found themselves in similar circumstances. It is not students only who want this information. Recently the head of a great company said to me: 'I am very much interested in the question of hours of labor; I don't want sentiment, I simply want to know whether, as a business man, it will pay me to reduce them in my works. I should like to have a brief account of the chief leading experiments in the reduction of hours of labor—the apparent conclusion to which they led, and the chief arguments based upon those experiments.' The modern economist ought to do this kind of work."

As for the other subjects which the curriculum will embrace, there will be, first of all, accounting. By this Professor Ashley says a great deal more is meant than bookkeeping, the main purpose being to enable men to interpret accounts so as to gauge the earning capacities of a business, and to put their fingers on those points in its management which are open to criticism.

The City of London school, which is one of the most important educational institutions in London, and under the control of the Lord Mayor, has taken the initiative in the matter of turning out newspaper men who are newspaper men. Classes in journalism have been endowed, and instruction will be given by men who are supposed to know all about the fine art of journalism. A scholarship has been established by a Mr. Stevens which will enable the winner to take a trip around the world and see how newspapers are made elsewhere, especially in the United States.

FIRST BOAT WILL CARRY BIG CANADIAN CARGO

NEW LINE TO SOUTH AFRICA MADE A START

The Steamer Ontario Left Montreal Yesterday on the New Route

Montreal, Aug. 18—"Yes, we have received quite a number of applications for space on the Ontarian which sailed from Montreal yesterday for South Africa," remarked Mr. Andrew A. Allan today, "including flour shipments and other exports."

The question of rates has not yet been settled, but another meeting of the agents of the three lines interested will be held next week to arrange a schedule.

"I look for a large business," said a shipper today, "especially in the Transvaal, where, according to recent advices, things are booming with a vengeance. The imports into the Vaal Colony last year amounted to $17,861,831, the principal items of which were ale and beer $11,838, ammunition, $50,764, live stock $86,000, drugs and chemicals $396,302, apparel $1,880,762, boots and shoes $1,365,181, butter $506,291, cheese $304,161, cigars $169,763, leathers and manufactures $233,006, preserved meats $641,731, preserved milk $443,744, soap $200,068, spirits, $302,063, sugar $415,305, tea $137,053, bicycles $146,836, wines $164,276, woollen manufacturers $370,136, and goods not enumerated $3,846,371.

Mr. J. G. Jardine, the Canadian Trade Commissioner, draws especial attention to the opening for pulp woods, tinned and canned goods and flour. Furniture, he says, also should find a good market. Up to June 5th Canada had exported $7,500,000, worth of goods to South Africa which embraced: Hay 136,000 tons, flour 225,315 sacks; beef 40,700 cases, and oats 394,772 bags.

Many of our leading houses are preparing samples, especially in boots and shoes cotton and woolen goods.

Mr. Cook of the Elder-Dempster line says he has received quite a number of inquiries already, especially from commission houses and thinks the prospects are bright for a good opening for Canadians.

ENGLAND'S OBSOLETE WARSHIP

Many Vessels at Naval Review Almost Useless

London, Aug. 18—Although the ships which assembled at Spithead on Saturday reached a total of 169 pennants many of the vessels are half obsolete. The best ships of the navy were not represented.

Of the battleships the Majestic, Magnificent, Prince George, Mars, Jupiter and Hannibal would be abroad at Gibraltar if war broke out. The Anson, Benbow, Camperdown, with the Devastation, Edinburgh, Conqueror and Dreadnought, are third rate ships, deficient in gunnery power, weak in armor, and incapable of meeting the best ships of the German navy.

The cruisers are for the most part equipped with the Belleville boiler. The Sutlej, the Hyacinth, the Andromache and the Hawke have given great trouble. The fifteen torpedo gunboats can neither fight nor run away from the modern vessels of similar class in foreign navies.

The ten training ships can scarcely be regarded as fighting vessels, while the twenty-four instructional destroyers are not the newest or the best of their kind. Since the naval review in the year of the Diamond Jubilee, the public have learned that five long miles of warships at anchor form a beautiful sight but are no criterion of naval efficiency.

The true lesson of the naval review is invisible. The public does not know, nobody really knows, whether British naval guns now compare favorably with those of our rivals. British patriotism smiles when British officialdom to declare their superiority. Sir Charles Dilke and other students of naval matters hold that "the British authorities have not yet succeeded in building a gun or in procuring ammunition equal to the weapons and munitions of other countries.

This much is certain, that the Reserve Squadron, which forms the true defence of the Channel and of the British coasts, would not be equal to a contest with Germany for the mastery of the North Sea.

The chief lesson of the naval review, therefore, is not self-satisfaction, but a national resolve to strengthen the navy by placing brains and knowledge in their right place by the Administration, and by ruthlessly cutting down expenditure on vessels that can neither fight nor run away.

MODERN GUNS FOR AMERICAN ARTILLERY

WAR DEPARTMENT MAKES DEAL WITH GERMAN FIRM

The Ordnance Contracted for to be an Improvement on That Sold Great Britain

Berlin, Aug. 20.—The United States will probably in a short time be armed with the most up to date and effective navy artillery." The Washington War Department has bought of Herr Ehrhardt a gunmaker of Dusseldorf, the right to rearm the American field artillery with Herr Ehrhardt's new piece. Captain Henry D. Borup, of the United States Ordnance Department is now at Dusseldorf on this business, probably to learn thoroughly how the gun is constructed. Besides his large works at Dusseldorf, Herr Ehrhardt has a branch at Eisenach He sold to the British Government several hundred pieces after experience in South Africa had demonstrated the inferiority of the British artillery.

The gun which the United States has acquired the right to use is understood to be an improvement on the model supplied to Great Britain, being lighter and of longer range. The United States ordnance officers have long complained that their field gun was less effective than the French and German guns.

Krupps Decline Offers.

The United States Ordnance Department learned some time ago that the Krupps had a new light model, and they were invited to exhibit the piece to United States ordnance experts, but the Krupps declined, giving as their reason, that if they demonstrated that they had the best piece in the world there was no certainty that the United States would take it. Herr Krupp recently made a gun of exactly the same bore as a certian best American type, but considerably lighter, and tested it a few days ago, throwing shrapnel, effectively 6,000 yards, as against the American gun's 3000 yards.

Herr Ehrhardt established five years ago a branch at Pittsburg, Pa., for the manufacture of cartridges and shells, but proving unprofitable, it was closed, and he brought the machinery back to Germany.

Captain Borup is remembered among foreign ordnance officers as formerly attached to the Paris Embassy of the United States, and as having been recalled on an intimation of the French Government that such a step would be desirable this being due to his unusual success in penetrating military secrets.

INTERNATIONAL COMPLICATIONS POSSIBLE BETWEEN BRITAIN AND GOLOMBIA

British Cruiser is on Spot--The Phaeton Left Panama Hurriedly to the Scene

British Boat Refused To Transport Troops—Violation of Contract Charged by an Official—Liberal Concessions

Special to The Times.

Panama, Colombia, Aug. 20. — The British cruiser Phaeton left here hurriedly on Saturday, and it was believed that she sailed for Buenaventura in the department of Cauca. Inquiries made by the correspondent of the Associated Press regarding the warship's departure show that serious international complications may arise at Buenaventura, where the Colombian authorities have been endeavoring to compel the agents of the British steamer Ecuador, owned by the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, of Liverpool, to transport troops to the Isthmus. It was at the request of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company that the Phaeton left Panama for Buenaventura, where the Colombian Government has assembled 2,000 troops under General Velazzo, intended to reinforce the army in this vicinity and the Government officials at Buenaventura.

The agents of the line refused to embark the troops, and appealed to the company's representative here, who in turn, placed the matter before the British Consul, with the result that the Phaeton was sent to Buenaventura to protect British interests.

The action of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company in refusing to transport the troops has caused indignation in Colombian Government circles.

LIBERAL CONCESSIONS

A high official who was interviewed on the subject, said that a contract was made by the Government in 1879 with the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, by which the Government granted many liberal concessions to the company, such as exemption from the tonnage and other taxes imposed by the National Government, the importation, free of duty, of the coal necessary for the company's steamers, and any other exemptions and privileges granted to other companies at any time. The Colombian Government, it was added, paid the Pacific Steam Navigation Company over $20,000 in subsidies, in consideration of which the company agreed to transport Colombian civil and military employes, prisoners, mails and soldiers at special rates. There is no clause in the contract, it was further asserted, providing that during a revolutionary outbreak the obligation of the company to transport troops ceased to be effective.

VIOLATION OF CONTRACT.

In conclusion, the high official of the Colombian Government referred to, said that the present refusal of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company to transport Colombian troops here may be sustained by the presence of a British warship at Buenaventura, but, nevertheless, it is a clear violation of the contract between the Colombian Government and the Steamship Company made in good faith by the Government, which has faithfully adhered to its agreements.

In Government circles it is claimed that the non-arrival of the reinforcements of troops from Buenaventura will prolong the revolution on the Isthmus, and cause unnecessary bloodshed, and that consequently, the Government of Colombia has ground to claim damages from the Pacific Steam Navigation Company. There is no doubt that the Government will bring suit against the company. An eminent lawyer has already left Panama for Bogota, the capital, to present and sustain the Government's claim, which, according to the terms of the contract, must be decided by the Colombian courts.

TO USE CANADIAN PULP

HUGE DEMAND FOR PULP BY UNITED STATES MILLS

International Paper Company has Secured Immense Tracts of Wood—Duty on Pulp to be Removed

Special to The Times.

Quebec, Aug. 18—The International Paper Company is about to utilize its enormous holdings of timber lands in northern Quebec, by the establishment of gigantic pulp mills in the district of Three Rivers. The company now controls no less than 1,000,000 acres of spruce lands in Canada in addition to large holdings in the United States. A large part of the Canadian property came into its possession by its purchase of the Glens Falls company, and Mr. Underwood, its manager, lately purchased here 297 square miles of limits on the St. Maurice River. The Company already has a cutting mill up at Three Rivers, of a capacity of 2,500 logs daily, besides a large preparing plant at Batiscan, and is now preparing to erect another sawmill of 3,000 logs capacity daily at Three Rivers.

The company's determination to establish its pulp and paper mills in Canada is due to the projected action of the United States authorities to remove the duties from pulp and paper coming in from the Dominion. Should these duties be removed the company will at once put its plant in working order and finish the product in this country. The knowledge that this is to be done is popularly supposed here to have largely influenced Congress at its last session, when about to change the existing duties.

It is significant to those connected with the paper industry that while a number of American syndicates have been looking over the ground here and securing Canadian spruce limits, the largest of them all the Glens Falls Company is controlled by men prominent in the International Paper Company. Mr. Warren Curtis, head of the department of construction and maintenance of the International, and A. Pagenstecher, a director of the company, and a well known paper manufacturer, are very largely interested in the Glens Falls Company which was organized in April last with a capital of $500,000. It is understood that it is to be operated in connection with the International and it already owns a sawmill, water power and extensive spruce limits in the neighborhood of Three Rivers.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE DEFENDED

To the Editor of The Times—

Sir.—A copy of the "Times of the 2nd inst., containing an article on Christian Science by Andrew Walsh has just been handed me, and as Mr. Walsh is laboring under a wrong impression of the subject, I beg to correct him. Mrs. Baker, of Dorchester, Mass., is not an example of the failure of Christian Science, as will be seen from the following statement of the gentleman in whose house Mrs. Baker died, and which has been widely published in the press—

"Mr. William D. McLean, of Elmont St., Dorchester, Mass, last evening (July 16) denied the story in the afternoon papers of Boston to the effect that the death of Mrs. Mary Baker which took place on June 9, at his residence was due to a failure of Christian Science treatment.

Mr. McLean asserted that Mrs. Baker had been attended by Dr. Howard S. Deering, of Dartmouth street, and had not submitted to Christian Science treatment.

Mrs. Baker, Mr. McLean, said, though a sister-in-law of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, and one of Mrs. Eddy's admirers, was not a Scientist. She had been for fifty years a devout member of the Park Street Congregational Church, and up to the time of her death was deeply interested in the Scotch Presbyterian Church on Warren Street. To this latter organization, he said, she had left a bequest of $4,000.

Dr. Howard S. Deering stated that he was in attendance on Mrs. Baker at the time of her death."

Mrs. Baker had the choice of Christian Science or medical treatment; she chose the latter, and died under the physician's care.

Mr. Walsh also states that Mrs. Eddy expressly claims to have restored the dead to life. I challenge Mr. Walsh to produce evidence that Mrs. Eddy has ever made such a claim. Equally untrue is the statement that she claims to be a "successor to Jesus." This silly charge has been so often refuted by Mrs. Eddy over her own signature that it seems strange that it should be again brought forward.

We cannot think that Mr. Walsh made his assertions in good faith, but we must protest against such misrepresentation when it is such an easy matter to become possessed of the true facts.

Yours respectfully,
C. R. MUNRO.

25 Grove Avenue,
Toronto, 16th August, 1902.

The following is Mrs. Baker's letter—"Rev. Irving C. Tomlinson, Concord, N. H.—

"Dear Sir—At this time when so much is being said in public, most appreciatively of the Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, discoverer and founder of Christian Science, and also somewhat that is untruthful, absurd, and wholly unchristian, I desire to make the following statement—

"First, I will say that I am not a Christian Scientist but am of the Orthodox faith, and for more than half a century have been a member of the Park Street Congregational Church in Boston. By beloved husband, long since passed to his rest, was Mrs. Eddy's oldest brother, and I know the facts of her life as no one can know them who is not thus allied in kinship and family history. The church and faith that were ours were hers also until 1866.

"Her early bereavement was followed by a long illness, when failing to be healed by medical skill, she felt there must be something outside the ordinary methods of healing. After much study of the Bible, for which she isolated herself for years, she came to the conclusion "It is God that does all." Acting on this faith she was able through divine help to recover her health.

"It is not strange, in view of the frequency of failure by the medical fraternity to restore their patients to health that other means should be sought. While I am not a believer in the entirety of Christian Science, I do believe that God is able to heal us physically and spiritually if we confide in his love and trust in him for all our needs. Whether logical as truth, or otherwise, Christian Science is her faith, sincerely embraced after long years of faithful study of the Bible, and according to her belief it is intelligently taught. She is now, and has been for thirty-five years hard at work in the cause she espoused. With her means she is carrying blessings to many a needy one, and she works on seeking the good of all. Whatever differences of belief the public may entertain concerning any of her doctrines, they cannot justly ignore the fact that hers is an earnest, generous, and noble life — the legitimate outgrowth of a noble soul.

"Mrs. Eddy's character is above reproach. No libelous words can touch it, no foe can assail it. Hidden in God it shall shine, and, reflecting Him its brilliancy will be seen long after she who labors ceases her work for ultimate rest. Her large and extensive work, with her unprecedented following, has called forth malignant utterances so utterly false they should not go unchallenged.

"I am acquainted with the birth and growth of Christian Science, and know that the claim that it originated with Phineas P. Quimby is absurd and without foundation. I can state positively that Mrs. Eddy never received any instructions or suggestions from him in regard to Metaphysical healing or Christian Science. I know whereof I speak, because I accompanied her to Dr. Quimby - at that time she was too feeble to go unassisted. His treatment consisted of manipulations in cold water, and was wholly material, and entirely devoid of metaphysics or spirituality. Both my husband and myself made careful inquiries in regard to Mr. Quimby's system of treatment while Mrs. Eddy was under his care, and we considered his method to be the essence of quackery.

I also desire to say most, emphatically, that my sister, Mrs. Eddy, never was a spiritualist. She had never had a spiritualistic seance Boston or anywhere else. I have known her for fifty years, and I know that all the charges brought against her are the work of ignorance and malice, and wholly devoid of any semblance of fact. Her great kindness to me can never be forgotten. I pray God to sustain and keep her from all harm. A difference in theological views does not call for such treatment as she has received from some who disagree with her.

"My standing in the Orthodox church will vouch for the truth of every word I have written in this letter. Perhaps I should say that I was educated for missionary work, and early became a member of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions. I went out as a missionary to labor among the Choctaw Indians at Pine Ridge Seminary. Indian Territory, where I was principal of that institution. I continued in the missionary field of labor until the failure of my health. In these many years of Christian activity, I was associated with the Rev. I. C. Strong and wife and Revs. Kingsbury and Hotchkins, and other well known Christian workers.

"Under great trial and persecution, I feel that Mrs. Eddy has been true to these words, which I select from one of her poems:

'Oh, make me glad for every scalding tear,
For hope deferred, ingratitude, disdain!
Wait, and love more for every hate and fear
No ill—since God is good, and loss is gain.'

"Her whole life has been a beautiful exponent of these words from her poem entitled 'Christ My Refuge,' which I select from a multiplicity of kindred thoughts found in her literary works:

'My prayer, some daily good to do
To Thine for Thee;
An offering pure of Love, whereto
God leadeth me.'

"I have written to you in the interest of Christianity regarding personally known facts—Christianity, whose foundation stones are righteousness, justice, truth—with the prayer that only the right may triumph."

Full capacity—600 tons in 24 hours—would make these figures three times as great. Total amount to be raised fully guaranteed. This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having sums to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries. we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.

Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar-makers in the United States, of which there are over 22,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above. and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg. Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours. truly,

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well.

Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

Curiosities of Book Sales.

Commenting on the phenomenal sale of some recent novels, a correspondent of the "Book Buyer" writes interestingly of notable books that years ago were popular, but since have become practically unknown. He says:

There was once a very popular preacher who wrote many books, and for every one there was a large demand on the day of publication. But most of them passed out of print while he was still living, and I doubt if a single one of them is now kept in stock by any bookstore. Not many years ago appeared a book which the laboring classes and the tenement-house population bought so eagerly as to run the sale into the hundreds of thousands, because they thought it showed how an equal distribution of all property might be brought about. Now it appears to be dead. Helper's "Impending Crisis" attained a sale of 140,000 copies, forty years ago, which was as great an achievement as half a million would be to-day. That was because of its bearing on burning political questions and the fact that it was systematically attacked in Congress. Now you can occasionally find a stray copy of it in a second-hand shop. Tourgee's "Fool's Errand," twenty years later, reached about the same circulation. For purposes of comparison, this and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" would seem to be closely analogous. But while the "Fool's Errand" has almost, if not quite, gone out of circulation, Mrs. Stowe's great novel, thirty years older, still sells largely in several editions, and at many libraries is called for more frequently than any other book. Mrs. Stephens' "Fashion and Famine" was the best selling novel of its day, and three translations of it were published in France. But to-day it is difficult to find a copy of it anywhere except in the lumber-room of a public library. Another example may be seen in the sudden popularity and subsequent deadness of "Robert Elsmere," the author of which is still writing successful books. Were it not that it might seem like telling tales out of school, something could be said of certain books that have begun life with a phenomenal sale, which has stopped suddenly and unaccountably, as if at some mysterious signal.

For the reverse of the picture, the most notable example is afforded by "Ben Hur." This book had no sale worth mentioning for a year after its publication, and was considered dead. Now it is said to have attained a circulation surpassing that of any other American novel, with the single exception of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Someone might prepare a curious and entertaining article on three classes of books in light literature: 1. Those that have had an immediate large sale, and have then gone to oblivion. 2. Those that have had no sale at first, but afterward have met with large success. 3. Those that have been popular at the start and never lost their popularity. The first class would be the largest. Probably the second class would be the smallest. Two that would shine in the third are the "Autocrat at the Breakfast Table" and "Reveries of a Bachelor."

The Making of Anagrams.

Apropos the renewal of the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, an article by William Sheppard in the "Era" on the making of anagrams is enlightening. "A correspondent has asked me," says Mr. Sheppard, "to furnish him with some good anagrams on the names of famous people. He further informs me that he has spent a good deal of time trying to make an acceptable anagram on the United States, and has failed to do so. With reference to this failure, I would remind him that he must not be discouraged. The task he has attempted is an enormous one. United States has just a dozen letters. Now, mathematicians will tell him that a dozen letters will admit of seven thousand and twenty-nine millions (7,029,000,000) of possible transpositions. Old Camden has vividly described the vexation of soul undergone by anagrammatists when oft-repeated effort, with an oft-repeated approximation to success, have finally resulted in loss of time and labor: 'Some have been seen,' he says, 'to bite their pens, scratch their heads, bend their brows, bite their lips, beat their board, their paper, when they were fair for somewhat and caught nothing herein.' Again, let him comfort himself by the reflection that no one has yet succeeded in making a good English anagram on United States. Anagrammatists have been forced to fall back upon the more fluent and manageable Latin. It has been discovered that the letters forming United States may be transposed into the following Latin words:

In te deus stat. "God stands in thee."

Inde tutus stat. "Hence thou standest safely."

Dentatus est. "He has teeth," the "he" evidently referring to Uncle Sam.

Desiste, nutat! "Hands off, he shakes!" a sentiment which may have been applicable in 1861, when it was made, but is now, thank Heaven, without meaning or point.

Siste, nudat te. "Stop, he strips thee," which might be revived to-day by the Anti-Imperialists in their warnings to our new subjects in Cuba and the Philippines.

A te desistunt. "They keep off from thee," which is exactly the attitude which the anti's wish the United States to assume towards Cuba and the Philippines.

"I missed one of my pullets last night, Rufus," said the colonel, sternly. "Sho," replied Rufus, evasively, "yo' oughtn't tuh shoot at pullets in de dahk, kunnel."—Ohio "State Journal."

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

House, etc.

were in town and I begged Sintra to fetch her because I was very ill and longed that she should know the truth about the past. The book was padlocked, and there was a tiny key—that is, if it was the same book which I knew years ago."

"Could it have been the key I found in the pocket of her tea-gown?" I exclaimed, speaking to myself, not him. But he answered.

"Find the book and try the key," he said.

"The book would have been in the octagon room, in the escritoire, where she used so often to write," I murmured, reflectively. "And, oh! the escritoire, or one like it, is here, in this house! Perhaps Roger brought it back from Arrish Mell Court."

Even as I spoke I remembered the night of the storm, when I had gone to the octagon room, hearing and seeing certain strange things which my superstitious fears had tried to explain according to their own way. Now my reason began to explain them differently. What if Roger had come secretly to the house from the inn where he was staying in the village of Lull, and, surprised by me in an attempt to find this same diary, had chosen to play the ghost?"

"If there was a will," Walter Leigh was saying, "Ermyntrude would probably have mentioned making it in her diary. Roger Cope would have thought of that, for he is clever—hatefully clever—or he could never have gained his present influence over my sister. Perhaps there was a secret drawer in that escritoire of which you speak, and, not being able to find it, he may have brought the thing here to be under his own eye, lest something was hidden which none but he ought to find."

"I shall try hard to find it," I said. "But you don't like Roger Cope any better than I do. Have you known him for a long time?"

"I never saw him until after the night when Ermyntrude was brought to my bedside in London by Sintra. I knew that he existed, that was all. But while I was still very ill in the lodging-house in town to which we had come on our last return to England, Sintra told me that Sir Roger Cope had called; that he had been at great pains to find us out, having heard or guessed that we had come back from abroad. The next piece of news was that he had invited us to the old place, which was his since Vincent's death. The offer was represented to me as a disinterested one, and I must say that I was thankful for it, as our life of late years had been a sordid struggle with poverty. The punishment of my sin has been in constant illness, terrible insomnia, awful dreams when I could sleep, sometimes a horror of approaching madness.

"For long I have been unable to work at my art, and the little money Sintra had saved for me had dwindled away. I had found a certain relief in telling Ermyntrude the truth, which I would have told her years ago had Sintra not so bitterly opposed my wish. I did not dream that the knowledge of her boy's fate had killed her, though we had passed through a terrible scene; and with my mind at last somewhat calmer than it had been for many a year I was thankful for the haven Roger Cope offered me to die in. I was grateful to him while he was still a stranger. But when I came to see the man my feeling changed. Instinct told me that what he had done for Sintra and me was for his own advantage, somehow, far more than for ours. And I have been sure since that we were brought here to be kept out of the way.

"Now you have told me of Ermyntrude's death and his inheritance of her estates and fortune, it is far clearer than before. He must have suspected, from the circumstances of her death, that she might have come into possession of some knowledge, withheld from her before. This he would have at once associated with us. He would have guessed that we were in England—that we had seen in the papers, perhaps, that she was in London (as was really the case), and would have conjectured that we had met. Very possibly he discovered our whereabouts by inserting an advertisement in the newspapers, which Sintra answered (though she would never tell me how it was that he found us out), and, as he at once won her confidence by proclaiming his enmity towards Ermyntrude, he no doubt learnt from her the secret kept so long—the secret that concerned the boy's life. He, of course, shared our ignorance as to what had become of the boy; but it would be fatal to his interests if anyone outside should learn that Sir Vincent Cope's son and heir had not died after all. The property could only remain his on sufferance, till the heir should be found. It was for this reason that I said it would be well if John Bourke should hear of his rights before Roger Cope knew the whole truth."

"Your sister already knows," I faltered. "Roger sent her to take me away from Mr. Bourke's house, where, as I told you, he had let me stay with old Mrs. Jeanett. She tried to prejudice me against Mr. Bourke, saying all sorts of strange, superstitious sounding things, which I suppose she made up in the hope of frightening me so that I should never think of him any more. Then I told her of the heart-shaped scar, and she was startled and astonished. Perhaps she has repeated what I said to Roger since, and—and he has gone to London? He was more ready to go away and leave me, after he had taken the trouble to have me fetched here, than seemed quite natural, maybe—now that there's a new light upon his actions. But what harm could Roger do? For his own sake, even if he were vile enough, he would not dare make himself a murderer? Oh! say that you think he wouldn't do that?"

"Is it possible that you care for the man, in spite of all?" exclaimed Walter Leigh.

"No, no!" I cried, impulsively. "Not for him, but——" There I stopped abruptly.

"I see," the invalid thoughtfully said. "If the other cares for you, there might be a happy ending after all."

"Oh, he doesn't care," I protested. "I'm afraid—I mean I think that he cares for someone else, who is very rich and very beautiful. But if I could pay him back for his great goodness to me—if I could show him that after all I was not ungrateful—by being the one to tell him of his rights, and bringing him here to you, I would be happy. Yes, I would be happy, though I never saw him again in this world! But you have made me sick with terror now. I am afraid for him—afraid of Roger Cope."

"You are right about Roger, I think," Walter Leigh said, reflectively; "he would not dare to be a murderer, though his wish might jump to that. But if there were anyone else—if he had

A High-Class Mining Investment

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital — AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

Fishing Good

Mr. W. H. Cluxton was down yesterday from his lodge in Pigeon Lake, and reports fishing particularly good this season. It is no trouble to keep the table supplied with fish this year, bass and 'lunge being plentiful. At the boys' camp on Pigeon Lake there is also abundance of sport for the nimrods of the party.

Adam Hall Gets the Contract

The Property committee of the Town have recommended that the contract for supplying a boiler, and placing the same in the Town buildings, with all the necessary fittings for heating purposes, be awarded to Mr. Adam Hall. Mr. Hall sent in three tenders for the work as follows: With Gurney's "Ideal" boiler, $945; with Wm. Hamilton's vertical steel boiler, $712; with Wm. Hamilton's horizontal steel boiler, $790. The latter tender at $790 was accepted, the horizontal boiler being considered more serviceable and economical in the long run than the vertical boiler.

The Late Mrs. David Y. Crowley

There passed away yesterday morning, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. James Galvin, King street, Mrs. David Y. Crowley, an old and much esteemed resident of Otonabee. The deceased had suffered for more than a year from stomach troubles, and came to town from Otonabee three weeks ago to pay a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Jas. Galvin, of No. 465 King street. On Monday morning she took a weak turn, but was able to go up stairs by herself and laid upon the bed. She grew rapidly worse, and hope for her recovery had to be abandoned. The end came at 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

Mrs. Crowley had been almost a lifelong resident of Otonabee, and since her marriage had resided continuously on lot 15, in the 10th concession. Her good deeds and generous actions had won to her many friends, who will mourn her loss, and extend sincere sympathy to the stricken family. Ten children survive, viz., David and Michael, of the homestead; Patrick, of Ennismore; William, of Welwood, Ont.; Bartholomew, of Seattle, Washington Territory; Frank and Sylvester, Duluth, Minn.; Walter, of Geneva, N. Y.; James, of the C.P.R. Telegraph Co.; Catharine Ann, wife of Jas. Galvin, of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at 8.30 o'clock, from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Jas. Galvin, No. 465 King street, and proceed to St. Peter's cathedral, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

TO LECTURE IN AMERICA

Aguinaldo is Studying English to Prepare Himself for a Tour of the States

Washington, Aug. 19 — Aguinaldo may come to the United States on a lecture tour. Since his release by the American authorities he has been studying English to prepare himself for a visit to the United States. A letter has been received at the war Department from a well-known anti-imperialist, inquiring if Aguinaldo will be permitted to come to this country on a lecture tour. There probably will be no objection.

HIT A SOLDIER

The Experience of one of our Men

The soldier boys who fought during the Rebellion went home as a rule in pretty bad shape, caused by exposure and improper food and the use of quantities of coffee which left its mark in the wreck of many a stomach. Merrit Hutchinson, of Reading, Mass., tells his experience.

"I am an old soldier who served all through the war of the Rebellion and my coffee drinking commenced when I enlisted. I drank it three times a day and at the close of the war returned home almost a wreck.

For years I had dyspepsia of the worst kind and could not drink anything but warm water or warm milk nor eat enough to hardly keep a man alive. After suffering this way for years, and half living, I was told by a friend of your Postum Coffee.

At first I refused to even try it, for I thought it meant more suffering for me, but at last I consented and it did taste mighty good, for I was a dear lover of coffee.

I waited for the distress in my stomach that always had come with common coffee, but it never came. I drank it at first very carefully and then got reckless and wanted it every meal, and for over five years now I have been drinking nothing else. I have no dyspepsia now, no trouble about eating anything. My weight, when I began using Postum Cereal Food Coffee was 125 pounds. I am now 62 years old and weigh about 160 pounds, and am solid as a rock, and able to do a day's work with any of the boys. Now I do not claim that Postum Cereal is a medicine but in my own case it is both victuals and drink. I think that when Postum Coffee is properly made it is far ahead of coffee."

Many Burned in Tenement

Special to The Times.

New York, Aug. 19.—In a tenement house fire at 25 Essex street to-day, two women and three children were burned to death, another woman was burned severely about the body and face and a man had three ribs broken by jumping from a window to the pavement. The body of the dead woman was burned beyond recognition. The injured woman is Mrs. Rosa Moses, and the name of the man who jumped is Jacob Muscovitz. A woman named Mrs. Hannah Balothin could not be found after the fire, and it was believed that the burned body found was hers.

Nathan Liebowitz, reported to the police that his four children, Moses, Julius, Louis and Sallie, respectively 2, 5, 6 and 8 years old, were missing, and a search of the building resulted in the finding of the badly burned bodies of two children supposed to be Liebowitz's. The body of an elderly woman also was found.

Bullets Flew Thick and Fast.

Special to The Times.

Beatyville, Ky., Aug. 20. — News has reached here of a fight near Traveler's Rest, Owsley County, in which Jesse Nealy was killed, Robert Allen was mortally wounded, James Nealey's arm was shot off, Reuben Fox was badly wounded, four others whose names cannot now be learned were slightly wounded, and Mrs. William Peters was shot in the leg.

The fight occurred Saturday night at a candy pulling at the home of William Evans, and originated between Jesse Nealey and Robert Allen over a girl. Nealy knocked James Allen down, and the latter shot Nealy through the brain, killing him instantly. About this time others began to fire. Robert Allen was shot six times, when he rolled under the bed and lay there till morning. John Allen, one of the principals in the fight, was making his escape when Jim Nealy, a brother of Jesse Nealy, tried to arrest him. Allen turned on Nealy, shot his right arm off, and succeeded in making his escape.

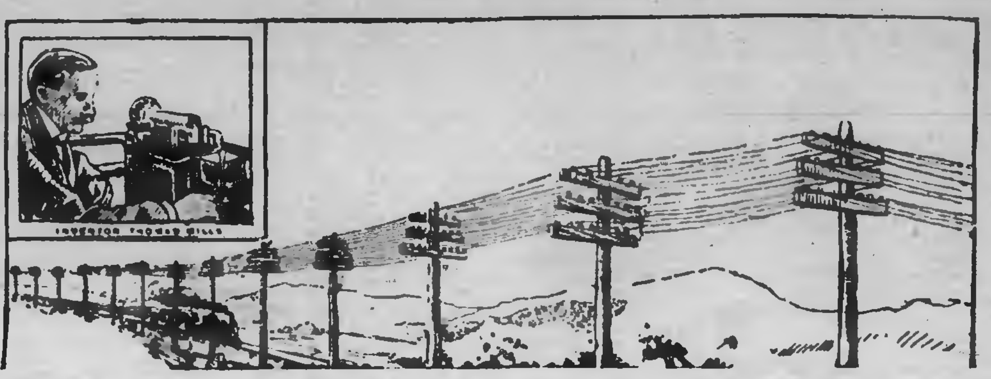
STOCK SOLD ON INSTALLMENT

To Investors! A Chance of a Lifetime.



The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $000 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realised a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realise the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

THE MASSES MAY RISE AGAINST THE CLASSES

Serious Dangers May Follow the Expulsion Of the French Nuns

A Vienna Paper's View of Kruger's Course Concerning the Delegates New Light Draught Boat on Rivers

Special to The Times.

London Aug. 21.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says that the expulsion of nuns from France have been about completed, but the feeling which the Government's action aroused has been by no means allayed. On the contrary, it is feared that the riots which attended the closing of the convents may be followed by something more serious, namely, a struggle of the masses against the classes. In a speech at Besancon, M. Trouillot, Minister of Commerce, declared that Brittany was being turned into a focus of Royalist insurrection by false rumors. Men but half liberated from the aristocratic yoke, he said, were being excited by these reports. He accused the Royalists of making false and incendiary speeches, while a large number of pubic officials showed a reactionary spirit. The middle class, which was formerly Voltairean, was becoming clerical under the influences of the Jesuits. The correspondent says that there were some home truths in this phillipic, but the warning may be premature. He points out that the essentially middle class bodies, the departmental councils, sided with the Government in the controversy over the expulsion of the Catholic orders.

Vienna, Aug. 21.—The Neues Wiener Tagblatt publishes a telegram from Brussels, stating that dissenions are increasing among the Brussels Boer leaders. It is stated that Kruger, being advised to recognize peace in order that the leaders may return to South Africa, refuses, being influenced in his decision by Leyds. Editorially the journal says that in vain the rancorous old man, who was the first to leave his country in its hour of danger advised the generals to refuse King Edward's invitation. Their reception in England taught them that magnanimity is an English word. The generals are the authorized representatives of the Boers, and in their reception by the King, England shook hands with a whole gallant nation.

A NEW LIGHT DRAUGHT VESSEL.

London, Aug. 21.—The Times published a description of a new shallow draught screw steamer designed by the Yarrow Company for trading in South American rivers. The vessel is 75 feet long, 9 1-2 feet wide, and will carry tons of freight. The propeller, by an ingenious arrangement, is so placed that it can be fully immersed when the boat is drawing only eleven inches of water, and without projecting it below the bottom of the vessel. A trial of the vessel recently showed it to be superior to any type of the draught paddle-wheel boat.

Mr. Bailey, before the bidding opened, called attention to the fact that a number of the makers were putting their cheese in boxes which were too small to such a degree that the cheese projected from a quarter to three inches above the top of the box. Recently he had passed some cheese as first class, but complaints had been sent back from England concerning it, and the result was that there was a claim against him from his customers of from 1-4 to 2 cents a pound on the shipment. When the cheese were piled 9 and 10 high in steamers the covers were pressed down and any cheese which projected above the top of the box was damaged to a serious extent. The English buyers wanted cheese of from 80 to 85 pounds weight, but many of the makers turned them out at from 95 to 100 pounds and then tried to place them in the small boxes. Recently a maker had apparently run out of the proper kind of nails and used shingle nails to close his boxes and a big claim had immediately been sent back from England. The patrons of the factories all suffered from this kind of work as the English buyers sent back word to cease shipping from such factories. Mr. Bailey urged the patrons to warn their makers against such neglect.

President Drummond asked that serious attention be paid to Mr. Bailey's remarks, as every factory was affected to a degree.

Mr. Wrighton confirmed Mr. Bailey's statements. He had shipped a carload in June and the Glasgow firm, to whom he had sold, while raising no objection to the quality of the cheese, demanded that he guarantee all boxes in future. Of course he could not do this and would thus lose a valuable customer.

Mr. Thos. Blezard endorsed what had been said by the previous speakers. He had recently been at the station with Mr. Whitton and had seen the cheese sent in much too large for the boxes. He urged that the matter be dealt with immediately.

Mr. Drummond thought that the makers were not able to make enough to afford the large boxes, and tried to economise in this particular. He urged that the wages of the makers be raised.

Mr. Kennedy, of Buckhorn, thought that the Boards of Directors of the factories concerned should be notified and allowed to deal with the matter.

Mr. Wrighton's suggestion as a remedy was that the factories should buy the boxes themselves and deduct the cost from the wages of the cheese makers.

Mr. Bailey explained that he only made his remarks as a warning to the factories this time, but as his firm could not stand such losses, the matter would have to go to the courts in case there was a recurrence of such claims.

The bidding was opened by Mr. Whitton at 9c; 9 1-8 was bid by Mr. Fitzgerald, 9 1-4 by Mr. Wrighton, 9 3-8 by Mr. Fitzgerald, and 9 1-2 by Mr. Whitton. At this price Mr. Whitton picked Ormonde, Westwood and Villiers, all of which accepted.

Mr. Wrighton offered 9 1-2 for further selections and took Warsaw, Shearer, Keene, and Peterborough.

Mr. Wrighton then offered 9 7-16 for further selections. Mr. Kerr went 9 1-2 and chose Lakefield, Central Smith and North Smith. He offered 9 7-16 for further selections and named Buckhorn, East Emily, Myrtle, Fraserville, Mount Pleasant, Trewern, Lang, Cavanville, and Dartford, all of which refused. The factories accepting were Norwood, Melrose Abbey, Fleetwood, Percy, Missing Link, and Dallyduff.

Mr. Wrighton added Bensfort to his selections.

Mr. Bailey at 9 1-2 took Dartford Shamrock, Indian River and Cavanville, and offered 9 7-16 for Brickley, which refused. The following factories accepted, Oakdale, Daisy D., and Darlington Union.

At 9 7-16 Mr. Rollins called Warminster, Oakdale, Daisy D. Pine Grove, Maple Leaf, Young's Point, North Dummer, Cedardale, Stony Lake, South Burleigh, and Apsley, all accepting.

At 9 1-2 Mr. Cook took Lang, Fraserville, Mount Pleasant, and Otonabee Union.

At 9 1-2 Mr. Wrighton bought Myrtle.

At 9 7-16 Mr. Kerr chose Trewern, Buckhorn, Oak Leaf and East Emily.

The matter of the date of the next meeting of the Board was settled by an adjournment for three weeks.

England and Afghanistan

Berlin, Aug. 21—Another leading article appears in the Kreuz Zeitung dealing with the position of Russia and England in Afghanistan. According to the writer, the position of England is most precarious. He maintains that the Afghans hate England, and only fear Russia. England's army, he says, is composed of discordant units, and has no chance against the Russians when the day for combat arrives. The Kreuz Zeitung believes on that day Persia will unite with Russia, the Persian army at present being prepared by Russian officers for the coming struggle. He points out that Herat is no longer the key to India. The way to India rather lies now through Persia.

MALTREATED BY MOB

A Woman Tarred and Feathered for Second Time

Special to The Times.

Rock Falls, Ill., 21.—Mrs. Florence Wolfe, of Mount Morris, who was tarred and feathered a few months ago for being too familiar with the husband of her dead sister while the body lay on its bier, was again treated to a coat of that unpleasant material last evening. Mrs. Wolfe left the town very hurriedly after the first coat, but returned.

Her reappearance enraged the citizens and boys and girls said ugly and unpleasant things in her presence. She became enraged at these things and appeared before a justice of the peace to swear out warrants for the arrest of her tormentors. This enraged her enemies still more. Last evening they surrounded her house and bombarded it with rocks and stones and several shots were fired. Every window was broken, and she was finally driven from the house. She was captured and taken to the edge of the city, where she was treated to a coat of tar and feathers. With taunts and jeers from the population she was driven from the city.

The cause of all this unpleasantness was a report that she made love to the husband of her dead sister while the body lay in another room.

HUNTED MEN TO END OF EARTH

Murderer Fled Fled 31,000 Miles but was Run Down

A LONG CHASE FOR CRIMMINAL

The Search for Coiners is Perhaps the Most Remorseless, as Their Crime Is One that Affects Entire Community.

New York, Aug. 19 — There have been many long pursuits of criminals, great in the distance traveled, the obstacles overcome and the persistence of pursuing officers, but that of Sergeant Wood, of the Natal, South Africa, police, is doubtless a record breaker, says the Chicago Chronicle. The man sought by Sergeant Wood was charged with embezzling large sums of money at Petermartizburg. He got away from South Africa and went to New York. Although the detective had information as to where his quarry was hiding, yet he had first to visit London to obtain the necessary extradition papers. Then he hurried to America, and with the assistance of the United States police ran down his man. By the time he had reached Maritzburg he had been traveling hard for nearly three months and had covered nearly 21,000 miles.

One of the sternest chases of recent years was after Loys Darrel, formerly sergeant in the Seventh United States Cavarly. Darrel enlisted at the beginning of the Spanish-American war and distinguished himself in Cuba. There he fell in love with a pretty Spanish girl and beggared himself in buying finery for his sweetheart. To obtain more money he robbed and murdered a companion in arms named Crouch. He then fled.

A detective named Dupuy was put upon the muderer's track and, finding a clew, started for New Orleans. He was right in his surmise that Darrel had gone there, but when he arrived the bird had flown. He had left on a British mule transport for South Africa. Dupuy took train for New York, fast boat for Southampton, rushed by rail across Europe, caught a boat of the German East African Line and finally arrived at Beira, in Portuguese East Africa.

There he waited like a spider for a fly, and just as Darrel was fancying himself free from pursuit he pounced upon him. Later on the detective deposited his prisoner safely in Castle William Jail, in New York. He had travelled in all 31,000 miles and spent $4,250 in the chase.

One of the most astonishing criminals England ever produced was a man named Benson, who began operations in London with two confederates. He organized a series of swindling companies in the city, while he himself, pretending to be an invalid, lived in the greatest luxury in the Isle of Wight. He posed as a great philanthropist, was foremost in charitable works, and went into the very best society. By dint of bribing certain officers of the law, he lived for some years on the proceeds of his swindles. But one day the crash came. He was arrested, sentenced, and got a long term in Portsmouth jail.

No sooner was he out than he was at his old tricks again. These culminated in Switzerland, where he managed to gain the affections of a daughter of an English officer. Through her he induced her father to trust him with the investment of his entire capital, some $25,000 He bolted with the money. Chased across Europe, a detective caught him at Breman. To avoid scandal the victim promised not to prosecute if Bennet would give up the money. The latter did so and left for America. Hardly was the vessel out of sight before it was discovered that the bundle of script the thief had handed over was worth at most $100.

Followed across the Atlantic, Benson escaped to Mexico, where he made £5,000 by passing himself off as Mme. Patti's agent and selling forged concert tickets. By this time his photograph was in almost every police bureau in the world. Yet he dodged and twisted under a dozen aliases and was heard of in almost every South American State before a clever New York detective ran him down in Rio after a two years' hunt.

Even then he cheated justice. Landed in prison in New York he walked upstairs chatting amiably to his jailer. Suddenly he made a spring and jumped clean over the banister. He was picked up with a broken back and died that night.

The police never exhibit more relentless energy than in hunting down a coiner. A coiner's crime is against government and so the whole forces of the State are against him. The United States suffers far more from coiners than England does and is proportionately keen to run down such offenders. Early in 1900 a man named Hastings was surprised in his workshop from which he had issued many thousands of small silver coins, but he was too quick for his would-be captors and escaped. No fewer than seven secret service men were put on his track. The remarkable fact is that Hastings never attempted to leave the States.

Ellfer, one of the detectives, got a hint that a stranger was in the woods. He took a blanket and some food and hid himself in a thicket. Very early in the morning Hastings passed carrying a bag of food. Ellfer tracked him to his refuge and saw that the forger was armed. He waited some distance away in hiding. When night came, Hastings came out with a dark lantern and searched every bush near his hiding place. At last he was satisfied and went back. As soon as Ellfer felt sure the man was asleep he crept up and had the handcuffs on him before he could awake. On the way to the jail Hastings told his captor that he had seen him on ten different occasions, and had once, in Cincinnati, been within three feet of him in a theatre.

EATEN BY A BEAR

Horrible Fate of a Young Lad in the Woods

Mattawa, Aug. 20—A story is told here of the disappearance of a seven year old lad while berrypicking, and the subsequent discovery by a party of searchers of an arm and leg concealed in a pile of brush in the adjacent forest. The tracks of a bear were found, in the vicinity and shreds of clothing attached to the bushes at various points told the story to the old hunters in the party of searchers. The boy had been attacked in the berry field by a bear, and after being dragged into the wood, had been devoured in leisurely fashion.

BABY BORN ON THE BEACH

Its Mother Had Just Come from the Surf at Rockaway

New York, Aug. 20—The police records in Queens last night said that a woman had given birth to a child clad in a bathing suit. The records were wrong, as it was the mother who wore the bathing suit.

Esther Cismor, 20 years old, who has no home, is the mother. She went in bathing at Garfinkel's Pavilion at Rockaway yesterday morning. The boy was born just after the woman had left the water. The mother and her baby were taken to St. John's Hospital in Long Island City.

BELGIAN QUEEN A WRECK

Once Magnificent Horsewoman Almost a Cripple It is Said

Brussels, Aug. 20 Most disquieting rumors come from Spa respecting the health of the Belgian queen. The opinion prevails that not only will her Majesty never be any better—a belief that has existed for some time—but that news of her death within a few months need surprise no one.

The queen is living in the closest seclusion at Spa. The once magnificent horsewoman is almost a cripple. It is asserted that she is now hardly able to indulge her fondness for reading and music. Her depression over domestic troubles—the scandal connected with her eldest daughter, Princess Louise, who is now confined in a lunatic asylum, and her estrangement from Princess Stephanie, who gave up her rank to marry Count Lonyay—is declared to have seriously affected her mental as well as her physical health.

LAY AS ONE DEAD FOR THREE MONTHS

And was in Mortal Terror Lest He be Buried Alive

VERY REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE

Heard Doctors Talking but He Could not Respond — It was Finally Discovered That a Vein in Leavitt's Neck Had been Strictured

Kansas City, Mo., August 21—D. C. Leavitt, of [illegible] East Twelfth street, who slept for three months, and who was recently awakened, is greeting friends upon the streets in a hearty manner, and looks well. He does not intend to resume his work as a travelling salesman until the middle of September, but he looks heartier now than many men who are perfectly well.

The case of Mr. Leavitt has attracted attention all over the country. In a way his pitiable condition for three months after April 26 resembled that of persons who were thought to be dead, but who really heard and knew what is going on, and understood the torture of being prepared for the grave while still alive.

Mr. Leavitt would fall into one of his sleeps of several days and nights duration and although unable to arouse himself or speak, and apparently unconscious, would hear the talk by his bedside. He knew that the physicians told his wife that his case was hopeless, and that even if he recovered somewhat, he would be an imbecile, and the best thing to do would be to send him to an asylum. His condition, so far as he himself felt, was that of a man so weary that he could not keep his eyes open, but even when aroused he could not express himself about the terror which afflicted him. Upon being shaken and called sharply he could speak, but always in a pleasant, drowsy way, like a man profoundly tired who replies instinctively to questions and goes to sleep again.

The final theory that the principal vein in the back of the neck had undergone a stricture, producing possible congestion of blood in the head seems to explain the condition of sleep. As soon as he came out of the state of catalepsy his mind was clear.

His first thought was for his wife, whose wan and worn face showed plainly the weary vigils she had kept. Tears sprang into Mr. Leavitt's eyes, and he said: "Deary, now you must rest."

Then he called down the physicians, who began quarrelling about who had cured him.

ELECTROCUTION A FAILURE

Doctors Have Had to Kill Many of the Criminals

New York, Aug. 21.—F. A. Stratton, vice president of an electric light company in West Chester county, this state, says that murderers sentenced to die in the electric chair and frequently not killed by the electric current, and they would be buried alive if it were not for the autopsy which follows the electrocution. Mr Stratton says:

"Nearly every week we have linemen shocked by higher voltage currents than are used in the electric chair at Sing Sing, yet they come around all right after a few days' treatment. This being the case, is it not probable that some of the murderers who are sentenced to the electric chair could be resuscitated if they received prompt medical attention and the same care that is given to one of our linemen when he meets with an accident? I have often thought that a great many people, who are supposed to have been electrocuted, are in reality buried alive."

BRITONS TURN FROM AFRICA.

Lack of Public Interest in Development of Conquered Territory

London, Aug. 21.—There is a decided lack of public interest in the settlement and development of South Africa. The publication of a number of tentative schemes, official and otherwise, has not resulted thus far in any rush of emigrants.

In fact, the United States Embassy seems to have supplied the foreign office with a large proportion of the applicants for South African passes, many Americans having registered applications during the past week. None however, could be properly classed as emigrants.

The pro-Boers are quite gleeful at the apparent fulfillment of their prophecies that the wages of the whites would be lower under the British than under the Boer regime.

The always acute problem of working the mines is now more difficult than ever.

It is said that the supply of workingmen is 200,000 short of the demand. The Kaffirs, like the Filipinos, are strongly disinclined to settle down to steady work after the comparatively large pay and easy life of army employment. The lack of agriculturalists is equally marked.

TO HELP THE WEST OUT

Ontario Harvesters Will Garner Golden Grain

The first contingent from Ontario of the 20,000 men who are said to be wanted to harvest the great grain crop of Manitoba and the Northwest left Peterborough yesterday, and it will take several special trains to carry them all from Toronto. The harvesters' excursions, as these are called, extend over three days of this week and how far Ontario will respond to the demands of the west is a question that even the railroad men cannot answer. They have an idea that the prospects for obtaining farm laborers are very much better than they looked a few weeks ago, and think that all the men required will be obtained.

Already the harvesters are on their way westward, for on Monday last the first excursion started from the territory east of Megantic and Quebec the excursion from the Maritime provinces. In Ontario something that has to be considered is this, first, that the harvest here is a large one, and, second, that it is a little later than usual. The latter fact makes work for farm hands plentiful at a period when they are usually disengaged, while the young farmers who, under ordinary circumstances, could get away may not leave on these excursions.

The Canadian Pacific Railway, which is the road principally interested in the harvester's excursions, has divided the Ontario territory into three parts, so as to not have any congestion of traffic and the district covered yesterday was from Kingston and Sharbot Lake up to but not including Toronto, and north of Toronto to North Bay, including the Midland division. Most of the farm laborers centered in Toronto yesterday morning and went on the several special trains which were run. On the Midland harvesters go by way of Orillia, and off the Kingston & Pembroke line they go through by the way of Renfrew.

$100,000 OFFERFD FOR LEASE OF LIFE

A Dying Millionaire's Pathetic Plea for Life

HE WAS STRUCK BY A TRAIN

And Passed Away Soon After in the Hospital —His Money Did not Save Him

Pittsburg, Penn., Aug. 21—John Henry, of Carnegie, who was struck by a train last night at the Fourth Avenue Station of the Pan-Handle Railroad, died at the Mercy Hospital at noon to-day as a result of his injuries.

Lying on the platform he offered any one $100,000 if they could save his life, but no one, however willing, could aid him.

Mr. Henry was one of the wealthiest residents of the Chartiers Valley. He was just about to start for a few weeks vacation trip in Michigan. Suffering from asthma, he came up from Carnegie to the city on the eight o'clock train and alighted with several other passengers, but instead of keeping with them through the gate and up to Forbes street, attempted to gain time by going around the fence which separates the eastbound tracks.

A west bound train came out of the tunnel, and he was struck and hurled high in the air. He fell between the passing train and the fence, but so narrow that he was unable to save himself, and his left arm was crushed beneath the wheels. One of his ears was also torn off.

When the Chartiers Iron and Steel Company was absorbed by the American Sheet Steel Company Mr. Henry was its President.

THE NEGRO PROBLEM OF SOUTH AFRICA

Has Gromn Acute and May Lead to Serious Conflicts of the Races.

The Blacks are Armed and are Assaulting White Women While the White Men are Disarmed.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 21.—Mail advices received here from Johannesburg indicate that the negro problem is growing more acute, and is causing the authorities infinite worry. To quote the words of one of the fore most South African authorities:

"On the question of the natives depends the whole future of the new colonies—whether the Boers will loyally accept British rule or continue in a state of sullen resentment. Among the immediate dangers, native attacks on Boers returning to their farms and attempts of natives to assault white women, are threatening to lead to serious conflicts between Boers and blacks. Under the old regime the crude but simple retribution for assaults on women was shooting on sight. Now, however, there is no legislation on the subject, and the English authorities are hesitating to enact laws until all parties concerned can voice their opinions. The hesitancy to deal summarily with the natives is causing both Boers and Afrikanders intense irritation, and encourages the blacks to truculent effrontery.

"Another phase of the problem is the unwillingness of the blacks to forego their lazy existence in the concentration camps, where thousands were gathered during the war. But far more serious is the fact that a great number of blacks in the country have managed to secure arms. There is, therefore, the anomalous situation of unarmed whites and armed blacks living in proximity on outlying farms. Experienced English colonials strongly favor universal disarmament of the natives and prompt legislation, making assaults on women a capital offence."

A UNION THAT IS STRENGTH

Malt Breakfast Food

is a Delicious Combination of Pure Malt and the Choicest Wheat

A Breakfast Relish For The Strong and Weak

Thousands of people dare not use oatmeal in any form, as they find it has a tendency to irritate the stomach, excite heat and redness of the skin and produce eruptions. Then, again, cracked wheat and other cereals contain too much insoluble starch which retards digestion.

Malt Breakfast Food is the king of foods for weak and strong stomachs. It does not contain a particle of insoluble starch, it is partially digested, therefore does not tax the powers of digestion. Malt Breakfast Food contains a greater amount of body and brain nutriment than other foods. It is the most delicious of all foods. It pleases every palate and fast becomes a favorite in homes where it is tried. Ask your Grocer for it; take no other.

Sports and Pastimes.

The Oshawa Vindicator has the following regarding the Port Hope—Oshawa lacrosse match:

The morning sun was rising fast,
As through an eastern village past
A motley mob, whose heads were swelled
Who screamed and shouted, cried and yelled: ONTARIO!

And men and maidens, young and old,
Wore yards of ribbon, black and gold;
While others, to be extra nice,
Had medals with this strange device: ONTARIO.

And ancient ladies on the train
Had these same fetters on the brain;
While infants absolutely young,
Would prattly in infantile tongue: ONTARIO.

Along Toronto's streets they sing,
First up on Younge, then down on King,
Across the waters of the Bay
They crow and cackle all the way: ONTARIO!

They storm the grounds, they fill the stand,
Their colors are on every hand,
And when their first quick goal occurred
The air was rent with that one word: ONTARIO.

Now faster and faster grew the play,
And fiercer and fiercer grew the fray,
When Henderson knocked Stewart out,
Then louder rose the boastful about: ONTARIO!

• • • • •

The shades of night were falling fast
As through that same old village past
The same old mob, with parched throat—
We strain our ears to catch the note: ONTARIO!

The crowd is hushed and strangely still,
And when they stop at Bowmanville,
They fling an old man off the train,
Because he murmured once again ONTARIO!

And now in desolate Port Hope
They kept in hand a ready rope,
Upon the nearest tree to swing
The man who dares to say or sing: ONTARIO!

IIEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE ANO LETTER

Special to The Times.

Arthabaskaville, Que., Aug. 21—The culmination of a very unusual and yet interesting romance has occurred here. Three weeks ago Hypolite Boutin of St. Rosaire, a gentleman 72 years of age, who had never married, met for the first time Miss Adelaine Desharais, who, although she has had many offers of marriage, has found pleasure in remaining single until she had passed her 70th birthday. When the aged couple met they loved, both say, for the first time in their long life, and determined on marriage. Friends advised Miss Desharais not to marry, but her answer always was the same: "I have never loved before, I have often refused to marry, but now I love and am bound to marry." The aged swain was repeatedly offered the same advice, and there was even talk among the relatives of the aged wooers to prevent the marriage, but Mr. Boutin was not to be discouraged; he met his friends with a determined answer, "I love her and will marry her; if they try to stop us we will elope, that is all, but marry her I will."

Brooklyn, Aug. 20. — The Daily Eagle's Washington correspondent, who is usually well posted as regards the view of the State Department, wires his paper as follows:

The declaration that this Government will soon take steps to settle the boundary question in Alaska, in accordance with the maps and treaties to which England has agreed, caused considerable comment in diplomatic Washington circles to-day.

Speculation is rife as to the plans of the administration for bringing about a recognition of the claims of the Americans in Alaska, and as to what will be the attitude of Great Britain when it comes to siding with the United States or her Canadian colony.

As it is to be expected, the Government officials will not discuss this matter for publication, desiring to avoid anything that might be regarded as a diplomatic break. One of the officials, however, whose work has for years been closely related to this great international question, said to the Eagle correspondent:

"There are no surface indications that a crisis is approaching in the Canadian boundary dispute, but there are pending several matters on an international character, any one of which might easily lead up to a renewal of the old question. One of these is the fur seal question. Under an agreement between Japan and the United States, which Canada refused to sign, pelagic sealing in Behring sea is forbidden to citizens of either country and Japan. British subjects kill seal in the water every year and sell the skins at good prices.

CITIZENS CHAFING.

"American citizens are chafing under restraint which ties their hands, and are complaining that our Government has entered into an agreement which is operation to the disadvantage of Americans and to the advantage of our rivals—the British and Canadians. It was proposed at the last session of Congress to do away with the agreement with Japan, putting our citizens on the same footing with those of Great Britain. This would remove cause of friction, but would result in the extermination of the animals. President Rousevelt's love of game of all kinds may cause him to take up this matter with a view of protecting the fast decreasing seal herds. If he sohuld do so the discussion of this matter could easily progress to the boundary issue."

Another suggestion as to the policy of the administration contemplates a bolder plan. It is that the President will ask Congress for an appropriation to survey and mark the boundary as fixed in existing treaties and official maps, and declare the intention of this Government to maintain the line as thus established. This would be taking the bull by the horns and would cause an instant crisis.

At the present time the officers of the two Governments on the disputed territory are executing laws in accordance with the modus vivendi, which establishes a provisional boundary. There are points lower down in Alaska, where the boundary is still in dispute, and where the modus does not apply, a mêlée or splash of official authority may occur at any time.

The warning that the boundary question is soon to be vitalized, and that it will not be subjected to arbitration has set diplomats wondering what England will do when the real crisis occurs.

CANADIAN MADE GOODS

The movement to induce people to buy Canadian-made goods, will, at all events call attention of Canadians to the fact that—other things being equal—it will pay them to do so. All the talk in the world will not persuade the average man to buy what he regards as an inferior article, simply because it is made next door; but when there is no apparent difference between two articles most of us never stop to think that we should give the preference to that "made in Canada." And the reason is not sentimental but commercial. When we buy Canadian goods, we increase the demand for goods manufactured by Canadians; and thus increase both the number of people living in Canada who will buy what we ourselves have to sell, and their purchasing capacity per capita. When we buy an American article, we get the article all right; but our money never comes back to us again. The American who gets it, buys the sort of things we make to sell from our American rivals. But when we buy a Canadian article we are very likely to get our money back again; for the man we buy it of, will probably patronize us when he wants anything in our line.

COAL GOING SKY HIGH

The coal strike is in the fourteenth week and showing no evidence of abatement. Coal in New York is selling at $11 a ton and is expected presently to go to $14. It will be a positive luxury at that price and can be purchased by the few.

No strike of the proportions of this one has continued so long. It is without a parallel in England, where the miners and engineers, with all their resources have had to surrender sooner.

Some time ago the men in the Shenandoah Valley were represented as being in a desperate state, and the one riot in which they indulged gave some ground for the conclusion. But order has been restored, and the labour leaders, by the financial aid they command, have instilled hope and persistence into the men.

The silly story has been put in circulation that there is an understanding between the miners and operators. On what it is rested no one can conjecture. All the apppearances are against it. And what could be the purpose of such a compact. To raise the price of fuel, says one. The price is bound to go up now anyway. The coal barons are not likely to suffer any loss eventually, and they will not consult the people as to how they will collect the dues.

The miners and people are bound to be out, and the burden will be the heavier the longer the struggle is continued. The release of a few small lots of coal at Oswego, amounted to nothing. They gave occasion for false hopes and expectations. The anxiety goes on, and warrants the observation of a contemporary, "that if there is any one in the country who can effectively play the part of mediator he should speak now."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Winnipeg thinks that in due time it will be the capital of Canada. That is ambitious. But there is no doubt that in twenty-five years more Winnipeg may be expected to be a big city, so big that Toronto papers will feel constrained to speak respectfully of it. And that is saying a good deal.

Schwab bought out a steel company for $7,000,000 the other day and then turned around and sold the works for $20,000,000 of stock in a new company formed to run the show. This company will probably prosper by the aid of the tariff which enables American steel makers to charge half as much again for goods to their own countrymen as to foreigners. Why the old company did not prosper, is unexplained, but perhaps Schwab and the steel trust were squeezing it.

The corn crop in the United States this year is unprecedentedly large. That will be a bad thing for Canada. The cheap American corn is admitted free to this country to pull down the price of Canadian corn and all manner of coarse grains. And American corn is admitted into Great Britain at a lower duty than Canadian grains which will handicap Canada in the British market.

The municipalities of Wentworth seem to be alive to the importance of good roads and to the value of the Ontario Government's Good Roads Act. We are glad to see that the effort made by a few miserably partisan sheets to decry the act has proved futile. Let Wentworth get the advantage of any good things the Government is giving out.

The Dominion agricultural department is going to send a lot of Canadian fruit, just picked, for free distribution at the Cork and Wolverhampton fairs. This is a good idea. It will cost money, but the advertisement is worth the cost. But is it not amazing that the government which is willing to go to such an expense to advertise the fruit of Canada did not think it worth while taking the British journalists to Hamilton and Niagara peninsula to see Canadian fruit at its best. That would have cost very little, and would have been worth, as an advertisement, more than a hundred hand-outs at agricultural fairs.

ENGLAND'S OBSOLETE WARSHIP

London, Aug. 14—Although the ships which assembled at Spithead on Saturday reached a total of 169 pennants many of the vessels are half obsolete. The best ships of the navy were not represented.

Of the battleships the Majestic, Magnificent, Prince George, Mars, Jupiter and Hannibal would be abroad at Gibraltar if war broke out. The Anson, Benbow, Camperdown, with the Devastation, Edinburgh, Conqueror and Dreadnought, are third rate ships, deficient in gunnery power, weak in armor, and incapable of meeting the best ships of the German navy.

The cruisers are for the most part equipped with the Belleville boiler. The Sutlej, the Hyacinth, the Andromache and the Hawke have given great trouble. The fifteen torpedo gunboats can neither fight nor run away from the modern vessels of similar class in foreign navies.

The ten training ships can scarcely be regarded as fighting vessels, while the twenty-four instructional destroyers are not the newest as the best of their kind. Since the naval review in the year of the Diamond Jubilee, the public have learned that five long miles of warships at anchor form a beautiful sight but are no criterion of naval efficiency.

The true lesson of the naval review is invisible. The public does not know, nobody really knows, whether British naval guns compare favorably with those of our rivals. British patriotism unites with British officialism to declare their superiority. Sir Charles Dilke and other stud.

Many Burned in Tenement

New York, Aug. 19.—In a tenement house fire at 35 Essex street to-day, two women and three children were burned to death, another woman was burned severely about the body and face and a man had three ribs broken by jumping from a window to the pavement. The body of the dead woman was burned beyond recognition. The injured woman is Mrs. Rosa Moses, and the name of the man who jumped is Jacob Muscovitz. A woman named Mrs. Hannah Balothin could not be found after the fire, and it was believed that the burned body found was hers.

Nathan Liebowitz, reported to the police that his four children, Moses, Julius, Louis and Sallie, respectively 3, 5, 6 and 8 years old, were missing, and a search of the building resulted in the finding of the badly burned bodies of two children supposed to be Liebowitz's. The body of an elderly woman also was found.

Bullets Flew Thick and Fast.

Beatyville, Ky., Aug. 20. — News has reached here of a fight near Traveler's Rest, Owsley County, in which Jesse Nealy was killed, Robert Allen was mortally wounded, James Nealey's arm was shot off, Reuben Fox was badly wounded, four others whose names cannot now be learned were slightly wounded, and Mrs. William Peters was shot in the leg.

The fight occurred Saturday night at a candy pulling at the home of William Peters, and originated between Jesse Nealey and Robert Allen over a girl. Nealy knocked James Allen down, and the latter shot Nealy through the brain, killing him instantly. About this time others began to fire. Robert Allen was shot six times, when he rolled under the bed and lay there till morning. John Allen, one of the principals in the fight, was making his escape when Jim Nealy, a brother of Jesse Nealy, tried to arrest him. Allen turned on Nealy, shot his right arm off, and succeeded in making his escape.

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

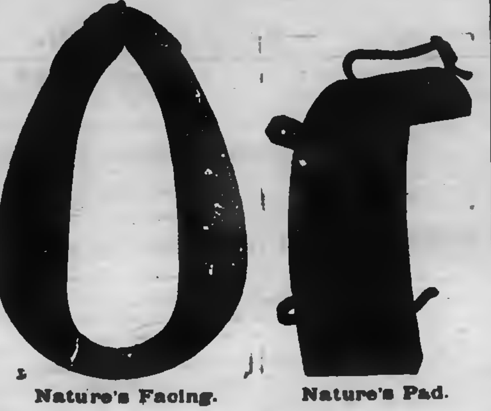
We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries, we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 32,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours truly,

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well. Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

Mainly About People.

Dr. Parr, on meeting Lord Chancellor Erskine, with whom he was friendly, once said: "Erskine, I mean to write your epitaph when you die." "Doctor," answered the great lawyer, "it is almost a temptation to commit suicide."

At a ball in the country a gentleman undertook to introduce a companion to a young but somewhat stout lady, who seemed to be pining for a dance. "No, thanks, old fellow; I don't care to waltz with a cart." A few evenings later the same young lady, who had overheard the conversation, beheld the young man seeking an introduction and asking if he might have the honor, etc. "No, thank you," she replied; "I may be a cart, but I am not a donkey cart."

A rich Irish-American, who frequently visits England and dearly loves a lord, loses no opportunity of talking of his great acquaintances. At a recent dinner party in New York, where there were several Roman Catholics, during a conversation on the subject of fasting, this gentleman said: "It is very strange how little Catholics in the higher ranks mind the fast days. I was dining at the Duke of Norfolk's on a fast day, three weeks ago, and there wasn't a bit of fish at dinner." "I suppose," said another Irishman, "they had eaten it all in the dining-room."

John D. Rockefeller recently told the following story: "I don't question the veracity of that story, but I am going to tell you one that I know to be true. It happened down in Washington. A negro was driving a wagon and in going through a street ran against a funeral. With the superstition of his race he thought it would be bad luck to cross behind the funeral, so he tried to cross ahead of it, but the driver of the hearse whipped up his horse, and the two went neck and neck for a time until finally the darkey sang out: 'Say, dah, pull up youah hoss! Mah boss is in a hurry an' yuah'n isn't!'"

Judge Pennypacker of Philadelphia tells a story which shows the readiness of the Pennsylvania Dutchman to obey those in authority: In 1864 Sheridan, under orders, burned every barn from a valley above Staunton to a certain point below Winchester. A band of angry rebels followed this raid, watching for a chance to pick up any stragglers. Among others who fell into their hands was a little Pennsylvania Dutchman, who quietly turned to his captors and enquired: "Vat you fellows going to do mit me?" The reply came short and sharp: "Hang you." "Vell," he said, meekly, "vatever is de rule." His good-natured reply threw the Confederates into a roar of laughter and saved his life.

One day last autumn Bennet Burleigh, the noted English special war correspondent, was encountered a few miles outside Pretoria by that volcanic rhetorician, General Tucker. "What the —— —— are you doing out here with that —— thing?" asked the general, pointing to a kodak which was slung round his shoulders. "Well, sir," promptly replied Mr. Burleigh, "I was intending to take some photographs; but had I known that I was to have the pleasure of meeting you I should have brought out a phonograph." At this audacity, it is said that even General Tucker's stock of sulphurous adjectives ran low.

Gilbert Parker, to illustrate the gullibility of some Englishmen in the colonies, recently told the following story: "Once in Australia on my way through the bush, with my friend Cabbage Tree Bill, we were accompanied by a burly and intelligent young gentleman from Devonshire, and as we came along we saw along the road, if it might be called a road, a young kangaroo. Bill said: 'Now wait a minute; you will see him take the letters.' The kangaroo was sitting up as if waiting for something, and Bill said, 'He has his pouch and everything ready to carry them,' but as we came along Bill snapped his whip and said, 'Nothing to-day,' and the kangaroo trotted off, the young gentleman believing for a great part of the rest of the journey that the object of the kangaroo's presence was as Bill had said."

John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster, usually wears his uniform at all times and seasons, and prefers that his men do the same. The practice has led to some very amusing experiences. For example, one night Mr. Sousa was standing in a railway station, on the platform, waiting for a train. A belated traveler ran up to him and asked, excitedly, "Has the nine-three train pulled out?" "I really don't know," responded Mr. Sousa. "Well, why don't you know?" shouted the traveler. "What are you standing here for like a stick of wood? Aren't you a conductor?" "Yes," said Mr. Sousa, pleasantly, "I am a conductor." "A nice sort of conductor, indeed!" exclaimed the man. "Well, you see," smilingly responded the musician, "I am not the conductor of a train, but of a brass band."

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

a tool to his hand—a catspaw that he could thrust into the fire—I believe if Sintra has told him what she now knows, John Bourke—or rather John Cope—would not be safe for a moment."

"Oh, if that door were only open!" I exclaimed. "How am I to get out? How am I to go to him and tell him the story—and warn him of danger?"

The sick man sighed.

"It is my fault that the door is locked," he said. "Sometimes my burden of sin has been heavier than my tired brain could bear. I have cried out, half in delirium, that I would confess all to some clergyman or some priest, who would give me comfort. And Sintra has always been determined that I should not do that. She knew that the mood would pass. And last night I walked in my sleep, as I have once or twice before. I had a dream of more than usual horror, and I woke up, out of my room—how far away, I don't know. Sintra found and brought me back. It is no wonder that she does not wish for a repetition of such an experience—though it is not the first time that it has happened. She will come to me early in the morning, but——"

"I can't wait for that," I broke in. "Besides, even then she would not let me go. She wishes me no particular harm, but she is Roger Cope's friend, and she serves his interests—perhaps she thinks that in the end they will be mine as well; at all events, she loses no opportunities of telling me so. Every door in the house is locked; or, at least, all those on the lower floors with windows from which I might try to escape. She and Roger have thought of everything. I suppose they hope, at worst, to tire me out with arguments and persuasions, making me believe that the only thing left for me is marriage with him. They could never do that if they kept me here for ten years; but I can't be kept. I must go and tell this story I have had from you. But how—how?"

"If you were a very brave girl, with a clear head as well as a stout heart, there might be a way," Walter Leigh said, slowly.

CHAPTER XXVI.

For the Man I Loved.

"What is the thing that I might do, if—I were brave enough?" I asked.

"Go, now, and look down out of the window," said the sick man.

I went back to the window where I had hidden while Sintra Leigh was in the room. It seemed a very long way to the ground. "If that is what you mean, I could never do it," I cried, shrinking back.

"Few women would dare," returned Walter Leigh.

"But it would be impossible—for any one!"

"Not impossible with a rope, or with sheets and blankets tied together."

I walked to the window again, and peered fearfully down. My heart began to thump against my side, and I grew giddy with the thought of making the attempt. For I did think of it now. Sintra Leigh would not come back to this room until morning; and as I was supposed to be asleep in bed downstairs, if I could only get away safely and quietly, my flight need not be discovered for many hours. If I could only do it, I told myself, with growing resolution, nothing could be better for me than escaping from the invalid's room.

"I will be brave!" I said, suddenly. "I am going to try."

"I thought you would," answered the sick man. "In the big chest of drawers over there you will find more blankets, which have been discarded since warm weather began. Give me the rug that is spread over the lounge and then you can take a sheet and the blanket and quilt from the bed also. I'll show you how to knot them together so that the heavier the weight hanging from them the more secure they will be. And you can fasten the end round one of the legs of the dressing-table by the window. It is as heavy as it is old-fashioned, and you may safely trust to it, if the knot is made in the right way."

He spoke as calmly, as if the ordeal before me were such an ordinary thing to carry through, that my courage began to come back. I obeyed his directions with returning self-confidence; and by following the instruction he gave me I made a sheet, three blankets, a silk quilt, and a pair of curtains into a long, well-knotted rope. By his advice, too, I tried its length by dangling it out of the window and found that it touched the ground. When I had gone—if all were well—the invalid was to rise and drag the rope back through the window. He would not have strength enough to replace the curtains which, by means of setting a chair on the big dressing-table, I had contrived to detach from their rings. But at least no one would know of my departure until Sintra Leigh should pay her morning visit to her brother.

My hat was downstairs in my own room, but I was told where I could find a traveling cap belonging to the invalid, which I might wear without attracting much attention for eccentricity; and as I had no money to pay my railway fare or other expenses he insisted that I should borrow the small sum in his purse. When I hesitated at this he reminded me that what he did was not really for me but for Ermyntrude's son, against whom he had so greatly sinned.

"Good-bye, and Heaven help you," he said when I was ready at last. "Bring the boy to me if you can, to make assurance doubly sure. I shall try to live till then, that I may tell my story and secure him his rights. The diary, too—his mother's diary—it would be good if you could find that."

For a moment or two I stood at the window afraid to begin. And it was still worse—when I had moved myself to the effort and sat trembling and giddy on the window-sill—to let myself go. But I said in my heart: "It is for him," and the mist cleared from my eyes.

I could have screamed as I swung out on my manufactured rope, and a horrid tingling ran through my body, from the crown of my head to the very ends of my fingers and toes. I had only my hands to trust to, for Walter Leigh was very weak, and able to give me no help except advice. I tried not to think of what lay below or what would happen if I lost my hold, and slowly I began to let myself down, my arms straining in their sockets. Whenever I came to one of the great knots I had made I rested for a moment, breathing hard, and looking up at the lighted window above to see how much progress I had made. If I had looked down instead I think my giddiness would have overcome me and I must surely have fallen.

A High-Class Mining Investment

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital — AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

By-Laws Voted Down

On Tuesday last the ratepayers of Lindsay voted down three money by-laws, in a way calculated not to be misunderstood. The by-laws were as follows: $20,000 for good roads, voted down by a majority of 237; $14,000 for schools, by 250 majority, and public library, by 218 majority. The citizens are evidently determined not to place further debt on their good town, an example which Peterborough would do well to emulate.

A Sure Cure for Constipation

Some remedies cure this distressing complaint in a day, some in a month, but Nerviline never fails to cure in a few minutes. Just ten drops of Nerviline in sweetened water — that's enough, and away goes the dysentery, cured to stay cured. Nerviline also cures Cramps, Colic, Pain in the Stomach and Sick Headache. It has five times the strength and curative properties of ordinary remedies, and should be in every household. Better buy a 25c. bottle and try it. Nerviline is all right.

PETERBORO THIRTY YEARS AGO

Items of Interest Taken from the Times of April 1872

Messrs. Boultbee and Fairbairn have opened a new law office in Scott's block, corner of Simcoe and George streets.

—Rev. G. H. Davis, the esteemed pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist church, was presented with a purse containing $200 by the official board of the church as a mark of their appreciation of his services.

—We are informed that J. T. Henthorne has sold 60 feet frontage off his property on George street, between Hopkins' and Beckett's stores to Messrs. Cox and Bradburn, who propose building three stores thereon. This will get rid of another ugly piece of fence and eyesore to the town.

—The Ogemah has resumed her trips between Bridgenorth, Bobcaygeon, Lindsay and Fenelon Falls.

—On Saturday last Messrs A. L. Colville and G. A. Farmer were out in a canoe near the locks dam and were attempting to paddle up stream, when the current running too strong, they tried to paddle across but one of them missing his stroke, the canoe upset, and they were precipitated into the water and carried over the dam. Fortunately Mr. Walters was working at the locks, and he at once put off in a punt and brought them ashore. Had it not been for his timely aid, it is more than probable that both of the young men would have found a watery grave, as Mr. Colville, having received a blow on the head, was quite helpless and had to be held up by Mr. Farmer by the collar.

—With reference to the above we are glad to mention that the two gentlemen who had such a narrow escape, have shown how they appreciated the service done them by Mr. Walters, and have presented him with a handsome meerschaum pipe and case, accompanied by the following letter:

Peterboro, April 30, 1872.

Dear Sir,—We beg that you will accept the pipe which is sent with this as a small memento of Saturday last. Of course we cannot hope to make you any return for your prompt assistance in helping us out of the water, and hope you will accept this in the same spirit that it is given.

We remain, yours very truly.

(Signed) G. A. FARMER,
A. L. COLVILLE.

Miss Jones' Voice Greatly Improved

A startling improvement is noticeable in Miss Jones' singing. Her voice is stronger, and sounds sweeter and clearer than before using Catarrhozone, which is a wonderful aid to singers, speakers and ministers. Catarrhozone Inhaler insures absolute freedom from Colds, Coughs, Catarrh clears the nose and throat and prevents hoarseness and huskiness. Catarrhozone makes the voice brilliant and enduring, and is uncommonly well recommended by Prima Donnas, members of Parliament, Lawyers, Doctors, and thousands that use it daily. Better try Catarrhozone. Price $1.00; trial size, 25c. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Hamilton's Pills cure Constipation.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—Considerable hay is being offered for sale on the market just now.

—The Lindsay Masonic fraternity are running an excursion to-morrow by rail to Lakefield, and thence by steamer Kenosha back to Lindsay.

—Mr. James McIntyre, formerly proprietor of the Oriental Hotel here is now in the hotel business in Kingston where he is doing well.

—A large excursion passed through town yesterday morning for Stony Lake. It was run under the auspices of the Baptist church, of Port Hope.

—A handsome and well appointed pleasure yacht, 35 feet long, the property of Mr. Wm. McKenzie, the well known railway magnate, was launched at Lindsay, on Tuesday, having been brought by rail from Toronto. It will be taken to Kirkfield, the summer home of Mr. McKenzie and family.

—Coldsprings Sunday School annual excursion will take place on Tuesday, Aug 26, per steamer City of Peterborough to Idyl-Wild and Jubilee. We understand that quite a number of our citizens will take in this popular outing. The steamer will leave the Peterborough wharf at 8 a.m. and Locks at 8.30.

—Lindsay Post: The Orillia Times notes as a novelty in the building line in that town the construction of a cement building for store purposes. In Lindsay we have a number of cement structures, including the extensive stabling and sheds of Messrs Pym Bros., of the Daly house, which replace the frame structures destroyed in the big fire a couple of months ago. The new stables are by long odds the best in town.

—Mr. Jas. Wheeler a wealthy Englishman, has purchased Massassaga Park, Belleville's summer resort, from Mr. Henry Corby, for $5,000. Mr. Wheeler will erect a magnificent modern hotel and a number of cottages, and will make the 100 acres of park land one of the finest pleasure resorts on the continent. When all the other sites have been bought up Sturgeon Point may attract attention.

A GIRL'S PLUCK

Food That Cut Work in Half

The food that will enable a person to accomplish in one year the work laid out for two years is worth knowing about. Miss Annie Avery, a student in Lanark, Ont., writes; "I know I felt my ill health even more than if I had been engaged in any other work as the confinement of school only increased my sickness and inability to study.

Last year I was on the way to a general breakdown in health; I suffered from severe headaches, was becoming a confirmed dyspeptic, nervous system broken down and my condition went on from bad to worse until I was unable to study or even go to school.

My parents were very anxious about me as medicine did not help and Mother hearing about Grape-Nuts obtained some and I commenced to use it at once; I was very much surprised at the quick effect the food had on me. I began to get better as a result from its continued use; I am no longer troubled with sick stomach and headaches, nor am I the nervous girl I was last year. I feel so well and study so well, that I am making an attempt to get my certificate with but one year's work, when at the very least two years are always allowed for it. I have gained 30 lbs. since using Grape-Nuts and now enjoy good physical and mental health."

STRONG BROKERAGE FIRM

Where Speculators and Investors have Many Advantages

We call the attention of investors to the advertisement of Messrs. McDearmott, Evans & Lee., of 35 Wall Street New York, who have opened a branch office at the corner of Victoria and Lombard streets, Toronto, which is equipped with direct private wire connection with the head office, from which their private wire system radiates covering the entire country from New York to Denver. The firm has its own branch houses or close correspondents in all the leading cities of the west and many of those in the east, by which they are enabled to keep in the closest touch with all important events affecting the stock or grain markets and are enabled to supply advance information to clients. The facilities of the firm for obtaining information as to the doings of those who have been practically in control of the market during the past year, the so-called "Western-crowd," has been fully demonstrated with most satisfactory results for their customers. The firm claims that their line of information is not exceeded either in volume or quality by any private wire house doing business in Canada, having the only direct wire between Toronto and Wall Street, with no intermediate connections and no relaying.

"The firm's circular letter to the public reads:—"Should you desire to enter the market at any time, either for speculation or investment, we respectfully solicit a share of your business by way of comparison, and assure you in advance that we shall endeavor to handle it in such a manner as to merit your continued patronage. As regards the matter of responsibility we are prepared to show that we are not exceeded by any house in the trade operating in Toronto. No member of the firm has ever been connected with any institution that ever failed or suspended. We have gone successfully through all the panics and flurries of the past several years, including the famous Leiter deal of 1897, that was so fatal to many houses in the grain trade. We have always been able to protect not only ourselves but our clients as well. In opening our Toronto offices we have placed on deposit with the Bank of Montreal $20,000 to facilitate prompt settlements, which amount we shall be glad to increase should the volume of business justify. We respectfully refer you to the Seventh National Bank, New York; The National Shoe and Leather Bank, New York; the City National Bank of Kansas City, Missouri; and the Union National Bank of Kansas City, Missouri; The American National Bank, Kansas City, Missouri most of whom have known us for fifteen years; also to the various commercial agencies. As regards the financial matter related above we refer to the Bank of Montreal, Toronto."

The Story of Morning Tiredness

Is told by impure blood, poor digestion, sluggish liver and tired nerves. It is a warning of very serious trouble ahead, and should prompt sensible people to take a bracing tonic like Ferrozone, an energetic invigorant and rebuilder. Ferrozone will give you a sharp appetite, promote good digestion and sound sleep; it will feed and energize the enfeebled organs, strengthen the nerve and vital forces and regulate the heart. Ferrozone changes that tired feeling into vigor, strength and ambition and does it quickly. Remember the name and insist on having only Ferrozone; it's the best tonic made. STOCK SOLD ON INSTALLMENT

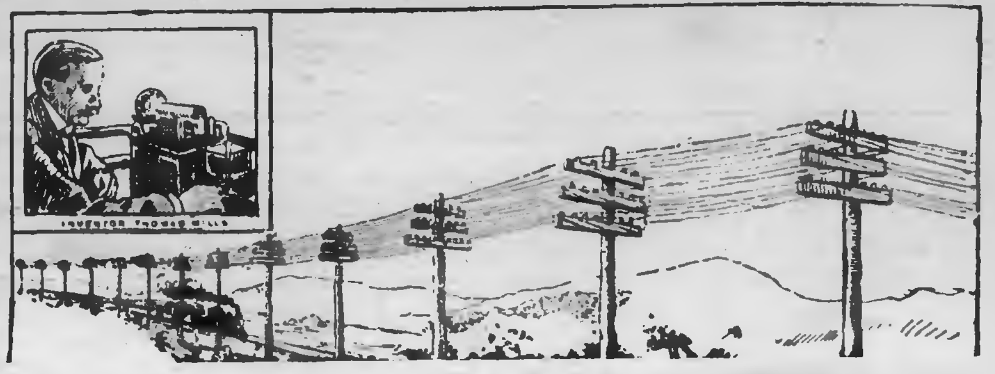
To Investors! A Chance of a Lifetime.



The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $600 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realised a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realise the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

OUR GREAT WESTERN HERITAGE, ITS WONDERFUL DEVELOPMENT AND GROWTH

The General Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway Returns from the West

Talks About Wonderful Progress Being Made

Harvest Prospect Good, and Help Being Rapidly Provided

Ottawa, Aug. 22—After an absence of over a month in the west, during which he inspected all the lines right to the coast, Mr. D. McNicholl, general manager of the Canadian Pacific railway system, passed through on his way to Montreal. The general manager, whose private car was attached to the regular transcontinental, was accompanied by the chief engineer of the road, Mr. McHenry, and two secretaries.

"What most impressed me during my trip," said Mr. McNicholl in conversation with a reporter, "was the big crops, the number of people, and the general development of the fast-growing western country. Everyone out west is now talking crops and the yield, it is fully expected, will exceed the excellent one of last year. I passed through hundreds of miles of fertile country, with grain and other cereals ripening for the harvest, and by the the end of this week the gathering of it should be in full blast. Some talk has been expressed that an insufficient number of laborers would be secured to get in the crop, but from the reports received, it is evident that the supply will equal the demand. As far as the railway is concerned, we have greatly added to our rolling stock and fully expect to be able to haul the immense grain output without any great delay or difficulty.

"In my annual trips west I cannot fail to notice the almost remarkable growth of the country. Where there used to be mere neighborhoods or hamlets there are thriving villages and towns now. The growth of the city of Winnipeg, too, has been marvelous. Year by year it is reaching out and building up with a most substantial class of structures. There is a lot of activity and bustle noticeable everywhere.

"Then out along the prairies," continued Mr. McNicholl, "the farm lands are fast being taken up. Our agents tell us that half the land is gone already. The new settlers are inclined to go further back into the country and not to stick so close to the line of railway. A lot of immigrants are coming in from month to month. During my trip I met a good number of the Doukhobors. The most of them are engaged in farming and we give employment to a good number along our line. They are a peaceful, law-abiding class of people, seemingly industrious, but many of their ways are peculiar. When they become more assimilated to the conditions of the country they should make a very good class of citizens.

"On the coast there also seems to be a general prosperity. Vancouver is going ahead rapidly. In fact the whole of western Canada is blessed with the sunshine of pervading prosperity. The people seem contented, business is good, there is plenty of work, and no apparent scarcity of money.

"The C.P.R. too has had its share of the benefit of the general prosperity and our lines have done an excellent business. We are pursuing in the west our policy of gradual expansion. This year we are continuing the Manitoba and Northwestern railway, and also opening a line to Winnipeg beach; then, from Kilkella, we are miles and also extending a line a short distance north of Yorktown. In British Columbia we are building thirty-five miles of road in the Trout Lake country. In all there is over two hundred miles under construction.

"We do considerable repairing in our western shops, but very little construction. Our general policy is to concentrate our works and it is necessary to do this where the material can most easily be secured and where labor is centered. We do by far the greater part of building now at the Montreal and Perth shops.

"We have found our road beds in excellent condition and our trains are all running like clock work. The only thing which occasionally puts them behind is the great length of the trains caused by the heavy patronage which we are enjoying. Considerable improvement will be made in curves and gradients at different parts of the line."

A SCHEME TO SETTLE BRITONS IN SOUTH AFRICA

How the South African Veldt is to be Peopled with Loyal Britons

London Aug. 23.—A cable from South Africa says:

The scheme of settling on the land a great number of British immigrants appears to have every chance of success. A large staff of surveyors is employed in surveying ground suitable for agriculture. With them are a number of inspectors possessing intimate local knowledge, who report on the suitability of the land for various purposes. When all the reports have been received the farms favorably mentioned will be split into small holdings, so as to give the proper protection to each kind of farming.

For the present only the best farms in the healthiest districts are surveyed and inspected. Large tracts of land owned by the Government in the remoter and less healthy districts are to be taken in hand later on, under some modified scheme of settlement, experience having shown it requires time and knowlegde of local conditions to make such occupation successful.

It is necessary to make some immediate provision for a large number of discharged soldiers, and land has been found for them in the Middleburg, Nylstroom and Potchefstroom districts, but the difficulty of transport is impeding progress.

Water Storage Project.

Four parties of Australian experts under Captain Doyle, are boring for water in the Nylstroom district, and arranging for a system of underground tanks like those in the waterless tracts of Australia. This barren district may thus be converted into one of the richest portions of the Transvaal.

Over five thousand applications have been made by settlers having capital, but it is generally felt that nothing can be done hastily. It is necessary to discover and survey the most suitable land before bringing into the country numbers of men who will find that the expenses of living, while they are waiting for their farms will eat up a good portion of their capital.

Hard Workers Wanted.

The land settlement scheme includes payment on easy terms, and every encouragement will be given to good and industrious farmers, but it is well to warn intending settlers of the necessity of hard work. The day of big pastoral farms is now over so far as new settlers are concerned. The ideal lazy life which the old settlers lived, while watching their stock increase is not to be realised under the new conditions.

Experimental Farm.

One of the new departures in connection with land is the establishment of a large experimental farm at Potchefstroom. It is intended to try and find by a series of experiments suitable trees, grasses and crops as well as to import prize pedigree stock of sheep and pigs with the intention of improving the breed. Every farmer will be allowed free of charge the use of the bulls and rams of this farm with a view to bettering the breeds throughout South Africa. The system is essentially experimental, and does not aim at any commercial success.

It is difficult to say at the present stage what are the chances of ultimate success of the scheme of land settlements. Many who have lived here and tried to make agriculture pay have failed. They declare the country to be purely pastoral. Others, however, entertain the opinion that if water is procurable there is no reason why the Transvaal should not be self-supporting in the matter of grain and mealies. It has always been a reproach to the country that it has not even been able to supply Johannesburg with mealies.

It is to be hoped that with the new Administration this will be accomplished, but up to the present the mines have found it cheaper to import mealies from South America than to buy the local produce.

HEAVY RAINS

Have Killed Hay Fever This Year and Millions Can Rejoice

Chronic sufferers from hay fever have good reasons for rejoicing this year over the predictions of medical experts, who say that the cause of the much dreaded disease has been removed by the recent heavy rains. Confirmation of the predictions is found on persons who are known to the medical profession as the "June patients." They escaped this year, the first season within the recollection of those afflicted during that month. The closing days of August are generally the most dreaded. This is the month when the pollen of the various plants, especially the ragweed, is blown through the air, together with the dust, producing in the victims an inflammation of the mucous membrane of the nose and eyes, and other symptoms of bronchitis and asthma. Physicians believe that the heavy rains have beaten the pollen of the ragweed into the earth with such force that the winds cannot resurrect it."

FRENCH NUNS SEEKS TO SETTLE IN CANADA

Ask Pope's Permission to Wend Their Way to America

Paris, Aug. 21.—Despatches from Rome say that the members of the religious orders, expelled from France, especially Sisters, are applying to the Vatican authorities for permission to settle in Canada or the United States. Several of them have come to Rome personally for the purpose of urging their requests.

A reply has been sent to them pointing out that there are no vacancies in the United States, and besides, calling attention to the difficulty that arises from the fact that the expelled Sisters do not speak the English language. Canada has been suggested as a better field, as Sisters are comparatively scarce there, and because French is spoken in a large area of the Dominion. The applicants however, did not take kindly to the suggestion, and insist in their requests to go to the United States.

Not a Royalist Movement.

Catholic leaders and the Catholic press deny the Premier's allegation that the antagonism to the closing of the religious schools is a royalist movement. Count Albert de Mun, who, with Abbe Gayraud, is the guiding spirit of the resistance in Finnisterre, declares that the movement is entirely spontaneous on the part of the people themselves, and that not an act or a shout has occurred in Brittany to justify the allegation that a royalist conspiracy exists. Count Albert de Mun says the Marseillaise has been sung everywhere, and that it is evident the Government is embarrassed by the situation and has invented the royalist scare in order to create a diversion. Francois Coppee expressed a similar opinion in more forcible language.

The Patrie says it is rumored that the Government intend to arrest the royalist Senator from Finnisterre, M. de Chamaillard. Ministerialist organs assert that the Government possesses curious information as to the manner in which the Breton peasants were deluded into a belief that they could successfully resist the Republic.

Protest to Combes.

Admiral de Cuverville, Abbe Gayraud, who is a member of the Chamber of Deputies, and Councillor Soubigon have addressed a protest to the Premier, M. Comber, on account of the allegations of royalist, saying:

"We protest against the attempt to give a political character to the demonstrations of an indignant public conscience. While applauding the legitimate protests of the population, who are grateful to the Sisters, we shall continue to strive to prevent acts of violence. Long live the Liberal Republic."

FOUND IN THE OTTAWA

Body of Unknown Boy, About 15 Years of Age, Recovered at North Nation Mills

Ottawa, Aug. 22—The body of an unknown boy, apparently about 15 years of age, was found Sunday morning in the Ottawa river, near Plaisance (North Nation Mills.) The body had evidently been in the water a long time, being in a bad state of decomposition. Dr. Longpre, coroner of Papineauville, was notified, and after holding an inquest a verdict of "found drowned," was returned and the body was buried on Monday morning. The decomposition of the remains was so great that identification was almost impossible.

BURGLAR STOLE SAMPLE BILLS.

Theft of Important Property from Hochelaga Bank

Special to The Times.

Montreal, Aug. 21.—A burglar broke into the Hochelaga Bank one night last week and stole the case containing the samples of the bank's bills from five to one hundred dollars, which are printed on coarser paper than their notes and on one side only. Last night a man tried to pass a twenty dollar bill on Mr. J. A. Shiinnich of St. Louis, but he detected that it was too thick. On being questioned the man ran away, but was recaptured. He was arraigned in the Police Court to-day and remanded. He had to doctor the sample bill carefully before he tried to pass it. He scraped the paper on the unprinted sides and then pasted these together, back to back, thus forming a twenty dollar bill, which might have deceived any one not so used to handling such bills.

WANTED BY 47 WOMEN

Texas Widower, a Gay Deceiver, Leaves a Trail of Broken Promises

Special to The Times.

St. Louis, Aug. 22.—Froty-seven women in St. Louis and vicinity would like to find Thomas Benton. Benton is the "foxy" old widower, who claimed to be a millionaire cattle man from El Paso, Tex. Six widows have confessed that they were engaged to marry Benton. Benton is sixty-five years old. His right hand is cut off, but that was no handicap in his race for the widows. He won the widows by promising them diamonds and bonds and a mansion in Texas. Some of the widows sold their boarding houses, packed their trunks and got ready to marry and go to Texas with Benton.

Benton appears to have gotten acquainted with the widows through a matrimonial advertisement. When he fled he left behind a large bundle of letters from St. Louis widows and young unmarried women.

ENTITLED TO WAR MEDALS

A Movement to Procure Them for the Last Contingent

The fact that the members of the last contingent to South Africa which includes a lot of Peterboro young men, were not entitled to and did not get their war medals has caused considerable comment, and much influence has been brought to bear on the military authorities so that the men might secure this much-coveted memorial of the war. The order that come from the War Office was to the effect that all soldiers who were landed in South Africa after May 31st did not take actively a part in the fighting operations in the war and in consequence were not to receive the war medals. The members of the Canadian contingents left Canada while the war was still in operation and they were landed in South Africa a few days after peace was declared. It is considered a hardship that the Canadians are to be deprived of something which each man no doubt would prize highly, when they started with such good intentions, and were not to blame for the fact that the transports they were on did not get to Africa before peace was declared.

As a prominent militia officer said at Ottawa yesterday, the real hardship of soldiering comes in breaking away from family ties and friends, that which occurs afterwards is of secondary consideration. This opinion is held by all the high military officers in Ottawa and the general public is greatly impressed with the idea that the men should get their medals. In fact it is a most probable thing that a memorial will be presented to the Governor-in-Council, to the effect that an order-in-Council be passed, asking the Imperial authorities to give the Canadians of these regiments their medals.

ESCAPED FROM BONDAGE

Dragged from Home by Actors He Begs Transportation Back

Special to The Times.

New York, Aug. 23.—The Herald says: Weary of America and longing for the Immigration Station at Ellis Island, Charles Coleman, 14 years old came to the Immigration Station at Ellis Island yesterday and begged for transportation across the sea.

He told a story of being kidnapped by the members of a travelling theatrical troupe more than two years ago, when picking berries beside a country road four miles out of Belfast, and of being landed in Quebec a few months later. There, he said, he applied for relief to a charity organization, and was hired out to a farmer for four years and six months.

After serving one year and a half, working from early dawn till late at night, he ran away and found a friend in a Catholic priest at Peterborough, twenty miles distant, the Rev. Daniel O'Connell, who furnished the means for the boy to go to Rochester. There he worked in a department store, but indoor life was not to his liking, and he made a search for a sister in the vicinity of New York. In March he came to her home at No. 45 West 27th street.

About that time, too, the boy found his first opportunity to communicate with his mother, and the answering letter told him of the death of his father, a sergeant of pioneers in the Second Battalion of Royal Irish Rifles.

Then homesickness took a firm grip on young Coleman, who longed to be back with his mother, and the stories of the chance of great opportunities for him, if he should stay, did not change his mind. His sister is unable to care for him, and it is probable that Commissioner Williams will find a way to deport the young Irishman.

NO SIGN OF END OF COAL STRIKE

Absence of an Election will Keep Morgan from Using His Influence

Special to The Times.

New York, Aug. 23. — The Post says: Officials connected with the large coal companies declared yesterday that there was no change in the situation, or any prospect of an immediate settlement of the differences between the operators and the United Mine Workers. One official said that there could be little hope of a settlement at any earlier date than October 1.

President Truesdale of the Lackawanna Coal Company said that there was practically no change in the situation. "We are still waiting," he said, "as we have since the inception of the strike, and we will continue to do so until the men are ready to return to work, whenever that will be."

"Are you going to see Mr. Morgan to-day, regarding the coal strike?" he was asked. Mr. Truesdale smiled.

"I have no appointment with Mr. Morgan," he replied, and then signified that the interview was ended.

"This talk of Mr. Morgan settling the strike," said an official of one of the large coal companies, "is utterly absurd. Mr. Morgan is too shrewd a man and far too deeply interested to interfere."

NO POLITICS NOW.

When his attention was drawn to the fact that the last strike in the anthracite fields was brought to a termination solely through the efforts of Mr. Morgan, this official said:

"The situation was different then. That time politics entered as a factor. Pennsylvania would have been lost to the Republican party, unless the strike has been settled. That was what prompted Mr. Morgan to interfere, and the operators were largely actuated by the same motive in granting some concessions to have the differences between them and their employers settled.

"There is no election pending at this time, and, as I said before, Mr. Morgan has far too great interests at stake to be a factor in turning the control of the anthracite mines over to Mitchell and his followers. Rumors such as these will do much harm. They tend to prolong a struggle which can end only one way. In this connection it should be said also that if the Civic Federation had not interfered there would never have been any strike. Just fancy such men as Senator Hanna and Bishop Potter, who know nothing about mining, trying to settle differences which concern us and our employes and nobody else."

TO GAIN SYMPATHY

A prominent retail coal dealer declared that the strongest card the miners could play at the present time would be to return to work, first, however, declaring as the ground for their apparent surrender that they apppreciated the misery and hardship which their continued holding out would occasion. In this way, public sympathy would turn strongly to the side of the workers, and would do more than anything else to force the operators to recognize their organization.

Boer Generals Have Pursued a Moderate Course in Holland--Kruger's Loss of Prestige

Free Trade with States, Stay Out of Canada—An Important Declaration by Premier of Bond, of Newfoundland

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 23.—The Brussels correspondent of the Times says that the telegrams from Holland have been confused and contradictory, but that it is plain that the Boer generals have done everything in their power to avoid arousing anti-British demonstrations, and that all reports regarding their future so-called "political program" are premature. The rumors that Kruger reproached the generals is not credited in Brussels, and the reports of dissensions between the generals and their colleagues are unconfirmed. The loss of prestige by Kruger and his party, says the correspondent, is shown by the lack of interest in their doings on the part of the Belgian press. Serious opinion does not assign to Loyds any status in the future political developments of South Africa.

ANGRY WITH VON BULO.

London, Aug. 23.—The German press says a correspondent, shows sign of irritation against Count Von Bulow, the Imperial Chancellor, as the result of several recent incidents. The correspondent instances the affair of the Posen official, Loebning and Emperor William's telegram to the Prince Regent of Bavaria, and the early release of Lieut. Hildbrandt (who killed Lieut. Blaskowitz in a duel) as among the incidents that have caused anger. It seems likely that this event will find vent in the Rechstag in October, when Von Bulow's position will not be an enviable one.

EXPECT CHAMBERLAIN TO SPEAK.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 23.—The Times' Paris correspondent says that the Temps thinks the Boer generals' decision to return to London immediately shows that they expect from Chamberlain a positive statement as to when autonomy will be granted.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 23.—Sir Robert Bond, the Premier and Colonial Secretary, of Newfoundland, sailed from Liverpool yesterday, for Montreal, on the Allan Line steamer Pretorian, on his way to Washington with full power from the Imperial Government to reopen the negotiations through the British Charge D'Affaires for the ratification of the Bond-Blaine convention.

BOND'S DECLARATION.

The Newfoundland Premier has declared himself in favor of free trade with the United States as against a union of the colony with the Dominion of Canada. His success in obtaining Imperial sanction for his present American visit is the culmination of twelve years of persistent effort, and only this week was he able to convince the Government of the injustice done to Newfoundland by the non-ratification of the convention, and able to secure its consent for the resumption of the reciprocity negotiations.

The Premier of Newfoundland will lose no time in getting to work, and the British Charge D'Affaires will communicate with the State Department shortly after the Premier's arrival in America.

ACCIDENT TO LIPTON.

London, Aug. 23.—Sir Thomas Lipton was in an automobile accident to-day while coming to town from his country house. His twelve-horse car, which he was driving himself, skidded on the street car rails at Woodgreen, and crashed violently into the iron railing bordering the road. The car was wrecked, and the railing was smashed for a considerable distance, but Sir Thomas escaped with a shock and a few bruises.

PARENTHOOD BY POOR BANNED

How a Chicago Educationist would Hasten the Social Millenium

Special to The Times.

Chicago, Aug. 23. — "Parentage among poor and improvident should be discouraged," said Chancellor E. Benjamin Andrews of the University of Chicago. He placed the great increase in this class of citizens among the list of social evils that should be eliminated. He urged his hearers to lend their influence to the discouragement of parenthood among the poorer classes. He insists that it is one of the great duties of society to discourage the birth of children under conditions which render it unlikely that they will become self supporting citizens.

Dr. Andrews contended in his lecture that parenthood conditions as they exist to-day are exactly the opposite from what they should be. He said: "The rich and educated people who can raise children and rear them so that they will be a credit to society and to the nation, are the parents of very few children, while the improvident and inefficient population of the country brings forth children in great numbers. An effort should be made to discourage parentage among the poorer classes."

"Population that is not virile, that cannot support itself and provide for its wants and necessities ought to be eliminated as far as possible from society. The only way to do this is to discourage the birth of children under conditions which render it unlikely that they will become self-supporting citizens. Parenthood among such people should be discouraged and kept down. This prolific population from the inefficient classes must be checked, while the rich and cultured must be made to see that it devolves upon them to bring up the young of the nation, because they have the power and means to rear more and better citizens.

"Misapplied philanthropy often makes beggars of citizens. Take the homely example of women who put dollars and dollars together to buy saws and axes, and then get together a big pile of wood for tramps to cut so that they may earn their board and lodging. This shows how these tramps are encouraged in their policy not to do work sufficient to keep them in the social world.

Sure Cure for Sick Stomach

Will act, not so much directly upon the nerves as upon the digestive functions, and the abundant formation of red, vitalizing blood. Nerves can't be fed on medicine. They can, however, be restored and strengthened by assimilated food. The marvelous action of Ferrozone arises from its action over the digestive and assimilative processes. When you take Ferrozone the blood is purified, strengthened, and grows rich and red. Then you grow vigorous, healthy and beautiful, ready for work, because you have the strength to do it. No tonic for the brain, blood or nerves compares with Ferrozone. Price 50c., at Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Grand Trunk Reports Confirm the Good News.

The Crops are the Best Ever Known in This Country

Montreal, Aug. 23.—The Grand Trunk freight department is in receipt of the most encouraging reports of the condition of the crops in Western Ontario.

"With the exception of hay," remarked Mr. J. W. Loud, freight traffic manager here, "our reports show a large acreage and splendid crops. In fact the general condition of the country is prosperous, and we are participating in the general prosperity perity, the fruit crop is exceptionally heavy, and there will be a large export trade in apples. On account of the coal strike in the anthracite regions, there has been, of course, a decrease in the coal moved. The corn crop in the Western States is also reported as doing well, but it is too early yet to predict its volume."

Referring to the coal situation, Mr. Loud did not think that even were the strike settled now, that Canadian dealers would be able to bring up their stocks to the usual dimensions as the lake vessels were chartered for ore.

CHANGE IN SYSTEM

The proposal made by Mr. John Millar, Deputy Minister of Education for Ontario, that the money granted to the schools of the Province should be distributed, not on a basis of school attendance, as at present, but on a basis of salaries paid to teachers, may not be a sufficient remedy, but it would certainly have some influence in the right direction. It would convey an idea to every board of school trustees in Ontario and keep the idea before them. They would be reminded each year that it is desirable to get the best teacher possible, rather than the cheapest possible. It would be a useful hint given at the right moment in a way that would not be misunderstood. The grant would come to be regarded as money not given to relieve the taxpayers of part of their school tax, but as money given to improve the school.

A FREE AD. FOR PEAT

Canada's dependence on the United States was never so marked as today in the matter of coal supply. When a little industrial war like a strike of miners can, by cutting of our supply of hard coal, knock out of business all our self-feeding coal stoves, and hot air and hot water furnaces, and drive us back to cordwood or peat, what would not a real war with that country do, for most of the soft coal which supplies our industries also comes from the States. Nova Scotia soft coal might be brought this far west but the expense would be very great, sufficient to placeit out of the reach of most industries. The only possible relief from such dependence seems to be in the development of our peat beds, and the generating of heat by electricity at Niagara Falls.

A SELECTIVE OFFER

The Modern Telephone Company, (Oscar Wentworth Rogers' Company) has submitted to Hamilton a draft agreement, setting forth what the company is prepared to do for Hamilton, and what it expects Hamilton to do for the company.

The company's offer is to put all its wires underground and to supply a telephone service at $10 a year for telephones.

The Ottawa Journal says that the Ottawa city council has been delaying action on the telephone question in order to see what headway Hamilton makes, the Bell exclusive franchise there having expired this year. This Rogers' offer to Hamilton is a very seductive one.

The weak point at present is that the Rogers' company offers no guarantee of security that the company can carry out its promises. No city in the world at present has $10 telephones, and we do not believe that the service can ever be made to pay at that price.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Here is an incident which may prove as a warning to preachers who allow themselves to be carried away by their own eloquence and give way to wild and what sometimes appears to be uncontrollable gesticulation. Rev. W. I. Sweet, of Everett, Mass., is naturally a mild-mannered man, but when warmed up in his sermons he makes many gestures. On Sunday last he caused great excitement in the First Presbyterian church at Passaic, N. J., for in his excitement incident to preaching a stirring sermon he did about $100 worth of damage. He had just started when, with a sweep of his hand, he knocked a large and valuable vase, containing cut flowers off the pulpit, and the pieces fell upon those in the front pews. The congregation tittered. A few moments later away went the large Bible, which occupied the top of the desk. This, too, fell in the front pews. Next a glass containing ice water was sent flying against the choir loft and smashed, and the congregation moved in their seats, but when a table on which was a cut glass pitcher, filled with water, went over unto the front ranks of the worshippers it was more than they could stand, and a general laugh went up. Mr. Sweet laughed, too, and when quiet was restored went on as though nothing had happened. As a precautionary measure, the rev. gentleman might hereafter, before preaching in a strange pulpit, rehearse his part and become familiar with the surroundings.

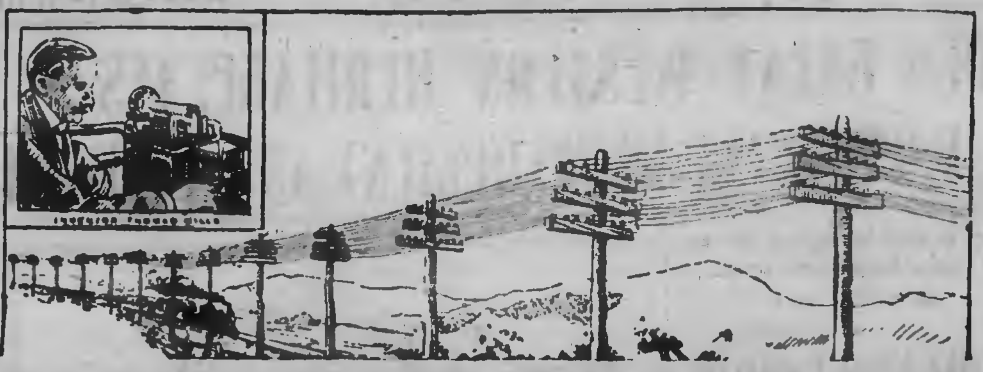
ToInvestors! A Chance of a Lifetime.



The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $600 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realised a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realise the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

ANNOUNCEMENT La Mina Blanca!

50,000 SHARES AT 20 CENTS

For August Only

—PAR VALUE $1.00—

Ore in sight and value per ton makes our Shares sell worth 75c. Watch them grow. Apply for terms, etc.

Nearly two years ago a party of well-known business men of Minneapolis organized the LaSonora Gold & Silver Mining Co., for the express purpose of developing the famous old Spanish Mine, La Blanca, well-known all through Sonora, Mexico, as a heavy producer of rich ore in ancient days, the company allowing only a few friends to invest with them, preferring to take the risk (if any) on their own shoulders. BUT HAPPILY THERE WAS NO RISK, and after ten months' labor and hundreds of feet of tunnels and shafts, they cut in Nov. the ore, and found below the old works what the ancients mined above them, 10 feet of very rich gold and silver ore, assaying from $24.75 to $217 per ton. Since Nov. 9 have opened the vien by drifting over 60 feet, and have now no scruples in offering to the investing public a chance to join with us in an absolute certainty.

The mine is ready for a concentrator, and for that purpose (only) we have alloted 50,000 shares.

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers
Fortune's Spor, Miss Nobody,
Her Royal Highness Lady
Mary of the Dark
House, etc.

Never had moments seemed so long! but at last I was opposite the tops of the laurel bushes that grew near the house; then my feet touched the ground. With that I gave a sob, and letting go of the rope fell in a huddled heap on the grass, where I lay, quite still and nerveless. I was not in the least hurt, but I felt broken to pieces, and my hands and feet pringled all over with the sensation known as "going to sleep."

A faint "Hist!" at the window whence I had come roused me at length, and I tottered up, unable to stand, until I supported myself against the house wall. But in a minute or two I was myself again, sufficiently at least to feel that I could walk; and when I had given back an answering whisper and seen the rope drawn up I began to search for the wide avenue which would lead me to the gates I remembered.

A late moon was just rising, and after I had stumbled over a few flowerbeds I came into the drive. Never before had I been out alone in the night and the country, but I was too thankful to have escaped from the house with sound limbs to think of being afraid.

The great gates were locked, but there was a small gate for foot-passengers at the side, and this was open. The lodge was dark, and apparently deserted, as it had been before, so I passed freely, and drew a long breath of relief when I found myself out in the open road.

I forced myself to recall that in driving in we had first seen the gates on the right, therefore I could form an idea of the way to the railway station. I was glad now that I had looked often from the carriage window, for I remembered several landmarks which made the long walk seem shorter, buoying me up from time to time with renewed hope.

At the station I had a bitter disappointment, for the place was dark and deserted; but when I had hovered miserably about for half an hour, perhaps, I saw in the brightening moonlight a huge market cart coming down the road.

I hailed it, careless of the surprise which might be aroused by the appearance of a young woman alone near the railway station at such a time of night.

A man answered my call, peering curiously down at me from his high seat. He was going to Bournemouth, at which place he would arrive about four in the morning. If I were anxious to reach town as soon as possible I could certainly get an early train from there, while at a small place like this I might have to wait till much later. He would give me a lift if I liked. I did like; and presently, perched beside my new friend, I was jogging along the quiet country road, with only the moon to stare at me.

My patience was sorely tried by this delay, which I had not been practical enough to count upon. But I consoled myself with the thought that my tracks were being more skilfully covered than if I had gone direct to London by train; and that as it was I should probably arrive in town before the hour at which my absence was likely to be discovered.

I counted still upon getting away by five; but I had to wait in Bournemouth till nearly six, and it was nine when I reached Waterloo Station. Walter Leigh's money got me a cab, and at half-past nine, told by distant Big Ben, my driver was stopping before the well-remembered house in the quiet Westminster street.

I had been so borne along by the rushing tide of excitement that I had not found time to picture the moment of my meeting with John Bourke. My mind had gone further than that, and I had fancied myself telling him the wonderful story of his true birth. But now, as I rang the door-bell, my heart failed me. Of what ingratitude and selfishness must I not seem guilty after the letter I had left and my sudden disappearance!

If I had come back on an errand of my own I think that I should have turned and run away.

However, in the matter which had brought me I was a thing of no importance — only a voice with which great news should be told.

Mrs. Jennett herself came to the door, and started back with an exclamation of amazement at sight of me. Her little round face lighted up, then fell again.

"Well, I am surprised, miss," she remarked, with a certain stiffness foreign to her kindly nature. "After the fright you gave us. And Mr. Bourke said, from your letter to him, you were never coming back any more."

Tears sprang to my eyes, and under the chill of her displeasure I realized that I was hungry, and miserable, and very, very tired.

"Oh, Mrs. Jennett, please don't scold me. Indeed I couldn't help it," I exclaimed, like a child. And then the tears came plashing down over my cheeks.

In an instant the cloud was gone from the sun of her kindness. "You poor child!" she ejaculated. "Now, don't you cry. I'm sure it's all right. Or it will be, since you've come back. Just as I said to Mr. Bourke: 'You mark my words; something's behind it all.' And now I'm certain it was so. Come in and I'll make you a nice fresh cup of tea. My word, it is good to see your pretty face again!"

With pattings and caressings, which went straight to my heart, she drew me into the neat, narrow passage and shut the door.

"Is—is Mr. Bourke at home?" I faltered, drying my eyes. "I want to see him very much on most important business."

"He's this instant finished his breakfast, and just as I came to answer the door he was on his way to the study, where a man was waiting to ask him. He sent a message that he had important business, too; just those very words."

The blood rushed up to my face. What if it should be Roger—already? "Do you know the man's name?" I quickly asked.

"He was a stranger to me and Mr. Bourke, too, when I took in the name. But he said I was to say 'Jim Welcome.'"

The name struck like a sharp knife. For all I know to the contrary there might be a million Jim Welcomes in the world; harmless fellows, who might have equally harmless reasons for calling on the well-known young member of Parliament. But, quick as a flash, I was as sure as if I had been told that this Jim Welcome was from [illegible] street; that he was the man who had personated me; that he was the cats-paw who, in some sly, unexplained, horribly clever way, was now to be thrust in the fire by Roger Cl[illegible].

The No Breakfast League.

Certain good people of Chicago have started a "No Breakfast League," the idea being that breakfast is a frivolous and unnecessary institution, and ought to be suppressed. People, they say, can work better and enjoy greater health by starting for the city in the morning without breakfast. On your way to the station you drink in the free air of heaven; and as you sit in the train you buckle up your waistcoat band another inch or two and feel a new man.

There has been for many years a "No Breakfast League" in everything but the name; although the members of the League do not brag about their connection with it. After what is popularly known as a "thick" night, breakfast has no charms whatever for the practised drinker. Perhaps this is the idea of the League. At any rate, anybody can start in the no-breakfast business for himself at any time. All you have to do is to mix your drinks judiciously the night before, so that you will wake up in the morning with a copper-colored taste in the mouth and general feeling that eating is a low and degrading habit anyhow. At such times even a sight of the breakfast ham gives you a dull, hard feeling in the chest; and when that stage is reached you will be a No Breakfaster of the first water.

More than likely, however, that the Chicago No Breakfasters are just the ordinary run of food cranks. If there is one thing in this world that you cannot prudently do, it is to advise your neighbor as to his dietary. And, as a natural consequence, we all think we know what is good and what is bad in the way of meals for the people. One man will tackle a breakfast big enough to make a dinner for three people, and if he hears that his neighbor's breakfast is limited to a slice of toast and a cup of tea, he at once predicts a lowered vitality and an early death. The tea and toast man, on the other hand, will no doubt hold that his neighbor is killing himself by inches with those heavy breakfasts; whereas, in these matters, it seems to be most true that every man is the best judge of what is good for himself. It is very likely that a breakfast limited to a run round the garden and a bit of dumb-bell exercise may suit the Chicago people, but it is very improbable that it would suit everybody alike.

The average enthusiast is apt to overlook the swing of the pendulum when taking up the newest craze in a whole-hearted manner. He will go without his accustomed breakfast on the first morning, and arrive at his office in a peevish and irritable mood. Somewhere about eleven o'clock he feels like throwing up the sponge, and sending the messenger out for a dry biscuit or two; but in most cases he will last out for the first experiment. At lunch time, though, the swing of the pendulum will come in. He has got to take a lunch that will average up to two meals; and in the first glorious rush at the good solid food there is a very fair chance that he will overdo the lovely business. The usual lunch hour will drag itself out into two hours and a half, or thereabouts; though it would be idle to fix a limit to it if it is going to be the first meal of the day under the new rules. The novice will eat—and drink—and the reaction after the unaccustomed fast will turn the meal into a considerable sort of orgie. "Thish ish the first drop I've 'ad to-day, ole feller! 'Ave anuzzer wiz me! Whoo-oop!"

Where is this No Everything going to leave off? They will carry these self-denying ordinances along till something occurs that will show the public that the wrong tack is being pursued. The papers the other day said that a Russian scientist had discovered that all the ills the flesh is heir to are due to our wearing-clothes. Let somebody start a No Clothes Society in this happy land of ours and see how it works. There would be a busy time on the first bright summer morning on which the Leaguers set out to justify their principles; and the authorities would be running round town buying up hundred-weights of trousers at contract price for the morning's batch of prisoners roped into the official strong-rooms. A league of this sort would impress the public with its stupidity, whereas you can't tell by merely looking at a man whether he has had his breakfast or not. And, as we know, what we can't see we don't trouble about to any extent.

Some people who profess to be very wise tell us from time to time that the average man eats too much. If the average man who hears the good news gets influenced by it, the chances are that he will thin his diet down a little, and thus save money for the doctor's bills that he will thereby incur. The average man, as a rule, eats what he thinks he wants. To some extent, he has probably learned by experience that a certain quantity of food is necessary for his well-being, and as soon as that quantity has become a habit he runs a considerable risk in changing it, for use is second nature. The scientist sits down and calculates that so many ounces of food are sufficient for an ordinary man, and calmly assumes that the last word on the subject has been said. Whereas, in the case of two men of equal size, one will often be satisfied with a dinner of oatmeal porridge and a glass of water, while the other will want soup, fish, joint, and cheese, and then as likely as not will want to order some biscuits with his wine just to fill up the still aching void.

You can't lay down a hard-and-fast rule in these matters; and if the No Breakfasters are going to have a free run in the country, I for one shall advocate an increase of accommodation in our lunatic asylums. It has long been a favorite rule of the medical profession that people oughtn't to eat suppers; and if we are now to be advised to do without breakfast as well, we might as well go the whole hog and live the higher life on two dry biscuits and a seidlitz powder per diem.—"Pick-Me-Up."

A High-Class Mining Investment

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company owns a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital — AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

To be Double Tracked

The Grand Trunk intends to double track its Midland branch, with a view to the establishment of a great grain route, via Peterboro, Port Hope and Belleville to Montreal. Large orders have been placed for new locomotives and box cars and the company will have a 1,500,000 bushel elevator at Montreal. It is suggested that the Grand Trunk may in the near future have a line of its own from Lake Superior to Winnipeg.

The Charter Here

The charter for the new skating rink company has been received by Messrs Hatton and Bradburn, the solicitors of the company. The Times is requested to state that a meeting of shareholders will be held in the Council Chamber on Friday evening next, when the organization of the company will be completed by the election of officers. At this meeting plans for the building will be submitted, and the question of a site settled. There is now about $6300 stock subscribed.

A Dinner Set Free

The dinner set on exhibition in the window of Stroud's Tea Store, George street, will be drawn for at the concert in the Opera House, on the evening of Labor Day. Each adult admission ticket to the Driving Park in the afternoon will entitle the holder to one chance in the draw. Numbered coupon tickets will be issued; the purchaser retains the coupon, and should the number thereon be the duplicate of that drawn at the Opera House, he or she gets the dinner set free. 25 cents admits you to the grounds, and gives you one chance for an $18 dinner set. Somebody will get it; it may be you.

Is Doing Nicely

The many friends of Mr. T. G. Choate will be pleased to learn that he is doing nicely, and there is every indication that he will be around in a short time. Mr. Choate, as many of our readers know, met with an accident some three years ago, whereby the bone of one of his limbs was slightly injured. Although the wound healed, there was evidently some displacement of the splintered bone, for it was found to be decaying, and had to be removed. The operation was successfully performed, and there is every reason to believe that Mr. Choate will be restored to perfect health in a few days or weeks.

A Hint for Peterborough

The following from the Orillia Times may or may not be a hint for us: At last the much talked of litter boxes have been placed on the business thoroughfares, and this week there is a noticeable absence of scrap paper and other refuse on the streets. The boxes are very neatly gotten up, barrel shaped, but smaller, with hinged lid. They are painted inside and out, and their mission is inscribed in bold black letters. They were placed on Thursday morning, and have been freely used ever since. They are a good thing, and everyone should encourage their use, and assist in keeping the streets free from litter.

Business Phenomenally Good

The Times had the pleasure of a call yesterday from Mr. Arthur Tirroux, representing Messrs. Law, Young & Company, the well known importers, Montreal. Mr. Tirroux sells exclusively to the wholesale trade, and consequently has but one customer in Peterborough, in the person of Mr. Alex. Elliott. He reports business phenomenal'y good at present. In speaking of the approaching vote on the referendum, Mr. Tirroux says that the measure is sure to be snowed under by a big majority. People were so disgusted with the Scott Act, that they will be slow to place themselves up against a similar condition of affairs under a prohibitory measure.

A Monster 'Lunge

Our Kawartha Lakes produce some fine specimens of maskinonge, the largest ranging from 25 to 30 pounds in weight. But the record for big 'lunge has been broken by the Rideau Lakes, near Ottawa. The Ottawa papers state that Mr. Sam J. Martin, of Kemptville, caught two very large maskinonge last week, one of which arrived at the Ontario Fisheries Department to-day. The fish is 5 feet long and weighs 52 pounds, and it was the centre of an admiring throng all morning. The department will have the fish stuffed. The other fish, Mr. Martin states, is larger still, and weighs 58 pounds, and he would like the department to take them both.

Fire Caused by Lightning

Mr. J. Condon, township Councillor of Douro, met with great loss through a fire caused by the lightning during Wednesday night's storm, which struck his barn shortly after midnight. The buildings were destroyed, together with the contents, consisting of grain and a large number of implements. A threshing machine which had been set up on the premises during the evening for the purpose of being put at work on the crop in the morning, was also destroyed. The loss was covered only to the partial extent of $450 insurance. The Times extends its sympathy to Mr. Condon in his great loss.

A Subscriber's Responsibility

The publisher of the Goderich Star sued a delinquent subscriber for arrears on subscription a few days ago and the judgment of the trial judge will perhaps be interesting to some of our readers. In the words of the Star the delinquent had been receiving the Star from its present publisher and when billed with an account for four years' subscription he refused to pay on the grounds that he had never ordered the paper, and had notified the former management some eight years ago that he did not want it. The paper had not been discontinued then, and his name still appeared on the subscription list assumed by the present publisher. The judge held as the defendent had given no notice to the plaintiff, but had still received the paper, he was liable for the four years claimed and gave judgment accordingly.

SUMMER COMPLAINT

Proper Food Will Prevent It

When the bowels go wrong in adults or children, quit all food but Grape-Nuts and a little cream or milk. The experience of one woman will be read with interest by many mothers who pass anxious days over little ones and become alarmed because the food does not agree with baby, and he daily wastes away.

Mrs. W. H. Mennens, of Little Falls, Minn., writes, "I want to tell you the good Grape-Nuts Food has done for my baby boy. When he was 10 months old he was taken with summer complaint and I could not find any prepared food that agreed with him. I was giving him doctor's medicine all the time but he continued to lose in weight until he only weighed 15 lbs., having weighed 22 lbs. before he was taken sick. Finally the doctor told me that unless I could get some real nourishing food for him he could not live for many days and he advised me to get Grape-Nuts Food which I did and in five days he gained 4 ounces and in five weeks he weighed just 20 pounds.

If any mother reading this letter wants to write to me personally I will gladly answer and give her the full particulars regarding baby's sickness and the good Grape Nuts did for him."

A PRETTY POSTMISTRESS NARROWLY ESCAPES DEATH.

Was Given Up to Die--Eight Doctors Failed--Pe-ru-na Saved Her Life.

THOUSANDS of women suffer from systemic catarrh. This is sure to produce such symptoms as cold feet and hands, sick headache, palpitation of the heart and heavy feelings in the stomach.

Then begins a series of experiments with medicine. They take medicine for sick headache. They take medicine for nervous prostration, for palpitation of the heart, for dyspepsia. None of these medicines do any good because they do not reach the cause of the complaint.

Peruna at once mitigates all these symptoms by removing the cause.

Systemic catarrh is the trouble. Systemic catarrh pervades the whole system, deranges every organ, weakens every function. No permanent cure can be expected until the systemic catarrh is removed.

This is exactly what Peruna will do.

Miss Alma Cox, Assistant Postmistress of Orum, S. C., writes:

"I have been a great sufferer from chronic disease and dyspepsia for five years. How I suffered no tongue can tell. I tried eight or ten of the best physicians without receiving much benefit, also tried lots of patent medicines. But still I suffered with sick headache, cold feet and hands, palpitation of the heart, and such a heavy feeling in my stomach and chest. At times I would be so nervous I could not bear anyone around me. I had been given up to die.

"One day a friend sent me one of Dr. Hartman's pamphlets, and I decided to write to him. He advised Peruna and Manalin, and after taking the medicine two weeks I felt greatly relieved. My head did not pain me any scarcely, and my stomach was relieved of its heavy feeling. I am so thankful that I can say after using several bottles of the Peruna and Manalin I am restored to perfect health.

"Before using your remedies I could not eat anything. I lived on barley water and Panopeptin for two years. Now I can eat with pleasure. Everybody is so surprised at my improvement. Everyone says I am looking like a rose. I would advise all suffering women to take your remedies. I know if it were not for Peruna and Manalin I would have been in my grave to-day. I cannot thank you enough for the kind advice you have given me."—MISS ALMA L. COX.

Senator M. C. Butler, ex-Governor of South Carolina, writes from Washington, D. C., the following:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period, and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, and besides a great tonic"---M. C. Butler.

Peruna restores health in a normal way.

Peruna puts right all the mucous membranes of the body, and in this way restores the functions of every organ.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, of Columbus, O., gives advice to women free during the summer months.

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

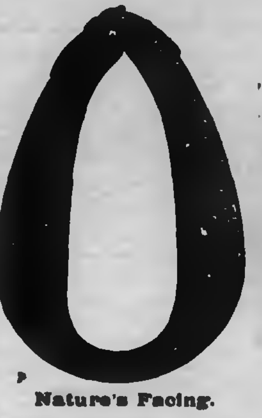
We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries, we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

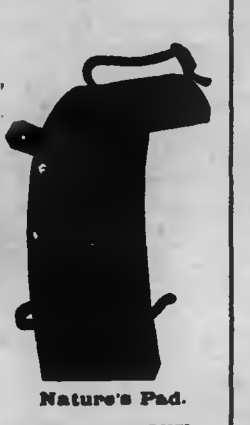
And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing.



Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 32,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues wil be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an Immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM HALPEN, GREEN & CO.

Wholesale Grocers, Nos. 18 S. Front St. and 17 Letitia St.
Philadelphia, December 28th, 1901.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours truly,
HALPEN, GREEN AND CO.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well. Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

A. J. GORDON, Treasurer, Frankford, Phila.

GRAND TRUNK SPENDING ONE MILLION DOLLARS

In Improving an Double Tracking the Line Between Toronto and Port Hope

From Belleville to Midland Comes Next—The Latter to be Made the Grain Route of the System—The Engineering Difficulties

The Grand Trunk Railway Company evidently see a great future for the country, for they are spending almost a million dollars on their track between Port Hope and Toronto. Nor is this all: The company proposes next season to greatly improve the road between Belleville and Midland, which is destined to become the great avenue for the grain of the west.

THIS SEASON'S OPERATIONS.

The Toronto World referring to the work under way between Port Hope and Toronto, says:—How many of the thousands of people who have been travelling over the main line east on the Grand Trunk Railway, between Toronto and Port Hope during the last few months have realized, as they looked out of the window of their palace car at the surrounding country, and incidentally included in their gaze a glimpse of rough piles of earth and other evidences of new track building, just what a wonderful piece of engineering was being done along the road!

Cost Will Be About $1,000,000.

To how many will it come as a rather startling bit of information, when they are told that within a year or so the Grand Trunk Railway have expended in the laying of new track, and in regrading along almost the entire line between Toronto and Oshawa, the sum of nearly $300,000, or that the improvements under way, and that will be completed in a month's time, between this city and Port Hope, total an expenditure of something in the neighborhood of $1,000,000?

Trip Over the Line.

Mr. F. H. McGuigan, the energetic manager of the road, invited a few Toronto newspaper men to take a run down over the line as far as Oshawa, that their eyes might be opened to the full extent of the tremendous work that had been accomplished.

One of the hardest nuts that the management of the railway has had to crack is the big grade encountered in the run eastward out of Toronto. The grade reaches its highest part at Scarboro Junction, where it is over 300 feet above the level of the lake. From that point to Port Union it steadily descends. From that piece east the inequalities, though many, are not so pronounced or costly. This Scarboro grade has now been reduced one per cent.

Grade Altered Nineteen Feet.

At Rouge River bridge, a long cut was made a depth of 14 feet, and the grade altered 19 feet. Just this side of Rosebank, a long filling was made and then another huge cut, a depth of 22 feet. The soil was so hard here that it required 2000 pounds of dynamite and some 300 kegs of powder for blasting purposes. Near Pickering the grade has been changed about 19 feet, necessitating the raising of the bridge a considerable height, the abutments for which are now building, while temporary tracks are being used. The station has also been moved.

Improvement at Whitby.

At Whitby a difference of 6 feet has been accomplished. Many improvements are planned for this place, but so far an unwillingness of the town officials to agree has hindered progress. The railway company proposes to move the station west from its present location to a site which will save the townspeople a roundabout tramp of three-quarters of a mile. To this effect they ask that two little-used roads be closed; while they will also erect an overhead bridge. It is hard to see where the opposition comes from for the proposal seems one much to be desired for the sake of convenience.

Level Crossings Banished.

Between Whitby and Oshawa much has been done, and east of Oshawa new double-tracking is being done and the line moved so as to cut down the grade considerably. All along the road, east of Scarboro there has been a tremendous amount of work done, both in carrying away and filling in, which has resulted in getting rid of several level crossings for overhead bridges and the general improvement in every way. The work has been of greater magnitude than the construction of a new line, for much temporary tracking had to be laid, and the usual passenger and freight service kept uninterrupted. The roadbed is in excellent condition. New rails of heavier weight, the first shipment of which have just arrived at Montreal, are to be laid.

Valuable Construction Plant.

The construction plant used in the work is valued at about $225,000, and 65 per cent. of the cost has been for labor.

At the Don station the Grand Trunk Railway are shifting the tracks, and will turn the bridge spanning the river so as to do away with the big curve and thus lessen the probability of accidents by allowing a straight view ahead.

MEDITERANRAN POLICY IS AN ISOLATED ONE

England not Backed in This Particular by Other Nations

Special to The Times.

Berlin, Aug. 25.—The debate in the House of Commons on the relations between England and Italy has been read here with great interest. The Vossische takes the opportunity to advocate an agreement between England and Italy with the consent of the other two powers in the triple alliance in a leading article. That paper says:

That union of the great powers has up to now fulfilled the peaceful task with which it was credited from the outset by no other than Lord Salisbury himself. But now England shows ill-humor because the alliance has been renewed, and Sir Charles Dilke, who passes for an ardent pro-Russian on the Opposition benches, heaps reproaches on the British Government for having lost the protection in the rear afforded by Italy. How strange! We well remember Lord Salisbury trying to arrive at a formal agreement with Italy for the maintenance of the balance of power in the Mediterranean at the time of the conclusion of the triple alliance.

Since then everything has been done to draw Italy away from the triple alliance, and hand in hand with our enemies in Paris, Prague, Buda-Pesth, and St. Petersburg, the group of British and Russian agitators who, in English magazines, sustain a constant fire against Germany, and try to push England in the direction of an understanding with Russia, including Sir Rowland Blennerhassett and Mr. Maxse, have attempted to undermine the Central European Union. But in vain. Italy remained faithful to her allies. This infidelity, however, did not prevent her from gradually taking up a more friendly attitude toward France, who, on her side, had made the first step toward a rapprochement. These people, of course, who saw therein the beginning of the end of the triple alliance were bound to be disappointed, and, to judge from the speeches delivered in the House of Commons, it seems that in England also the conviction has gained the upper hand that it is not at the expense of the triple alliance, but rather at that of England, that Italy has made a move towards France.

England now finds herself completely isolated in her Mediterranean policy. She is not backed by Italy's fleet. The ports of Gibraltar, Malta, the worthless Cyprus, and Egypt, are now the only bases for support for the defence of the enormous interest that England has in maintaining the freedom of the Mediterranean. If, in former years, the good-will of Italy appeared to England necessary for maintaining the communication is now doubly desirable, since France has created for herself the impregnable port of Bizerta, and considerably strengthened her fortifications in Corsica. Besides, it becomes more and more probable that the power of the Sultan of Morocco will melt away before the French later, French troops will appear on the African coast opposite Gibraltar.

15,000 CROP ON THIRD OF ACRE

Michigan Farmer Growing Rich by the Cultivativation of Ginseng

Special to The Times.

Niles, Mich., Aug. 24.—To raise a crop valued at $15,000 on one-third of an acre of land is not a common occurrence in Michigan, but that is what a farmer in this section has done with hardly more work than the average man will put into the cultivation of an acre of berries. The man is George F. Langworthy, of Weaver, a village near this place.

For a dozen years stories have come from the Eastern States of a plant whose cultivation is easy, whose growth, though slow, is certain and not affected by drought, and for which there is a practically inexhaustible market, at prices so far above the ordinary as to seem almost beyond belief. Not until six years ago, however, was its cultivation even attempted in Michigan, and then only on the most limited scale. It is not handled in the fashion of Dakota wheat even now, but Mr. Langworthy has in the neighborhood of 50,000 plants in this third of an acre, and his annual income from them is far greater than from all other crops on his farm combined, in spite of the fact that his only market is one thousand miles away and the ultimate destination of the crop ten thousand. For ginseng has no value in America save as it is bought for export into China, where the natives use it for medicine in every disease from paralysis to paresis.

ONLY TWO IN THE FAMILY.

There are two members of the Langworthy family, father and son. They live alone in a little two-room shack at the edge of a lonely country road—a house the outside of which would startle most women into absolute horror if they saw it. But it is not intended for a woman's occupancy, and ginseng can be dried just as well over a rusty cookstove as above a modern furnace. Ginseng roots are in every corner, and literature concerning them is on every table and shelf and window sill.

George Langworthy is much like his home in more than one respect. Ginseng pervades his every fibre, and he had read concerning it and thought about it, and worked with it in the field until he knows possibly more on the subject than any other man in Michigan.

The plants in the Langworthy garden are all in beds, each three feet wide and thirty-two feet long, and surrounded by boards to keep the earth in place. There is a one-foot path at the side of each for convenience in weeding. Because of the absolute necessity for shade, for the ginseng in its wild state never grows in the open, the beds are covered at a height of seven feet with lattice work in half-inch spaces. The ginseng plants are hurt by neither snow nor cold, and the ground often freezes below the bottom of the roots without injury to the latter.

GROWN FROM SEED.

Ginseng grows principally from seed. In Mr. Langworthy's garden the individual seeds are planted an inch below the surface in average sandy, pine soil. The latter is then covered with two inches of well rotted leaf mould, which serves as a top dressing for the ground during the life of the plant. The seeds are held by most growers to be valueless for germination, for some unknown reason, until eighteen months after their harvest, but in the Langworthy garden they are planted at once, in the latter part of August or the early part of September. They lie in the ground through the winter, and in the early spring a few plants come up. The vast majority do not germinate until the second spring, though those that make their appearance the first year are the more hardy and stronger of the two.

Seed is seldom borne until the fifth season after planting. At this period the plants are in excellent condition for transplanting, and for selling to other growers, though the roots do not, as a rule, reach a marketable size until the fifth year following germination of the seed. The plants require little care, and need only that the beds be kept free from weeds and worms.

The part of the plant of commercial importance is the root, which is composed of two parts, the root stalk and the root proper. The former is slender, seldom one-fourth of an inch in diameter, and is marked by a number of scars, each representing a year in the life of the plant. As many as sixty-five of these have been found on a single root stalk. The size and value of the root do not increase with age, however.

WELL GROWN ROOTS.

In the selection of roots for the market, only the well grown are taken. In selecting these there is less work to do in the washing and the product commands a much higher price in the market.

After the roots are washed they are ready for drying. This is a process which requires constant care, for they must not be burned. The root shrinks considerably in drying, losing about two thirds of its weight. As soon as the fibrous matter is brittle the roots are trimmed and returned to the dryer to be finished. When thoroughly dry they are carefully packed in boxes to keep them free from dust and vermin, and are shipped to a New York wholesaler, who in turn sells them to the Chinese. The roots bring at their last transfer from $18 to $20 a pound. The amount shipped from the United States averages more than three hundred thousand pounds annually.

BLACK BASS FARM TO REVOLUTIONIZEFISHING

One is Being Started Near Buffalo Which will be a Big Thing

ONE MILLION BASS PER YEAR.

The Newest Thing in the Line of Fish Propagation—Profits Figured at $25,000 per Year

Buffalo, Aug. 22—A black bass farm is being established just outside of Erie County at a point about 30 miles from here. No; black bass eggs will not be planted in long furrows of dirt in the spring, with the expectation of harvesting full grown fish in the fall. The farm will consist of a series of small lakes, or ponds in which the bass will be propagated and reared to a suitable size for market. The promoter figures that when his farm is under full cultivation he will be able to raise from 500,000 to 1,000,000 one-pound black bass for market every year. If he can raise 1,000,000 he figures he will net a yearly profit of from $50,000 to $75,000. The promoter, however, isn't banking on any such profit for the immediate future and he'll be satisfied if he is able to produce 500,000 one-pound black bass a year, two or three years hence.

The promoter is no novice at the fish propagation game. He was the fish culturist of Illinois at one time and it was only a couple of years ago that he tried to establish a farm down South, on the same lines as the one upon which he is now engaged. But after he had spent a lot of money and succeeded in hatching a large quantity of fish eggs, a freshet came and swept away every fish and eppurtus. So this time he obtained a farm that is in no danger from a freshet.

Briefly, the promoter's plan is to have a series of ponds in which he will hatch the fish and separate them according to their size as they grow. The propagating and breeding ponds will be small, from one eighth to one half an acre. Some of them will be supplied with hot water pipes. The growing pond will be the largest. This is now being built. The plan is to have it cover an aarea of five acres. As soon as the bass cease to be fingerlings they will be placed in this large pond and there kept until they are large enough for market. A prime requisite in connection with a black bass farm is a cold stream of water. A stream that is fed by springs runs through the farm that the old fish culturist has obtained, so he will have a constant supply of fresh, cold water for the large growing pond.

The two biggest problems in connection with a fish farm are the supplying of food and providing enough water for the fish to swim about. Take the first proposition: Liver is one of the favorite foods for fish in confinement. But to feed liver would soon wipe out the profits. The old man says he has solved that problem. He has a way of breeding worms so that a spadeful of dirt will turn up a quart of them. He intends to feed chopped-up worms as the chief portion of the diet, while now and then he will feed chubs, frogs or minnows for a change. By following this system he expects to keep the cost of feeding down to a very small amount.

As for providing enough water for the fish, the old man says he'll have to learn about that as he goes along. Bass have never been grown in captivity to any extent. Whether 500,000 of them could be raised in a five-acre pond is open to question. But, if necessary, larger quarters can be provided.

The old man had expected to start his farm last spring, but he was unable to do so. He is building the ponds and getting things in shape now, but he cannot start any fish propagation until next spring, for fish eggs will not be available until then. He figures it will take a bass two years to grow large enough to weigh one pound. So the calculating old man does not expect to have any bass for sale until the fall of 1904 or the early summer of 1905.

STILL RULES THE WAVES

Does Brittania, the Pride of the Ocean, says a Duluth Paper

Duluth, Min. Aug. 25.—Duluth News-Tribune says: Some London newspapers declare that the British navy is feeble, but the fact that the continental nations kept their hands off when the British armies were busy in South Africa is the best proof that England is still the mistress of the seas.

ONE WAY TO KILL A DOG

Fasten Dynamite to His Tail and Light a Fuse but do not Forget to Tie Him

Pittsburg, Aug. 24— George Mechou, a coal miner Scali Siding, near Drifton, wanted to relieve his mangy dog of suffering by killing him. Disliking the sight of blood, he tied two sticks of dynamite to the dog's tail last night, lighted a long fuse and bolted for the house. He forgot, however, to tie the dog.

The dog got to the house only to find the door slammed in his face, so he crept under the cabin, which stood on posts. Nothing was left of the dog and the cabin was blown into small pieces.

Mechou and his wife were found full of splinters among the ruins. They will be laid up for a month.

HIS MAJESTY AND HIS SIRE

King Edward's Line of Ancestry is Well Defined

London, Aug. 24— By direct descent the King is connected with fifteen of the thirty-five monarchs who have preceded him on the British throne since the Conquest. His descent from William Conquerer, through the Georges, James I, Henry VII, the first four Edwards, Henry III, John, Henry II., and Henry T. is clear and distinct. And going further back Edward VII. has two clear descents from the Saxon Kings of England. Through St. Margaret, of Scotland, and Matilda, wife of the Conqueror, his Majesty can trace his ancestry to Alfred the Great, and to Egbert, the first King of all England. Through at least three lines the King can show descent from the Roman Emperors; finally from Basil, the Macedonian Emperor of Constantinople; it is also claimed that Egbert was descended from Helena, the mother of Constantine the Great; while also the King's line from Mary Queen of Scots is perfectly clear and her ancestry went back to Imperial Rome.

Nor is it easy to deny the claim which makes King Edward a descendand of David. As a Guelph the King traces descent from Roger d'Este, the Saracen hero. And he, in turn, was descended from Saladin the Nazarene, who was of the Hebrew Royal House. The researches of M. Oppert have proved that Roger d'Este, though a Mussulman, was nevertheless a member of the family of David, of which house Edward VII., may thus claim to be a prince. Such pedigrees are always a matter of dispute, but Queen Victoria had no doubt as to her descent from the Psalmist. In 1851, the Rev. F. R. A. Glover, M.A., British Champlain at Cologne, published a book setting forth the now familiar Anglo-Israelite theory. The Queen commanded the author's attendance at Windsor, and expressed her pleasure with his book, saying that she and Prince Albert had long held the views it put forth. Her Majesty ordered the Royal family tree to be produced, and there at the root was the name of David, with Victoria in the topmost direct branch.

FELL HEADLONG INTO CREVICE

Further Details of the Disaster on Mont Blanc

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 24.—Further details are now to hand of the disaster on Mont Blanc on Saturday, in which three persons lost their lives—two French tourists and a porter.

There were many ascents of Mont Blanc organized for Saturday, and at eight o'clock in the morning, a Chamoniard, who makes a business of enabling visitors to watch climbers through a powerful telescope for a small fee, was scanning the mountain previous to adjusting his instrument, when he was amazed to see two men running at full speed down the steep snow slope of the Coin du Dome.

It was not long before the leader fell headlong into a crevasse, and within a few minutes the second disappeared into another crevasse. Alarm was given, and the guide-chef promptly organized a number of relief expeditions, the first of which left Chamonix within half an hour, but an hour before this it was known by three parties ascending Mont Blanc that the amateurs of the hapless caravan had perished.

These parties slept at the Grands Mulets on Friday night, and resumed the climb at four on Saturday. By seven they had reached the summit of the Grand Plateau. There they met M. Blanc, the Bonneval guide, and Culet, the porter, who accompanied the Frenchmen. M. Blanc was badly frost-bitten about the ears and hands. He told them all that had happened.

The porter, whose head was wrapped in a handkerchief, was too ill to speak. His feet and hands were frost-bitten. No one seemed to think that he needed more assistance than cognac or coffee, after bestowing which they continued their way to the summit of Mont Blanc.

FINDING THE BODIES.

One of the parties found the bodies of the young Frenchmen, both of them in their twenties. They were lying near the Dome de Gouter, within 150 yards of the Vallot Observatory. The remains were eventually recovered by Chamonix guides.

Meantime other guides had reached the crevasse into which M. Blanc and the porter had been precipitated, and volunteers were lowered with ropes. The crevasse where the porter met his fate is broad at the top, but narrows towards the bottom where the sides join. The porter fell in head first, and, needless to say, death must have been instantaneous.

M. Blanc escaped miraculously. Though he had a sheer drop of thirty-four metres, he was almost uninjured, save on the head, which was cut by falling chips of ice. He was imprisoned for six hours in the ice before he was rescued. M. Blanc returned to Chamonix on Sunday afternoon. He is a short, robust young fellow, about twenty-six.

In an interview, he said that their party left the Grands Mulets at noon on Friday. The weather was fine with a few clouds. He had previously made numerous ascents with the victims, M.M. Mauduit and Stuehling.

No sooner had the party reached the Petit Plateau than a blinding snowstorm began. He counselled return, but M.M. Mauduit and Stuehling persisted that the Vallot observatory was conveniently close, and that they could take shelter there. The storm increased with such violence that by four o'clock they were unable to stand on their feet.

THE HOUR OF DEATH.

The observatory was invisible owing to the snow; although, as a matter of fact, it was comparatively close at hand. The only course now was to burrow in the snow. This was done, and the four huddled together for ten hours, sharing their last drop of cognac, until 2 o'clock, when M. Stuehling expired. Within ten minutes M. Mauduit, who had evidently been becoming weaker and weaker, also breathed his last. He had just strength enough to whisper the word "Adieu."

It was four o'clock before the storm abated. M. Blanc and the porter then attempted to find their way down to the Grands Mulets. After he had described their meeting with the other parties, M. Blanc was asked how it was possible, seeing he knew the mountain thoroughly, that he could have rushed blingly into a crevasse, which could have been easily skirted by the merest neophyte.

He replied: "My comrade and myself were so exhausted by the hardships of the night, and overcome by our terrible experience, that we were really madmen for the time being. I had not the slightest idea where I was going All I knew was that I wanted to fly from what had happened, and I had to take what seemed the shortest way."

THE BLIND MAY SEE.

SPECIALIST HAS A TREATMENT THAT WILL DO THE WORK

Eyeball Oscillator—Worked with a Compressed Air Machine it Gives Muscles and Nerves Exercise

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 23.— If Dr. Henry F. Garey's belief is correct the blind can be made to see. He says he is daily making them see. And these wonders are wrought without any medicine, by the mere physical use of the optic nerves by a machine perfected three years ago, after ten years of cold, scientific experimentt.

To Dr. Garey there is nothing miraculous or wonderful about his machine or its cure. Both are the results of hard thinking and harder work. And the principle is simple. It is the same principle by which the muscles of the athlete are strengthened and increased in size—exercise of the muscle stimulation of its blood vessels and increase of nutrition to its tissues.

The eyeballs are seized in two vacum cups in the machine and are pulled backward and forward by regulation of the air pressure, and the optic nerves, which end in the retina, are thereby stimulated and strengthened by increased nutrition."

"There is nothing wonderful about the machine," he said. It is simply the instrument for doing the work of exercising the eyeball, which is communicated to the nerves of nutrition and sight in the posterior portion of the eye.

"From the experience I have gained in the last six months treating cases which other specialists have pronounced incurable, I will say that I can cure 50 per cent of them. That is my average so far. Of course, this may be diminished or increased; time and practice only will demonstrate.

I think blindness will soon be a disease yielding as readily to treatment as any other. I believe that investigators are now working along the correct lines for the treatment of blindness caused by disease. I am convinced that in future those who are hopelessly blind will only be those who are born so, or have been made by accident. Of course, in case of the sight being destroyed by accident, the treatment I use would be of no value whatever.

"The blind and partiallly blind can be restored to useful sight. By that I mean that they can be made to see sufficiently to prevent their being utterly helpless.

Trial Mobilization Military Forces

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 25.—In an article in Journal Des Debats, quoted by a Paris correspondent, Paul Leroy Beaulieu says the continued decline in the revenue is alarming. The year's deficit is likely to reach about $18,000,000, which the supplementary credits and railway guarantees will bring up to about $36,000,000, unless, says Beaulieu, the imprudence and fanaticism in regard to education, relief of poor, public works, and railways, are avoided. Increasing expenditure will accompany decreasing revenue, speedily producing the most serious embarrassments.

CUT DOWN MANOEUVRES.

London, Aug. 25.—A communication from Sofia, quoted by a Vienna correspondent, says the Bulgarian Government at first intended to call out all reserves and to convert the Shipka Pass manoeuvres into a trial mobilization of half the military forces of the country. The Turkish representative at Sofia intimated that if the manoeuvres were carried out on the proposed scale, Turkey would be obliged to concentrate troops on the other side of the frontier. The scope of manoeuvres was thereupon restricted.

CHINESE IN THE PHILIPPINES.

London, Aug. 25.—"Chinese immigration" is the title of an article published in the Times on Saturday. The writer seeks to prove that the policy of excluding the Chinese from the Philippines is a fatal error. It is urged that the Malays are lazy and unwillind to do the necessary work for the development of the country. Americans, says the writer, will not follow the Dutch system of compelling the natives to work, as they must imigrate the British policy in the Straits Settlements, where Chinese immigration is restrained. The hope of converting the Filipino into an American by education is not practical, and Americans will untimately be obliged to recognise the fact that the salvation of the Philippines is to be sought, not in a futile attempt to revolutionise the nature of the inhabitants, but by supplying the qualities lacking by permitting the immigration of industrious Chinese.

MEMORIAL TO JOAN OF ARC.

London, Aug. 25.—President Loubet, says a Paris correspondent, will be invited to unviel the national memorial to Joan of Arc at Domremy-la-Pucelle.

London, Aug. 25.—English hearts are touched by the Kaiser's eloquent speech at Hamburg yesterday when unveiling the statue in memory of his mother. The reference which he made to the sanctity of her married life, to her careful tending of her husband during his faithful and protracted illness, to the dignity with which she endured her grievous loss and to the patient fortitude under her own sufferings, all bore witness to the deep affliction that existed between mother and son. The Daily Chronicle says that all Englishmen admire the Kaiser, and their admiration will be heightened by the tribute which he has just paid to the memory of the Empress Frederick.

NOT MUCH COMFORT FOR THE PROHIBITIONISTS

The Government is said to be Hand in Hand with the Antis

A HOT TEMPERANCE WAR IS NOW RAGING

Meetings to Start Throughout the Province Next Month—Both Parties will do Their Best

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 25—Temperance workers claiming knowledge of their opponents' plans with regard to the referendum campaign profess to have information of a rather startling kind This information bears on the particular kind of villiany which the upholders of the cold water cause expect to have to combat from now till the fourth od December. Results of the campaign in Manitoba have been recalled, together with the methods alleged to have been used in bringing them about. Due allowance has been made for the different conditions existing in Manitoba, and conclusions have been drawn. These conclusions together with what crumbs of knowledge have been gleaned concerning the doings of the Licensed Victuallers' Association, will, it is asserted, make the temperance people wise as serpents, and as harmless as dove.

Just where the hand of the Ontario Government will appear is not a riddle of difficult solution. The temperance people have answered the question for themselves, and the answer has not overwhelmed them with comfort. In the tactics of the temperance people as so far planned, the co-operation of the Ross ministry is not a factor. How far this can be said with regard to the liquor element is the subject of deductions made by the temperance campaigners from a few facts of much apparent significance.

In plain words the temperance people confidently expect that the trumpet of Gabriel will be blown lustily by the Licensed Victuallers' Association aided by government organizers and that the voters' list will give up their dead to vote on the referendum. Firmly imbued with this idea the temperance people are gathering together all their munitions of war, and all their energies will be bent toward preventing a temporary resurrection of defunct voters. The license holders are not given to anything but a fair and manly fight, but that fact is zealously hidden by the opponents.

The liquor interests in Manitoba were in a very large percentage the interests of Toronto dealers, and were looked after as such. In fact, part of the celebration of the victors in Manitoba was the passing of a heartfelt vote of thanks for the substantial financial and other assistance rendered by the Toronto dealers. The temperance workers profess to have all but a gastronomic knowledge of what the mysterious "other assistance" was. They profess to know where it was sent, and who took it, and who drank it.

Certainty exists in the minds of the temperance workers that W. F. Summerhayes, the well known organizer, for the Ontario Government, in going up to Manitoba, went with the knowledge of the liquor people in Toronto, for the purpose of organizing the vote. Hints have been made that when the secretary of the Licensed Victuallers' Association (formerly secretary of a Liberal organization) went up to the Prairie Province a fortnight before the votes dropped, his baggage did not consist solely of a nightgown and a tooth brush. In Manitoba punishment might overtake a man polling a "resurrected" vote, but that did not annul the vote itself, and so in Ontario. The liquor trade of the Province of Ontario is of 100 times more importance to the large dealers here than is that of Manitoba. There are thousands of licenses in Ontario, for hundreds in Manitoba, and with a fresh memory of the doings in the west the supporters of the temperance cause in Ontario feel that they have bitten off a matter for much chewing.

The local license department is under immediate government control. The government is familiar with the initials of the solicitor for the Licensed Victuallers' Association and included him in the last batch of K.C.'s. Regarding these two things the temperance people nod their heads sapiently. The liquor interests in Ontario will be looked after in the coming campaign, according to present indications, by the same engineers, firemen and stokers who won the palm in Manitoba.

The temperance war office received a rude shock on learning that the enemy had set in motion the campaign machinery, with W. F. Summerhayes in charge on the same day that Secretary Dickie of the Licensed Victuallers' Association published an interview in the Toronto papers to the effect that nothing would be done in his camp till November.

All these things have a tendency to turn the hearts of the temperance people to the liquid which they recommend Notwithstanding this, however, they are not leaving stones unturned or allowing the grass to reach any appreciable length under their feet. They have hauled out the grindstone and are getting down to it and by every means in their power they are preparing to prevent a repitition of that fatal division in the ranks which helped to lose the day in Manitoba.

THE CANADIAN ROUTE TO THE SEABOARD

The Canadian Route Admitted to be 450 Miles the Shortest

A GAIN OF OVER 450 MILES

The Route by Way of the Georgian Bay Through Peterborough to Belleville the Nearest by 450 Miles

Chicago, Aug. 25—Many vesselmen here are of the opinion that a vast quantity of grain formerly shipped for export from here via Buffalo, lake and rail, to New York and other seaport points will this year go by way of the Canadian routes from Georgian Bay, particularly to Montreal. Shipments of wheat have already this season shown quite an increase in that direction, and the route, it is maintained, is becoming more popular each year.

Montreal is said to furnish a total of forty-three steamers a month to European ports, and the Canadian railroads are said to have advantageous arrangements with the ocean lines as regards rates on grain, and are thus enabled to quote a lower charge for its transportation. The distance to Europe from Chicago is shortened by the Canadian route, and they have this in their favor. Moreover, rail lines of the Dominion are not under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and they can do almost anything in the matter of quoting private terms to shippers. It has been stated in this connection that very low rates are being made to big shippers of grain.

A comparison of distances from Chicago to Liverpool shows the advantages. From here to Montreal via Midland, in Georgian Bay, where most of the wheat is being consigned, the charts indicate 1,083 nautical miles, and from Montreal to Liverpool, 2,773 miles. A total of 3,856 miles. This compares with a distance of 773 miles from Chicago to Buffalo, 430 miles from the latter point to New York, and 3,105 miles from New York to Liverpool. A total of 4,308 miles, the gain being 452 miles in Montreal's favor.

Quebec affords even a shorter route to Europe, and considerable grain is going that way via the St. Lawrence River. Vesselmen believe that, in addition to the grain shipped from Chicago, lake and rail, to Canada, there will also be enormous quantities shipped from Manitoba and the Northwest by way of the St. Lawrence during the month of navigation.

MR. LYMAN JONES ON COMBINE

The reported combination of several harvesting machine and agricultural implement manufacturing concerns in the United States appears to have aroused the apprehension of Hon. Lyman Melvin-Jones, general manager of the Massey-Harris Company. To him the outlook appears dark indeed. What the new corporation may do he cannot, he says, commence to say, or even conjecture. He fears, however, that a move may be made in the direction of lower prices, and that the combination may sell their machinery below cost for a number of years. Even should the combination not establish works in Canada, the duty would not be sufficient protection against them, and the Government should put up the tariff so high that the Canadian manufacturers would not suffer.

If we remember right a combination of the then three leading Canadian implement firms was effected some years ago; the combination being probably as complete here as the combination just effected in the United States. But we do not recollect that Mr. Lyman Jones viewed the arrangement then made with alarm. On the contrary he doubtless expressed the opinion that the saving insured would prove most beneficial to the Canadian consumer. Yet, whatever may have happened to others it is certain that Mr. Jones has prospered under the conditions then created. Notwithstanding the inroads of American competition, his company last year divided in profits close to a million dollars. They should now be in good form to fight competition.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Now comes report of very strained relations between Brazil and Bolivia. Pity some power can not take these South American republics by the neck in succession and kick them into peacefulness.

Hearty fraternization of United States and Canadian officials on the British Columbia border to check smuggling and other offenses is the right kind of spirit. Pity it does not extend more markedly into all relations between ourselves and our neighbors.

Among the busybodies who were anxious to have the Boer generals behave rudely in return for proferred courtesy on their arrival in Great Britain, was Miss Hobhouse, the pro-Boer lady whose sensational reports on the condition of the concentration camps in South Africa were discredited on the evidence of the Boer occupants of the camps. Now the Boer generals have shown their good sense by requesting their pro-Boer alleged friends to be kind enough to go 'way back and sit down and let them conduct their own affairs.

The United States will have to exert itself considerably before it succeeds in ousting Great Britain from her position of commercial supremacy. According to the latest statistics the commerce of the world in 1901 amounted to $22,800,000,000, of which nearly one-third, or seven billion dollars, is credited to Great Britain and her colonies. Germany comes second with $2,612,000,000 and the United States third with $2,118,000,000. And during the past year the export trade of the United States fell off about $100,000,000. With her colonial trade extending annually Great Britain has no apparent need to be anxious regarding her supremacy for some years yet to come.

—Civic holiday excursions were liberally patronized. The town was very quiet, as a consequence.

ENTITLED TO WAR MEDALS

A Movement to Procure Them for the Last Contingent

The fact that the members of the last contingent to South Africa which includes a lot of Peterboro young men, were not entitled to and did not get their war medals, has caused considerable comment, and much influence has been brought to bear on the military authorities so that the men might secure this much-coveted memorial of the war. The order that come from the War Office was to the effect that all soldiers who were landed in South Africa after May 31st did not take actively a part in the fighting operations in the war and in consequence were not to receive the war medals. The members of the Canadian contingents left Canada while the war was still in operation and they were landed in South Africa a few days after peace was declared. It is considered a hardship that the Canadians are to be deprived of something which each man no doubt would prize highly, when they started with such good intentions, and were not to blame for the fact that the transports they were on did not get to Africa before peace was declared.

As a prominent militia officer said at Ottawa yesterday, the real hardship of soldiering comes in breaking away from family ties and friends, that which occurs afterwards is of secondary consideration. This opinion is held by all the high military officers in Ottawa and the general public is greatly impressed with the idea that the men should get their medals. In fact it is a most probable thing that a memorial will be presented to the Governor-in-Council, to the effect that an order-in-Council be passed, asking the Imperial authorities to give the Canadians of these regiments their medals.

FOUND IN THE OTTAWA.

Ottawa, Aug. 22.—The body of an unknown boy, apparently about 15 years of age, was found Sunday morning in the Ottawa river, near Plaisance (North Nation Mills.) The body had evidently been in the water a long time, being in a bad state of decomposition. Dr. Longpre, coroner of Papineauville, was notified, and after holding an inquest a verdict of "found drowned," was returned and the body was buried on Monday morning. The decomposition of the remains was so great that identification was almost impossible.

The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.
Capital $1,000,000. $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.
No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $600 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realised a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realise the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

Ore in sight and value per ton makes our Shares well worth 75c. Watch them grow. Apply for terms, etc.

Nearly two years ago a party of well-known business men of Minneapolis organized the LaSonora Gold & Silver Mining Co., for the express purpose of developing the famous old Spanish Mine, La Blanca, well-known all through Sonora, Mexico, as a heavy producer of rich ore in ancient days, the company allowing only a few friends to invest with them, preferring to take the risk (if any) on their own shoulders. BUT HAPPILY THERE WAS NO RISK, and after ten months' labor and hundreds of feet of tunnels and shafts, they cut in Nov. the ore, and found below the old works what the ancients mined above them, 10 feet of very rich gold and silver ore, assaying from $24.75 to $217 per ton. Since Nov. 9 have opened the vien by drifting over 60 feet, and have now no scruples in offering to the investing public a chance to join with us in an absolute certainty.

The mine is ready for a concentrator, and for that purpose (only) we have alloted 50,000 shares.

The Poultry Yard.

An English poultry expert says—Both in the States and in France the system of feeding poultry generally followed is the exact opposite to our own, the fowls getting soft food at night and corn in the morning. The poultry-keeper may well ask which is right, and the answer apparently is that there is very little difference in the result. An experiment recently tried in America, two lots of fowls getting just the same treatment, but one having soft food in the morning and corn at night, and the other the opposite, resulted in the fowls getting soft food in the morning laying slightly better than the others in winter. This is what one might expect. To set against this, however, was the fact that the fowls getting soft food at night voided double the amount of manure. The reason of this, of course, is that soft food is more quickly digested, but in those poultry houses where the droppings from the fowl-houses are systematically collected and utilized, there is a distinct value in feeding soft food at night, in preference to the morning. There is far less trouble to the feeder when corn is given in the morning, and it really seems as though the value of soft food for breakfast has been over-estimated.

Sulphur for Fowls and Swine.

When fowls are attacked with cholera I find that a little sulphur given in the food will check it. One tablespoonful mixed with the morning's food for thirty fowls and given once a month is sufficient when they are in health. When much sulphur is fed, with exposure to a cold and damp atmosphere, it will cause stiffness in the joints. Sulphur put in the dust bath with ashes is a preventive against lice. A little sprinkled in the nests and under setting hens routs these pests.

It is also good to give swine in case of cholera or sickness followed with vomiting caused from overfeeding. It regulates the stomach and liver without further trouble. I have given two teaspoonfuls twice a day in severe cases in sweet milk or sprinkled on some sliced vegetables.—Emma L. Hill, Damascus, N.Y.

To Make Hens Lay.

Many people complain that they cannot get their hens to lay in winter. One very strong complaint comes to us from one of our subscribers. To aid such we give the experience of one who resides in the cold climate of South Dakota.

Many farmers fail to get any eggs during the winter months, and, from the experience of others more successful, it must be concluded that they either do not care about winter eggs, or that they neglect to so manage and feeds the fowls as to induce them to lay. An interesting experiment was made with two lots of pullets, showing influence of feed and care on the production of eggs in winter, by Rose Seelye-Miller, in the cold climate of South Dakota. The trial was reported in a western journal as follows:—

Two pens of pullets were placed in conditions as nearly equal as possible. One pen was designed for breeding, and it was desired that they should not lay until toward spring. The other pen, containing 18 hens, was designed to produce eggs during the winter, and the eggs were not intended at all for hatching.

The experiment began in December. Let it be remembered that the care, temperature and all other things were equal, save the food, and that the pen designed for late laying contained two less fowls.

During December the early layers produced five and a quarter dozen eggs, and the other pen not an egg. In January, the early layers produced ten dozen and three eggs; the late layers seven eggs. In February the early layers produced nine dozen eggs, and the other pen one dozen. In March the early layers produced fifteen dozen eggs, and the late layers three and a half dozen. In April came the change; the early layers laid ten dozen and nine eggs, and the late layers fifteen dozen and four eggs. From this time the breeders were kept laying, and produced in May 23 eggs, the early layers 148 eggs. This shows conclusively that egg-producing may be governed in a great measure. The feeding was very simple, and the early-laying fowls were fed as follows:—In the morning, boiled lean meat, chopped, with scraps from the table, and during the day all the wheat screenings they would eat, with corn twice a week. They were, of course, watered twice daily, and had some milk to drink.

The pen not intended for laying were fed on poor wheat screenings, with corn. These fowls grew and waxed fat, until they seemed too fat, and no doubt were, for laying. As spring came on the food was changed, and as it was the natural time for laying, too, they produced eggs in abundance.

The ordinary poultry raiser feeds too much corn and wheat. Hens are fed liberally twice a day and are fed on a steady diet of one or two things, either corn or wheat, and both fattening. Hence our hens do not pay, and poultry raising is a snare and a delusion to the one who is not wideawake and up to date in caring for the fowls.

Meat is known to be a great egg-producer, and there is now upon the market a feed prepared from refuse which makes an ideal feed for fowls. Bones ground and plenty of milk are also very good egg producers. [illegible] advertise in the Times.

Author of The Barn Stormers, Fortune's Sport, Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

Without a word I ran down the passage to the study door. My fingers shook so that I could hardly grasp the knob. I never thought of stopping to knock, and as I fumbled with the handle there came to my ears the loud sound of a coarse voice raised in anger. "She was my gell, I tell you. Leastways, she would o' bin if you hadn't come round 'er with yer wicked lies, to spile 'er life and mine too. I know wot you done, well enough. The gell's own cousin told me, no longer ago than last night, and I've been 'anging round your 'ouse since 'twas light, wytin' till I could 'ope to be let in. Now, wot I'm goin' to do is this——"

I flung the door open and staggered across the floor. I do not think I half knew what I was doing. The room seemed dazzling with white light. In the midst of it, black against a window, I saw two tall figures—John Bourke's and Welcome's—close together. John was unharmed, but Welcome had whipped out a revolver. With a scream, I rushed forward and struck up his arm. His finger had been on the trigger, and the weapon went off with a report that deafened me, then fell on the floor at a distance. Quick as lightning I ran, and, picking the smoking revolver up, flung it out through the window.

There was a crash and jingle of shivering glass and a shout in the street from some passer-by, but I hardly heard either. "Take care!—take care!" I was crying. "He may have a knife; he will use it."

But, deprived of the one advantage he had possessed over the man taken unawares, Welcome—the swaggering Adonis of Easel street was a child in the hands of John Bourke.

I saw the great fellow seized and forced down upon his knees, his arms twisted behind him. And by that time—though to my dazed mind it seemed as if scarcely a minute had passed—a policeman and two other men in civilians' clothes had burst into the room, Mrs. Jennett hysterically exclaiming at their heels.

All that came next was confused and dreadful. Jim Welcome's oaths and shouts of threatened vengeance for John Bourke and for me, the policeman's questions, John's answers, Mrs. Jennett's attempts at explanation which ended but in complication; all was like a dream. I seemed to wake up only when the room was empty save for myself and the man I loved. Then I found that I was sitting in the deck-chair where I had sat so often in happier days, and near me was the table with the typewriter, where I had been working when Lady Feo Ringwood came one day—a hundred years ago.

"My child, don't cry, unless you are sorry that you saved my life from that poor ruffian-madman," John Bourke was saying.

I looked up at him through the streaming tears, and only knew then, with his words, that I was crying. How good it was to see him again, and to think that he was safe—that I had been in time! There he stood, gazing down at me, with a wonderful light in his dark eyes; and I told myself that I ought to be very happy to have atoned for the past by winning his gratitude, even though another woman owned the treasure of his love.

"I didn't know that I was crying," I said, weakly. "But—but I can't help it. Ah—oh! I thank Heaven that I was in time."

"I'm glad that it isn't quite a matter of indifference to you whether I live or die. I rather thought it was. But I don't at all understand either the attack, its cause, or what brought you here in the nick of time."

"I knew what Roger Cope would try to do to you," I stammered. "I'd been warned. As soon as I heard that hateful man's name, I seemed to see everything, just as if it were printed in big letters in the pages of a book. I knew that Roger had kept friendly with the people in Easel street, and that he'd made up some story to set Welcome against you."

"But I'm more in a fog than ever," said Mr. Bourke. "The man Welcome had screwed his courage to the sticking place with much drink. He was half mad with it. But what I had done to displease him, or where Sir Roger comes in, is a mystery. Had Welcome made himself offensive to you with his attentions when you lived in his neighborhood?"

"Yes," I said, shamefacedly, beginning to be conscious of great mortification because it had been a mad, mistaken jealousy which had urged the sordid wretch to attempt a crime. "But as for Roger," I hurried on, rushing away from the painful subject, "you see his only chance, as he was too cautious and too cowardly to act for himself, was to have you put out of the way by some means before the truth could possibly be known. And it was all my fault, really, because he found out through what I had told."

"The truth? What truth?" John Bourke asked, desperately. "We are having a strange enough game of cross purposes. I shall have to go to the police-station in a moment. I only stopped because I could not leave you as you were. But don't send me away with a bandage over my eyes."

"Oh, I forgot!" I cried. "I'm in a fog, too, and you will not wonder when you know everything. It's a story about yourself I have to tell you. Yourself and—and the heart-shaped scar on your arm. It means that your name is Cope—that Roger's title, and Roger's money, and Roger's estates are all, all yours. And you don't know what it is to me to be the one—after your goodness—to come with the news."

Then I told him everything; everything—that is, that concerned himself; confusedly, brokenly; but I made him understand. And he looked very pale and grave, almost sad, not at all like a man who has just heard that he has fallen heir to a title and a fortune. And he walked up and down the room, with his hands behind his back, in the way I knew so well, while my heart ached with love for him—love that could never be satisfied in this world.

"It all fits together like a puzzle," he said, thoughtfully. "All my earliest recollections. I was adopted by a good old fellow—a crossing-sweeper in Whitechapel. He used to beat me sometimes, but not when he was sober. And I sold papers when I was old enough to call out the names. Afterwards we moved up to the north of London. It's easy enough to see how the traces of such an insignificant little waif might be lost in a few years."

A High-Class Mining Investment

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES,
ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital—AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

A "Waiting" Thief

Lindsay, Aug. 25.—A slick looking individual has been attempting to work Lindsay druggists. On entering a store he explains that he is just waiting for a friend, but while the clerk is busy with a customer, or employed in the back shop, he fills his pockets with toilet preparations and other small articles and decamps. He was caught at Lindsay and compelled to hand over the stolen goods, but the foolish merchant allowed him to make his departure.

The Times Ad. Did It

The other evening a lad was given a five dollar gold piece in mistake for a cent in payment for a copy of the Toronto News. He had no idea who gave him the gold, but, an honest lad that he is, told The Times about it, and in order to discover the owner of the money. He had not long to wait, the money being claimed early next morning, through the notice in this paper. It always pays to advertise in The Times.

Ill in Montreal

Word was received here on Saturday that Miss McEwen, only daughter of Rev. Mr. McEwen, formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church, Lakefield, is seriously ill in Montreal. About a month ago Miss McEwen left on a trip down the St. Lawrence, and remained in Montreal visiting friends there. It is said she is suffering from appendicitis, and the disease is so acute that an operation was to have been performed yesterday. It is hoped by her many friends here, that she will pass through the ordeal successfully, and be restored to good health.

A Very Sad Death

The heartfelt sympathy of the entire community will go out to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh e-Charles in the great sorrow which has befallen them in the death of their charming daughter, Miss Hester, who passed away early yesterday morning after an illness of only a couple of days, from scarlet fever. Death is sad at all times, but when it enters the home and strikes down the flower of the family—the baby of the house—in the early spring of budding womanhood, it is irretrievably sad. The Times extends its sincere sympathy to the bereaved parents and family.

PETERBORO THIRTY YEARS AGO

Interesting Items Taken from the Times o May 1872

—Now that the people of Port Hope have decided upon having waterworks, it is high time, if we keep up in the struggle of advancement, for the people of Peterborough to follow this excellent example. The Town Council of Port Hope propose doing the work themselves, and it would be well if our Town Council would take the same steps to supply this town with sufficient water, if only, in the first instance, for the purpose of extinguishing fires, though it would be better to have at once such a supply as would furnish every house with that most necessary article. The amount to be paid by the consumers for the use of the water would give a handsome dividend on the outlay, and the inhabitants would reap the benefit in a sanitary point of view, and would not, when the wells were dry, as was the case last fall and last winter, have to run over half the town to get up a pail of water. We know for a fact that the well at Chambers' & Son, which happens to be a remarkably good one, had to supply the wants of the inhabitants of the houses for a considerable distance round that part of the town, and when an unfortunate accident, whereby the pump was broken, dire was the distress, and the lamentations at the catastrophe were both loud and deep.

Here are some of the advertisers in the Times of May, 1872: Legal, Dennistoun & Cassels, W. H. Scott, Blecker & Dixon, John Green, Geo. Edminson, D. G. Hatton, Geo. T. Leonard and C. A. —On Saturday last (May 4 1872) Mr. Calcutt's new steamboat was launched. The ceremony took place in the presence of 100 people. The boat having been built in a portion of the flax mill, was drawn to the water's edge on rollers. When all was ready Miss Rogers performed the christening and the "Whistlewing" glided gracefully into the waters of the Otonabee.

Dying By Slow Degrees

Although not always aware of it, yet thousands die by slow degrees of catarrh. It first attacks the nose or throat, then the lungs and finally spreads all through the system. Catarrhozone is the only remedy that will immediately prevent the spread of this awful disease. Every breath from the Inhaler kills thousands of germs, clears the throat and nose, aids expectoration, and relieves the pain across the eyes. Catarrhozone erradicates every vestige of catarrh from the system, and is highly recommended also for Bronchitis, Asthma, Deafness and Lung Trouble. Price $1.00; trial size 25c., all druggists. —Mr. R. H. Leary left on Saturday upon a visit with friends in Owen Sound.

—Mr. Jas. F. Dennistoun and the Misses Dennistoun have closed their Stony Lake cottage for the season.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Davis and Miss Stephens came down from the lakes, and have closed their cottage for the summer.

—Miss Hattie Campbell, who is head trimmer in the J. C. Turnbull Company's millinery department, is in Toronto attending the autumn millinery openings. Miss Campbell leaves in a few days for Truro, N.S., where she willl be in charge of a large millinery department.

—A party consisting of Mrs. H. Stewart, Mrs. Ed. Clegg, Miss Mabel Metheral, Miss Clara Clegg, Miss Bırdie Thompson, Miss Maud DeFher, and Messrs. Wes. Milburn, Fred. Stubbs, Ernie Dodge and W. Stephenson, of Toronto, left Saturday to enjoy at outing at Stony Lake.

A Circus Man too Sharp

Alexandria, Aug. 24. — The advance agent of the Seils show refused to pay the $100 town license for right to show here, and procured a field just outside the city limits in Lochiel township, for which he paid $40. When the show came it pitched its tent in the field in Lochiel and paraded through the town. But while the parade was in progress the Town Council passed an amendment forbidding such a parade without a license. John Sells, when summoned before the reeve, protested that he was not the one responsible for the parade, but a fine of $100 and costs was promptly imposed. It was not paid, however, and Chief Hall and Constable McDonald went to the grounds and distrained things. They took off the best set of harness, and the fine was paid before more was seized. There will likely be an appeal.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—We want a good boy to learn the printing business.

—A diphtheria placard was placed on a house on London street.

—Mr. Geo. W. Fitzgerald on Saturday shipped over 560 boxes of cheese to Montreal.

—People are beginning to return from the lakes. This week will see Stony Lake almost depopulated.

—The market on Saturday was rather poorly attended. Butter sold for 22c., eggs 15c., and chickens from 50c. to 60c.

—The annual excursion of the employees of the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company to Jubilee Point on Saturday was a great success. The band accompanied the excursion, and greatly enlivened the proceedings. About 250 took in the trip.

—The rush of grain to Midland harbor has commenced, and according to all accounts there will be brisk times on the Midland division this fall. On Monday of last week six vessels carrying 508,551 bushels, were in the harbor waiting to be unloaded.

—There was a meeting of the directors of the Central Fair on Saturday evening, at which matters pertaining to the big fall fair were discussed and disposed of. Everything promises that this year's show will be the best ever held in Peterborough.

—Chemong cottagers are going to follow in the footsteps of the summer residents at Sturgeon Point, and get the park incorporated as a village, if possible. The matter has been discussed frequently, and now a meeting has been called for Thursday night next, to consider ways and means.

—The other day Messrs. Rolly Hill, Miles Fronts, and Ed. Salisbury, went up the river on a fishing excursion. The part were accompanied by Mr. Hill's seven-year-old son, who also wielded a rod and line. The only fish landed by the party was hooked by the little fellow, much to the chagrin of the other nimrods. Rolly is a fisherman of repute, and his bad luck on this occasion is attributed to the fact that he changed the brand of his black-strap chewing tobacco the day before.

—Lindsay Watchman-Warder: Mr. Sam Clegg, of Peterborough, was in town on Tuesday inspecting the work done by the Davis dredge in the river at Carew's mill. He pronounced it first-class. Mr. Clegg is a competent judge of such matters, and the prompt and effective way in which this work was done is very satisfactory to the people of Lindsay. Navigation has been greatly benefitted by it. If the government dredge does not soon make its appearance to do the dredging at McLaren's creek, for which Col. Hughes got $1500, it would be a good idea to employ the Davis dredge instead of waiting.

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

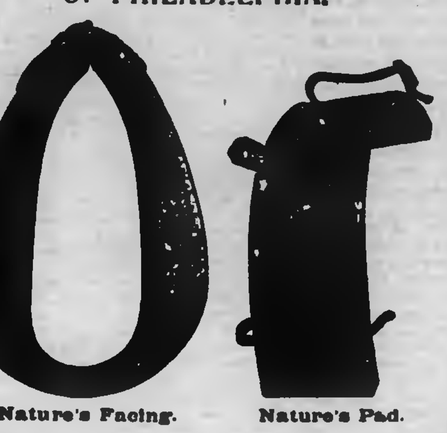
We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries. we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 33,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above. and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues wil be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an Immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM HALPEN, GREEN & CO.

Wholesale Grocers, Nos. 13 S. Front St. and 17 Letitia St.
Philadelphia, December 28th, 1901.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours, truly,
HALPEN, GREEN AND CO.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well. Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

A DECISIVE BATTLE WILL SOON BE FOUGHT.

The Venezuela Revolutionists are Everywhere Successful.

The Government Forces are Making Great Preparations for a Final Stand Against the Rebels

Caracas, Aug. 25.—The revolutionists of Venezuela, are reported to be threatening Cumana, a town of about 10,000 inhabitants, situated in the State of Bermudez, on the Gulf of Cariaco. This is a movement of secondary importance, as the attack, it is likely, is more for pillage than for any military advantage.

It is the revolutionary army under Gen. Matos that will give the decisive blow. This army was recently at Orituco, about 75 miles from Caracas. Several days ago it was reported that President Castro had left the capital to meet Matos' army. He was last reported at Oca, about 25 miles from Caracas. It is practically certain that an engagement will be fought in the vicinity of Orituco, inasmuch as the life of the revolution lies in Gen. Matos force which has been advancing steadily in a northwesterly direction since capturing Ciudad Bolivar six weeks ago.

It is impossible to state the strength of the two armies now almost confronting each other. It has been known that President Castro, knowing the desperate nature of his cause has been gathering a strong army to bring on a decisive battle at a place of his own choosing. The strength of the government army scattered throughout Venezuela is placed at 158,290 of all arms. President Castro has been drawing from this army every available man for some distance from the capital, and has been organising for the past month or six weeks an army of defence which he has nearly perfected by this time. His advance column has gone to meet Gen. Matos at a point where reinforcements can be quickly forwarded, as required, from the capital. When the army under command of Gen. Matos defeats the government forces under President Castro, the prospects of the President will be desperate indeed.

PICTURES SENT OVER THE TELEGRAPH WIRES

Promises to Create Revolution in the Newspaper Field

THE ELECTROGRAPH A WONDERFUL MACHINE

Reproduces at Any Distance Drawings with Great Accuracy

At the last Toronto Exhibition, and the Pan-American, there was exhibited an instrument, then in its uncompleted state, which practical men saw at once would create almost as great a revolution in the newspaper field as did the invention of the electric telegraph. This machine, which has now been perfected, and which is being placed on the market is known as the electrograph, literally the electric writer or graver and its purpose is the transmission of pictures by telegraph.

Attempts to make such a machine have been made for many years and with partial success. The best of them leaving much to be desired. They were slow and inaccurate in working, and required the use of chemicals and sensitized paper, the product being such that redrawing was required before anything could be got from which newspaper cuts could be made.

The electrograph on the other hand, reproduces with rapidity and absolute accuracy with a black ink pen on common white paper, drawings or photographs which have been placed in the hands of the operator ten or ten hundred miles away.

Everybody who recalls the newspaper of ten years ago knows that the chief gain in the decade has been the explanation and illustration of the letter-press by suitable engravings. When the cylinder press was first introduced, turning out from 25,000 to 40,000 copies of a newspaper per hour, it was felt by many that the day of the newspaper illustration had closed, but as the progress of engraving and the making of presses improved, it soon became evident that the rapidly-printed daily newspaper offered a wide field for illustration. Since that time it has been the aim of every wide-awake newspaper to supplement the work of it reporters and editors by diagrams and pictures of the scenes described.

Every year has witnessed this extending to farther and farther fields, but with always this difficulty that outside of the absolutely local field the illustration always lagged behind the telegraphed accounts. Readers have been furnished by the Mail and Empire with scenes from the South African War, the preparations for the coronation, the portraits of eminent people at the bedside of the King and of those appointed to high positions These are always forwarded with all the celerity possible, but it can readily be seen what a great step in advance will be taken when, with the telegram announcing the action, the accident, or the function, there will be flashed over the wires a sketch taken on the spot, or the reproduction of a photograph of the actual scene.

Every large newspaper now has its corps of artists, and its engraving plant, and this device means as great an impetus to the work of this department as the telegraph did to the work of the editorial departments. Before the days of telegraphs all news from outside had to be received by post or special messenger which meant that the report would appear several days or weeks after the occurrence. This has been the status of the illustrating department of the daily newspaper, but hereafter the artist will vie with the telegraph editor in his endeavors to reflect the happenings of the world in the paper of the next morning. Supposing another appalling fire at Montreal or Ottawa, burning down whole blocks of warehouses and attended by serious loss of life.

The news is of intense interest to every citizen of Canada. Every scrap every detail about the event will be eagerly seized upon by the vast reading public. By means of the telegraph wire every centre of Canada and the United States would be immediately informed of the catastrophe and the subsequent events. Bulletins and hourly extras in every city of the country would tell the people each detail. All that is done now and has been done for years. But with the electrograph there would be a great advance.

Within an hour after the horror the newspapers of Montreal would have photographers at the scene taking pictures of the effects of the fire, photographs vividly describing the horror wrought and the work of rescue going on. It would be the question of but an hour or two before these pictures would have been developed and half-tones made from them. A half an hour later papers in every chief city would be getting out extras containing reproductions of these half tones which had been received by wire by means of these electrographs. Hours have sufficed to do the work that formerly occupied days.

Examples of this kind could be enumerated indefinitely. Happenings of importance to the great centres of population could a few hours after their occurrence be transmitted to many points This will make possible simultaneous publication of pictures, over the land.

Heretofore papers published in cities away from a point of some great event have had to wait until photographs of interesting points in connection with the happening could be transmitted by mail.

With the aid of the electrograph daily papers all over the country can now publish actual photographs of important occurences at the same time that they print the reading matter that describes them. Artists will no longer have to draw upon their imaginations but can rest while electricity performs the work with the accuracy of the camera. Detective and police bureaus can identify a criminal by his actual photograph, transmitted with the speed of lightning; the Government can send its war maps and plans with absolute secrecy and accuracy; the banker can identify a stranger either by a fac-simile signature or photograph, received in a short time in response to a telegraphic request.

It does not require a special wire, any telegraph wire will do, nor is special skill necessary to operate it, as it does that work all itself. It is not an expensive machine to produce, nor apt to get out of order and messages cannot be tapped on the way, as the electric impulses are unintelligible except when received on the electrograph The simple changing of a lever makes each machine either a receiver or a transmitter.

Description of the Instrument.

The electrograph, or literally the "electric writer," is a machine not much larger than a typewriter which reproduces through a telegraphic circuit, a copy of an original photograph, drawing, sketch, map, or design to any distant point. To accomplish this result has been the dream of electricians for years. The machine produced is based on the simplest of all electric transmitting apparatus, the ordinary Morse sounder, and records its message upon a revolving cylinder, similar to the chronograph used in the United States weather signal stations. The combination of these two old and well-tried instruments, coupled with new and automatic means for regulating the speed of revolution of the two cylinders, though widely apart, is the electrograph.

The photograph or drawing to be transmitted is a half tone on a zinc plate made by the ordinary process now in use in every important newspaper. The following is briefly the method of making a half-tone: A photograph is taken and the plate is developed making a negative. A print of this negative is made on sensitized paper. A photograph of the picture on the sensitized paper is made upon a zinc plate through a screen of varying fineness, running from fifteen to over a hundred lines to the inch. The zinc is etched in an acid bath which brings out the picture upon the zinc in light and shade as it was upon the paper or photograph.

This done everything is ready for the transmission of the picture by wire. The half-tone plate is the same as the one used in printing. For convenience the plates for the transmitting machine are made of thinner zinc. The half-tone is covered with a coat of sealing wax. The wax is rubbed off, leaving the cavities etched out by the acid filled with wax. The wax is non-conducting, the metal conducting, and the requirements for electrical transmission have been fulfilled. The plate is bent into a roll to fit the cylinder of the machine.

A carriage operates along this cylinder upon a screw of sixty-eight lines to the inch. On the sending machine is a steel stylus, on the receiving machine is an ordinary steel pen, which is fed by a fountain of common black ink. The plate is wrapped on the cylinder of the transmitter. At the same time the operator of the distant receiving machine wraps paper on the cylinder. The transmitting operator closes his key, which starts both machines at the same instant. The steel stylus traces a spiral upon the zinc plate. The wax dots rapidly break the circuit and cause electric pulsations upon the connecting wire. These pulsations are recorded on the receiver by special electro magnets which actuate a steel pen. This pen traces a corresponding spiral upon the recording paper.

The spirals broken into dots similar to the waxed depressions in the zinc plate build themselves up automatically and the picture unfolds gradually, being composed of thousands of dots. An exact copy is thus made of the zinc plate, which in itself is a perfect half-tone of the original picture when completed. The operator then

DISCOVERED A GREAT POWER

Used His Abilities to Support Himself while Working Out His Ideal

Special to The Times.

Milwaukee, Aug. 22.—Alf. S. Cunningham whose counterfeit half dollar pieces led the United States secret service detective a chase that extended over five years, told his story today for the first time, and a strange tale it was—a tale of passionate devotion to an idea that blotted everything else in the world from his mind and led him into the life of a recluse and counterfeiter.

"It is the truth," he said, "that I believe I have discovered a new power. I believe it yet. It is a power that will revolutionize the world. It will displace steam and electricity and other motive powers. It is a force of nature that never has been used. It was this that landed me here behind the bars. For this I have sacrificed everything—everything! But now it is gone—gone."

The old man shut his eyes and pressed his lips together in mental agony.

"It was in '92," he continued, in response to a question, "that I first began to work on the idea. It came to me gradually, and it absorbed all my energies. I was a machinist, and had lived in Illinois for a great many years. By nature I am an inventor.

A NEW FORCE.

"The more I thought about this wonderful new force, the more convinced I became that it was a power that would startle the world some day. It was not perpetual motion. It is not a created force, but a force that exists, and only needs to be applied. Just what it is has been my secret. I have not breathed it to a living soul, but I firmly believe that this power will run anything, from a sewing machine to an engine.

"I was in poor health. I could not work at my trade, and I had no money. I feared to take my wonderful secret to capitalists before I had developed it, knowing well that the idea would be taken from me. Thus it was that I began the counterfeiting, in a little room in the rear of a house at 55 Morgan street.

"My conscience rebelled at the thought, but my secret forced me on and on. I was an honest man. I never had wronged any man, and I had no wish to do so. I could have made a fortune with my counterfeits. I might have manufactured any quantity of them I chose. There was no limit to the number I could have made. But the presses and dies were abhorrent to me. I used them simply as a means of pursuing my work on the motor.

"If I had been dishonest at heart do you suppose I would have lived as I did with the means that I had to make a fortune? Do you suppose I would have done my own washing and cooking all of those five years if I had been a criminal? Would I have abandoned all my acquaintances and lived there alone, without a friend to confide in?"

GERMAN YOKE HEAVY

Remarkable Demonstration of Alsatians on French Soil

Paris, Aug. 24—The Metz Gazette says the anniversary of the German victory at Mars-la-Tour was marked by chauvinistic demonstration. The French Deputy Le Brun and Gen. Cuny made speeches. The later expressed the hope that the future would efface past defeats. The Bishop of Nancy in an address to the men of Alsace-Lorraine, said they had crossed the frontier despite the German guns, and in spite of the misfortune which had kept their country under foreign yoke they had come to French soil as an evidence of their loyalty to the motherland, asking "When will you give us freedom?"

SHE THRASHED A TRAMP

Athlete Miss Webster Administers Three Knockdowns to Her Annoyer

Miss Frances Webster, who resides with her aunt in the west end gave an impudent tramp a lesson in manners yesterday morning.

Miss Webster, who is 19 years old, and pretty, went for a ride on her bicycle and after climbing a hill just outside the town in Smith sat down to rest under a tree.

She was enjoying the beautiful scenery in the neighborhood, when her rest was interrupted by a tramp who suddenly appeared from a nearby barn, where he had been hiding. He demanded Miss Webster's money and when she refused to give it to him, started to grasp her arm.

Miss Webster jumped to her feet and as he put out his hand, seized it, and gave it a twist that caused the fellow to cry out with pain. The young woman had boxed a little with her brother and the next moment she gave the tramp the surprise of his life landing a stinging left-handed on his chin. As he staggered backward she followed it up with a blow from the shoulder that sent him to the grass. Miss Webster's blood was up and she stood waiting for the tramp to rise. When he did get up she knocked him down again, although he tried to strike her with his fist.

The last blow settled the tramp, and he begged Miss Webster not to hit him again. After she had abstracted an apology from him she let him go. Then she mounted her bicycle and finished her ride.

A Splendid Illuminant

Yesterday The Times had a pleasant call from Mr. F. Sims, the genial manager of the Siebe Gas Company, of Toronto, who was on his way home from Stony Lake. Mr. Sims has a cottage at the Lake, where his family now are, and where he spent several weeks off and on during the season. Mr. Sims, while up north, placed his splendid illuminator in Burleigh Falls Hotel, Viamede and in the store at Juniper Island. Next year many others are sure to follow suit, and Stony Lake will become brilliant at night. Siebe Gas is not expensive, and it is one of the best and cheapest methods of lighting. Mr. Sims, while waiting for the Toronto train, went over to see the lift lock.

STONY LAKE NOTES

Items of Interest from Peterborough's Popular Summer Resort

—Many of the cottagers are preparing to leave for home. Already several have taken their departure and closed their houses for the season.

—Mr. Crane and family will leave Tuesday, and Mr. Meldrum will follow a few days later, closing their cottages for the season.

—Burleigh Falls Hotel has had a busy season. Notwithstanding the cool weather, the business kept up straight along. Messrs. Darcy and Son know how to manage a house of this kind, as those who spent the season with them can testify.

—On Sunday a vigorous sermon was preached at the pavilion by Rev. Mr. Geggie, of Dunn Avenue Presbyterian church, Toronto, on the subject of "Lot and Demas." There was a large congregation, who listened with rapt attention to the eloquent words of the divine. During the services there was much disgust over the noise made by those who sat outside the pavilion. This should be stopped, as it tends to bring the religious services into disfavor. Not only do men gather and talk audibly, to the annoyance of those who are at worship, but many of them smoke and almost smother those who happen to be sitting above in the pavilion.

—The steamers have had a busy month of it during August. On Saturdays especially has the capacity of the boats been taxed to their utmost to carry the numbers who go to spend Sunday at Stony Lake. Next year an additional boat should be put on.

A Poetical Analysis of the Times

I like the Times, the news it prints,
No matter where it greets my eyes,
I never find elsewhere, for it
Is just the kind that satisfies.

Signboards to me its headlines are—
I wish there was some other way
To tell it, but there isn't, and
I travel by them every day.

And when I've read the news by wire,
And dashes by reporters gay,
I like to catch in every line
That's printed in the g. f. j.

The letters "To the Editor"
Are somehow different in rhyme
From letters other papers print,
Because written for the Times.

They do not always say just what
I like, or what I'd have them say,
But I am not content until
I've read it through the g. f. j.

The reprint clippings are the best
That ever are put into lines
But for the headlines which are not Found anywhere save in The Times.

And when the day is on and I
Talk to the throng along the way
When asked "Who said so?" I reply,
"I saw it in The Times today."

IN NEW PREMISES

Mayor Denne's Handsome Quarters on George Street

Mayor Denne has taken possession of his handsome new store in the old arcade, Opera House block, where he is now doing business. The premises are fitted up in a suitable manner and is characteristic of Mr. Denne, no expense being spared to make it exactly what is needed, for the large and ever increasing business in flour and feed and wholesale grain.

There are three flats—the basement, the first floor and the one above. The first floor serves as a place for storage of stock and there has also been installed a new Oxford furnace for heating. But it is the general salesroom and office that demands greatest attention. This part devoted to general business has been handsomely fitted up, the wood-work is in a bright natural finish and there is a very fine oak counter, and lines of shelves to match. Two large plate glass display windows are very valuable from an advertising point of view. The shop has also a private and general office, is fitted with an electric fan and in fact in every detail is up to date.

The large apartment in the rear is used also as a store for stock and there are ten large bins which will be fed by means of an electrically operated elevator from the storage in the basement. Mr. Denne has had his shop equipped with a Bowsher feed mill and a Wm. and J.G. Grey mill for flaking oats for horses. The power is supplied by a motor occupying a small apartment at the rear. The store has two entrances, one from the market and the other from George-st., and its facilities and general adaptability for every purpose required in a progressive and extensive business, are features that make Mr. Denne proud of his new quarters. The second flat will be used as a wholesale office.

Mr. Bradburn has certainly had the work carried out to a point of perfection, through Mr. Jas. Graham, carpenter, and Duncan & Grey, who did the painting, Alexander & Miller, who installed the electric fixings, and J. J. Turner & Sons, a very fine awning.

Completely Fagged out

The world is full of sickly, despondent, tired, enervated people, all hoping to be well some day. The surest road to health is along the way of taking Ferrozone after meals. Ferrozone is a great appetizer and enables one to eat plently of wholesome food without fear of indigestion or dyspepsia. This results in the rapid formation of an abundance of red, vitalizing blood, which will restore the nerves, increase flesh and vigor, and nourish and feed every organ of the body. Ferrozone is an ideal restorative and invigorant. It is a tonic of unequalled merit that anyone can use with benefit. Price 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50 at Druggists.

MORE MUSICAL TALENT.

Mr. Wildgust from England Takes Up His Residence Here

Peterborough is fortunate in securing as a permanent resident another capable musician, in the person of Mr. Wildgust, of Nottingham, England. Mr. Wildgust arrived in town with Mr. J. J. Turner, about a month ago, and it is entirely due to Mr. Turner's efforts that he came to Peterborough. He is a musician of merit and rare ability, and will find a fertile field here.

On Sunday morning he sang in the Charlotte street church, and in the evening in St. Paul's, at the latter church assisting at the organ, at which he is extremely proficient.

Two Rigs Collide

Mr. J. M. Brooks, proprietor of the Palace Hotel, and wife, together with several guests, met with an exciting experience while en route to their summer cottage at Chemong Lake on Saturday evening last. While passing through the long swamp on the Smithtown road, Mr. Brooks, who heard a rig coming towards him, pulled to one side, and at the same time gave a warning cry, but too late, as the fast approaching rig was upon him, but luckily Mr. Brook's rig escaped without injury, but the approaching rig driven by a small boy, who had lost control of the horse, came to grief, and the outfit sent after in the morning. Mr. Brooks wishes to state that the aforesaid small boy, after getting his horse under control, acted very gentlemanly by coming back to ascertain if any of the party were injured.

Is Your Summer Life Made Miserable by Nervous Depression, Sleeplessness and a Dread of Coming Disease

Carry Home A Bottle Of Paine's Celery Compound
Use It, and Note Its Quick and Happy Effects

If you are one of the summer unfortunates, made miserable, unhappy and despondent through nervous depression, sleeplessness, and general physical weakness, we sincerely urge you to carry home today a bottle of Dr. Philps' marvellous discovery, Paine's Celery Compound, and test its health and strength-giving powers.

Paine's Celery Compound is a prompt and effective banisher of summer "blues." It rescues shaky, enfeebled nerves from prostration and wreck; it removes those deathly feelings of exhaustion so common in the hot weather; it gives energy and new life to all weakened and nervous men and women. Mrs. J. H. Pierce, King St., St. John, N.B., writes thus:

"I consider it a duty to recommend your Paine's Celery Compound to suffering humanity. I suffered terribly from constipation, weakness, nervousness, kidney and liver troubles; I was also subject to those tired weary feelings, and had a slight touch of skin disease. The first dose of Paine's Celery Compound relieved me, and now, after having taken three bottles I feel much better. I am not constipated, have no weak feelings, and I eat well and sleep well. It is a grand remedy, and I hope all who read this will profit by my recommendation."

WHITE LABOR TRIALS SHOWING GOOD RESULTS

On the Best Mines in South Africa White Men Can Replace Natives

Will Give Milner a Fair Chance, Criticism of His Administration Suspended for the Present—Boer Generals to Meet Chamberlain

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 26.—The labor outlook is becoming brighter, says the Times' correspondent at Johannesburg, though the increased influx of natives is hardly yet perceptible. Still the exodus is diminishing with the spring, and recruiting prospects are decidedly better. The labor difficulty existed before the war, and sensible men did not expect it to disappear immediately after the declaration of peace. The extended area of the operations of the Native Labor Association is due to the anticipation of the development of industry and the consequent increased demand for labor. On larger and richer mines white men, plus machinery, can replace natives, though the smaller mines, perhaps, must continue to employ cheap native hand labor.

SURRENDERING TO BOERS.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 26.—A Cape Town correspondent says: "The breach between Sir John Gordon Sprigg and the Progressives was dramatically made prominent in the Assembly on Friday, when, on a motion to fill the Parliamentary vacancies, Sir John and members of the Ministry, unaccompanied by any Progressives, left their places at the right side of the House, and joined the ranks of the Afrikander Bond to vote. It is pathetic to see Sir John, after being for 25 years the champion of British progressive interests, surrendering in his closing days his Parliamentary career to the Boers."

DELAY CRITICISM OF MILNER.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 26.—Commenting on the abandonment of the proposed meeting of the Johannesburg Political Association, a correspondent says this decision vindicates the common sense of the community, which realizes that indiscriminate political criticism at the present moment would be not only useless, but also unfair to Lord Milner's administration, which is contending with the colossal task caused by the sudden creation of war, after the suspension of civil life for three years. Nevertheless, it must not be supposed that it is either possible or desirable that a large which community like that at Johannesburg can remain for the whole period of crown colony government without political organisation, or can abdicate the right of criticising any policy it thinks mistaken. However, it may be properly asked that the administration have a fair trial.

BOERS TO MEET CHAMBERLAIN.

Special to The Times.

Brussels, Aug. 26.—General Botha will go to Amsterdam next Saturday whence he will proceed to London with Dewet and Delarey to confer with Mr. Chamberlain.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES IN GREECE.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 26.—Destructive fires are announced from all over Greece, says an Athens correspondent. They are due in some cases to spontaneous ignition, owing to exceptional heat and high winds, but have chiefly been caused by acts of incendiarism on the part of peasants and shepherds, who are anxious to make clearances on arable lands and increase the extent of the pasturage. The destruction of forests is leading to the disfigurement of the country and deterioration of the climate.

ATE ADULTERATED BREAD.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 26.—A correspondent at Oporto says the Portuguese, who are not allowed to import foreign flour, have just discovered that they have been living on bread adulterated with ground rice husks, China clay and sawdust. Specimens of bread which have been analyzed contained 53 per cent. China clay.

OFFICERS STONED BY A MOB OF MINERS

Narrowly Escaped Death While Trying to Rescue His Son--Attempt to Resume Work

Special to The Times.

Hazelton, Pa., Aug. 25.—August Schouch, aged 56 years, a special policeman in the service of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, was assaulted and stabbed on the outskirts of the city today, while attempting to rescue his son, William Sheuch, a non-union workman employed at the company's No. 40 colliery, from a mob of about 3,000 strikers, who had gathered from all parts of the Hazelton region on the roadstead going to the mine to frustrate the plans of the company for a partial resumption of operations with a non-union force of 250 hands. A majority of the non-union men were taken to the workings in a special train, with which the strikers did not attempt to interfere. Young Schouch, who lives here, walked from his home towards the colliery, and thus fell into the hands of the pickets. Most of the clothing was torn from his back in the struggle which followed. When his father rushed to his aid the mob set upon the man, who was finally rescued by a mine foreman and removed to the Miner's Hospital. Schouch was stabbed in the breast and on each hip, kicked and struck on the head with a stone. His injuries are not very serious. The knife which sank into his breast struck a rib, and that possibly saved his life. The effort to prevent work at the mines was successful. The report of a resumption at the Cranberry colliery of A. Pardee & Co., caused about 500 men to gather near the mine to-day, but no attempt was made to start work.

FIRED INTO A CROWD.

Pottsville, Pa., Aug. 25. — George Wheatley, an outside foreman at the Brookside colliery of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company, in an effort to persuade the non-union men not to go to work. No new recruits were added to the working force, and quite a number were turned back. It is the intention of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company to coal as soon as sufficient men can be assured. An official of the company admitted to-day that practical miners are hard to procure, and that none of the coal companies are able to operate any of the mines for this reason.

RICE CONFESSED GUILT.

Murderer of County Constable Boyd Made the Admission to Mr. Curry

Special to The Times.

Toronto, Aug. 25.—Fred Lee Rice, who murdered County Constable William Boyd, and was hanged in the Toronto Jail on July 18, confessed his guilt to Crown Attorney Curry.

Those who are conversant with all details of the case never had any doubt as to the part played by Rice in that affair, although, as it always happens, there were many who feared that possibly an innocent man had been hanged, and that too, in spite of the direct and positive testimony of Walter Stewart, who was sitting beside the victim when the murderer sent the bullet through his brain, and in spite, too, of the fact that it was practically impossible for any other person to have done the treacherous act.

When under the tremendous influence of the shock of the suicide of his accomplice, Rutledge, in the jail, Rice weakened enough to tell the Crown Attorney that what Walter Stewart said was the truth, that he (Rice) had murdered Mr. Boyd.

The prisoner had not been cautioned, and under all circumstances, Mr. Curry did not think it fair to make a public statement which would have cut away the wretch's last hope. Now, however, that justice has been vindicated, Mr. Curry sees no reason to keep the confession quiet.

THE FATAL RIDE.

On the occasion of the fatal ride from the court house to the jail, the three desperadoes, now all under the sod, sat in the rear seat of the closed cab, facing the horses. As they drove east, Rutledge sat to the south, Jones was in the middle, and Rice, who was a left-handed man, was on the north. Opposite Rice sat Constable Boyd. When the pistols were thrown into the vehicle, Rice got one, and, after a few seconds of a struggle, holding it in his free, left hand, he placed it close to the right side of Mr. Boyd's head and fired. From the position in which the occupants were seated, and from the direction of the path of the bullet, it was practically impossible for any one to have committed the murder but Rice. Moreover, Mr. Stewart saw him fire. The murderer's confession coming on top of all this will probably remove all doubt from the minds of the most timid.

CHILDREN IN THE JAILS

Pembroke has a case which accentuates the folly and worse of imprisoning children for trifling offences. A boy of ten, for theft—for the appropriation of a watch which he had only a few hours, and could not hold—has been sentenced to a month in the common jail.

The lad is timed and when the lights are out at night, he cries, in his terror, so that he can be heard for blocks away. The experience suggests to the Observer that something should be done to avoid the correction of children's offences by imprisonment.

The movement should begin with those who have to do with the administration of justice. They should profit by the testimony of the men who are directors of prisons and who say, that as now conducted, they contribute more to crime than they correct it, because of their degrading associations.

The boy of ten should not be sent to jail at all, and especially for a petty larceny. A real good gadding, with something that will warm the skin, and warp the affections, will do more to brace up an offending youth than any imprisonment. The jail is regarded as an unclean place, unclean to the extent of tainting the character, and in a way that can never be effaced.

The magistrate should simply refuse to incarcerate youthful offenders and, in the absence of a more human expedient than imprisonment, allow them to go on suspended sentence. Against present practices and present conditions there is a protest that ought to be heard and heeded.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Brockville Times characterizes as "a poor method" the new plan of requiring pupils to hunt up examination returns by chasing around after their headmasters, or waiting to get them as each one happens to give them to the local press. It is a poor plan; it is a concession to the carpers at the Department, and those who suggest it are now ridiculing the Minister for being so easily buncoed. The plea that the giving out of the results stimulated competition between the schools was so silly that it is a wonder it was ever given a moment's consideration.

The New York Times thinks it was fortunate for the Boers that their war was with such a magnanimous nation as England, for the attitude which they sought to maintain toward other powers must sooner or later have brought them into armed conflict with more progressive people than themselves. As subjects of Great Britain they will enjoy the full measure of civil, religious and political liberty consistent with their best interests, and will have substantial assistance in all that makes for progress. The irreconcilable and impractical Oom Paul, living in voluntary expatriation and refusing to recognize the accomplished facts of the peace treaty, is the incarnation of the dead past of the Boer Republic; the three brave generals lately in London typify its happier and more prosperous future.

STILL RULES THE WAVES

Bore Brittania, the Pride of the Ocean, says a Duluth Paper

Duluth, Min. Aug. 25.—Duluth News-Tribune says: Some London newspapers declare that the British navy is feeble, but the fact that the continental nations kept their hands off when the British armies were busy in South Africa is the best proof that England is still the mistress of the seas.

—The rush of grain to Midland harbor has commenced, and according to all accounts there will be brisk times on the Midland division this fall. On Monday of last week six vessels carrying 600,000 bushels, were in the harbor waiting to be unloaded.

When Pa Tried Mental Healin'

When Pa tried Mental Healin' in the Fall of '94,
He says: "At las' I've found the art of livin' evermore;"
And a moisture born of pity dimmed
the lustre of his eye,
As he said, "Oh, wretched mortals, in your ignorance to die!
W'en you might keep right on livin'
if the fact you once opined
That disease is but a phantom of the morbid, restless mind.
Halleluyer!" said my father, in a jubilatin' awe,
"That the fact that Mind is Monarch is the glorious truth I've saw."

Then Pa read from the sages who the Higher Law apply
That pain is but a notion that the Mind has fooled us by.
There was "Ethyl Biggs, on Spirit," and he said 'twas lovely, too,
And a learned dissertation called,
"High Thoughts by Mamie Drew"
There was "Sadie Sosse, on Sorrow,"
"Hannah Hurd on Thought Profound,"
And some more that I've forgotten, but they all were sweetly bound
And Pa remarked to Sister Bings, in accents even gay:
"I'm goin' to live for ever, for I've found the Mental Way!"

"Oh, do not cry my little son," said
Pa, "for here's the truth:
Your pain is only in your Mind; it is not in your tooth.
Jus' set your Mind upon it, and keep it not right there,
An' you'll be surprised to notice that it is not anywhere.
Don't tell me that your tooth does ache! I guess I orto know!
An' quit that howlin' now at once,
an' give your Mind a show!"
And then I went behind the barn until my tears I slaked—
Perhaps my tooth wasn't aching, but
I know I thought it ached.

One day my Pa was pounding on a nail against the wall,
And he sort of missed the target and hit his thumb—that's all.
But the words my Pa then strewed around they were a grief to me.
And I thought I'd best console him,
for his language was too free;
And so I says: "It doesn't hurt; it's only in your Mind.
And if you'll give your Mind a show you'll be surprised to find—"
I never did get further, for he jerked me out of plumb,
And said: "Dern Mental Healin'! This hurt is in my thumb!"

Since then my Pa's backslidden, and he groans and moans around,
And his books on Mental Healin' in the attic may be found;
And he often says, emphatic: "A Man's a fool, I find,
Who insists a broken thumb-nail is a phantom of the mind,
That cholerer's a delusion, an that typhoid is a sham.
They's plenty of such imbeciles, but drat me if I am!"
And so I kind o' argue, though in confidence
I speak,
That my Pa has good intentions, but his mind is middlin' weak.

my eyes and gave me a strange feeling, as if memory were struggling to tell me something and could not. How beautiful she was! My mother—my own mother—who loved and sorrowed for me! If it had not been for you——" he checked himself, biting his lip, and I saw a slow flush mount to the square forehead, where the dark hair grew in a way that seemed marvelously attractive to me.

"Please tell me what you were going to say," I pleaded, almost humbly.

"I can't—and yet, after all, I don't know why not. I will tell you! I was going to say that, if it had not been for you that night at the theater, I should carry with me now a more vivid recollection of her. I saw her first. She was looking down out of the box, and I thought that never had I seen a more beautiful woman. Her face thrilled me. But then you came forward from the back of the box like a white vision against the dark background—and the footlights on the stage shone up into your eyes, turning them into jewels, your hair to a halo of gold. After that I looked no more at her. I wish to Heaven that I had!

"For the last forty hours I would have given much if I had never seen you at all," he went on. "That letter you left for me was a blow, and I—— But I feel differently now. True, something has gone out of my life that can never come back. But you have given me the memory of a dear mother, and of course the hope of great worldly advantages besides. It was more than kind of you to be in such haste to bring me good news, and to wish to warn me of danger. You have not told me yet, though, why you went to that house in the country where you heard this strange story. I only know that you were tired of being my secretary; that something pleasanter was offered you, as you told me in the letter which made such agreeable reading; that you met a woman who took you down to the country. Am I to know nothing more of your movements since I saw you last?"

"Now that you understand about Roger," I said, "I will tell you of the woman who took me into the country, and why I went." So he had the tale of the meeting at the Marble Arch, and my strange journey with Walter Leigh's sister.

"You said nothing to me of having seen such an advertisement in the paper!" he exclaimed.

"Because I did not see it till after you had left me. It was Lady Feo Ringwood who brought the paper, and Roger Cope who told her to do it!" As I impulsively gave him this piece of information, I remembered all that it involved, and the blood sprang to my cheeks as if they had been struck.

"Roger Cope told her to do it? What had he to do with her coming here that day?"

I hung my head, and tried to collect my wits for reasonable answer.

"Is this another mystery?"

"Oh, no; not a mystery at all. But you see—Roger is so secret in his ways, as you know well now. He wanted to get me away, and—oh! that is not what I meant to say, but—but——"

John Bourke suddenly caught both my hands, looking very determined, very much more excited and eager than he had when he was hearing of his own good fortune.

"Had Lady Feo Ringwood anything to do with that cruel letter you wrote? You shall tell me, Sheila!"

"I—wrote it of my own free will."

"Did she say to you that you ought to leave this house? For Heaven's sake answer—and answer truly."

"She—thought for your sake——"

"Confound the woman!" cried John Bourke, dropping my hands. Never had I seen him look like that. Never had I heard his voice in anger. He took a turn away from me, then came hastily back. "Sheila, tell me that you didn't mean what you said in that letter."

"I—it was for your own good," I stammered. "But it almost broke my heart."

"It utterly broke mine. It broke my future. All the dream of happiness I'd dared to raise. You knew I loved you, didn't you, Sheila?"

"Loved me! Oh, no, no; I believed it was Lady Feo."

"Impossible! I had never a thought of her. There never was a woman in the world for me but you. Since the night of 'The Bells,' though I've not always been happy, I've known the great secret of life. And when I found you on Waterloo Bridge I hoped that Heaven meant you for me. I dared to hope that—till your letter came—though I hadn't meant to tell you while you were in this house, with any mistaken feeling of obligation—of 'gratitude,' as you would call it—in your heart. Gratitude from you to me! When my life is yours, when there's no world for me without you!"

A knock at the door, and Mrs. Jennett: "If you please, Mr. Bourke, the proceedings can't go on at the police-station without you."

* * * * *

The claim of Sir John Cope to his birthright, his title and his fortune was easily established—all the more easily, perhaps, because Roger Cope had disappeared before the law could be set in motion to find him. Walter Leigh told his story, and it was enough—though Sintra, his sister, chose silentness and reticence for her part in this last act of the drama. John saw the man who had sinned against him, received complete identification, and gave forgiveness.

Walter Leigh did not die until after John and I were married. As for Sintra—the "woman in black"—the rest of her life will be lived away from England; and if the knowledge that her

Yale's "Criminal Club."

The Criminal Club of Yale will revive the custom of holding an annual banquet this spring. The announcement has revealed to many the existence of perhaps the most peculiar social organization in existence in the collegiate world. According to the New York "Sun," membership has never been based on the social or financial status of the students taken, nor have men been taken into the fold because of their prominence in the world of athletics, literature, or debating. The one requirement has been that the proselyte shall have been arrested and taken into the toils of the law, whether guilty or innocent of the offence with which he stood charged. Often to secure membership in this exclusive, yet thoroughly democratic club, students have violated the law, and then calmly awaited the coming of the police, as usual non-present at the time, and permitted themselves to be taken into custody. More often the men have been caught red-handed, without being able to escape the bluecoats. From year to year the club has increased in numerical strength, this depending wholly on the law-breaking proclivities of the undergraduates in college at the time. At present the club numbers one hundred members.

The annual banquets have long held a prominent place in undergraduate life. Where and when these feasts are held is never known to the uninitiated until long afterward. Usually, however, they are given in the grill-room of some student cafe in New Haven, or at a hotel at some of the near-by shore resorts. The men assemble individually, and never in conspicuous throngs. Every effort is made to avoid publicity. The dinners or banquets begin late at night, and end in the "wee sma'" hours. The men are ranged about the festive board in the order of their criminality—that is, they sit near or far from the head of the table as the crimes for which they were arrested were great or small. Usually, although the rule is often violated, the man who has done the most daring crime, given the cops the greatest battle, or who has incurred the greatest punishment, heads the table and acts as toastmaster. Toasts of the following kind are responded to: "Policemen I Have Met," "How to Steal Signs and Escape, by One Who Didn't," "The Religious Aspect of Criminality," by Y. M.C.A. member; "How I Failed to Distance a Cop in a Handicap," by a member of the track team, and so on, by representatives of the different spheres of activity represented. The menu is usually made out with a black and white stripe effect, while handcuffs, dark-lanterns, and policemen's clubs intermingled adorn the top and bottom of the menu card. Usually a selected number of dirges are rendered by the university glee and banjo club members, who, the other Criminal Club members say, deserve honorary memberships for murdering music the way they do, if for no other reason.

Dooley on Reading.

Readin', me fri'nd, is talked about be all readin' people as though it was th' on'y thing that makes a man betther thin his neighbors. But th' truth is that readin' is th' nex' thing this side iv goin' to bed f'r restin' th' mind. With mos' people it takes th' place iv wurruk. A man doesn't think whin he's readin', or if he has to, th' book is no fun. Did ye iver have something to do that ye ought to do, but didn't want to, an' while ye was wishin' ye was dead, did ye happen to pick up a newspaper? Ye know what occurred. Ye didn't jus' skim through th' sportin' intillygince an' th' crime news. Whin ye got through with thim, ye read th' other quarther iv th' pa-per. Ye read about people ye niver heard iv, an' happenin's ye didn't undherstand—th' fashion notes, th' theatrical gossip, th' s'ciety news fr'm Peoria, th' quotations on oats, th' curb market, th' real estate transfers, th' marredge licenses, th' death notices, th' want ads., th' dhry-goods bargains, an' even th' edditoryals. Thin ye r-read thim over again with a faint idee ye'd read thim before. Thin ye yawned, studied th' design iv th' carpet, an' settled down to wurruk. Was ye exercisin' ye-er joynt intelleck while ye was readin'? No more thin if ye'd been whistlin' or writin' ye-er name on a pa-aper. If anny wan else but me come along they might say: "What a mind Hinnissy has! He's always readin'." But I w'u'd kick th' book or paaper out iv ye-er hand, an' grab ye be th' collar, an' cry, "Up, Hinnissy, an' to wurruk!" f'r I'd know ye were loafin'. Believe me, Hinnissy, readin' is not thinkin'. It seems like it, an' whin it comes out in talk sometimes, it sounds like it. It 's a kind iv nearthought that looks ginooyne to th' thoughtless, but ye can't get annything on it. Manny a man I've knowed has so doped himself with books that he'd stumble over a carpet-tack.

An "Informal" Dinner.

A tiny girl of seven gave a dinner-party the other day, for which twelve covers were laid, and that number of small maidens sat down to dine. It was a real little girls' dinner, and the little hostess herself presided, sitting at the head of the table. She had been very anxious, in looking forward to it, to do everything as it should be done. "Mamma," she asked, "shall we say grace?" "No," said mamma; "it will be a very informal dinner, and I think you need not do that." That meant one ceremony the less to be gone through, and was a relief. But the little lady was anxious to have all her guests understand it. So, as they gathered about the table, she explained: "Mamma says that this is such an informal dinner that we need not have grace to-day!"

WANTED BY 47 WOMEN

Texas Widower, a Gay Deceiver, Leaves a Trail of Broken Promises

Special to The Times.

St. Louis, Aug. 25.—Forty-seven women in St. Louis and vicinity would like to find Thomas Benton. Benton is the "foxy" old widower, who claimed to be a millionaire cattle man from El Paso, Tex. Six widows have confessed that they were engaged to marry Benton. Benton is sixty-five years old. His right hand is cut off, but that was no handicap in his race for the widows. He won the widows by promising them diamonds and bonds and a mansion in Texas. Some of the widows sold their boarding houses, packed their trunks and got ready to marry and go to Texas with Benton.

Benton appears to have gotten acquainted with the widows through a matrimonial advertisement. When he fled he left behind a large bundle of letters from St. Louis widows and young unmarried women.

ONE WAY TO KILL A DOG

Fasten Dynamite to His Tail and Light a Fuse but do not Forget to Tie Him

Pittsburg, Aug. 24— George Mechou, a coal miner Seali Siding, near Drifton, wanted to relieve his mangy dog of suffering by killing him. Disliking the sight of blood, he tied two sticks of dynamite to the dog's tail last night, lighted a long fuse and bolted for the house. He forgot, however, to tie the dog.

The dog got to the house only to find the door slammed in his face, so he crept under the cabin, which stood on posts. Nothing was left of the dog and the cabin was blown into small pieces.

Mechou and his wife were found full of splinters among the ruins. They will be laid up for a month.

A High-Class Mining Investment

Graham County Mining Co.

MINES, WORKS & FRANCHISES, ARIZONA

The Graham County Mining Company own a magnificent property consisting of gold mines, copper mines, water power and irrigation franchises that needs only development to make it one of the most valuable mining enterprises in the country.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in developing the property. The mines are well opened and with small expense can be made to produce.

AS IT DOES NOT TAKE AS LONG A TIME OR AS MUCH CAPITAL TO MAKE A GOLD MINE AS IT DOES TO MAKE A COPPER MINE, the management are now directing all their energies to the development of the gold property first, and will have the mines in a condition to supply reduction machinery with ore as soon as a plant can be established.

Only a limited number of shares of treasury stock will be offered for sale at present prices, for with the assistance of a quartz mill the gold property will quickly make the stock valuable and provide for the development of the copper mines and water power and irrigation franchises, at prices something like its actual value.

After a thorough examination, Professor George A. Treadwell, the well known geologist and metallurgist, not only endorsed the property but became a stockholder and director of the company.

The Professor's advice in developing the property and mode of treating the ore will be of great assistance to the management.

The company is incorporated in the interest of the stock holders.

The capitalization is only $250,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $10 par value, with one half ($125,000) in the treasury for working capital—AN EXCEEDINGLY CONSERVATIVE CAPITALIZATION AS COMPARED WITH OTHER MINING ENTERPRISES!

The directors are hard headed business men who have invested their own money in the enterprise and are vitally interested in the success of the company.

The company offer a limited number of shares of treasury stock for subscription at $6.25 a share, subject to an increase in price very soon.

The proceeds will be used for further development, to purchase a quartz mill for the gold property, secure patents and furnish working capital.

To Investors! A Chance of a Lifetime.

The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $600 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realized a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realize the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

For August Only

—PAR VALUE $1.00—

One in sight and value per ton makes our Shares well worth 75c. Watch them grow. Apply for terms, etc.

Nearly two years ago a party of well-known business men of Minneapolis organized the LaSonora Gold & Silver Mining Co., for the express purpose of developing the famous old Spanish Mine, La Blanca, well-known all through Sonora, Mexico, as a heavy producer of rich ore in ancient days, the company allowing only a few friends to invest with them, preferring to take the risk (if any) on their own shoulders. BUT HAPPILY THERE WAS NO RISK, and after ten months' labor and hundreds of feet of tunnels and shafts, they cut in Nov. the ore, and found below the old works what the ancients mined above them, 10 feet of very rich gold and silver ore, assaying from $24.75 to $217 per ton. Since Nov. 9 have opened the vien by drifting over 60 feet, and have now no scruples in offering to the investing public a chance to join with us in an absolute certainty.

The mine is ready for a concentrator, and for that purpose (only) we have alloted 50,000 shares.

Fatal Accident at Omemee

Mr. Richard Morton, a blacksmith in Omemee, was the victim of an accident in that village Friday afternoon, which may have fatal results. Mr. Morton was driving a spirited horse recently purchased, and when opposite the Presbyterian church the animal took fright. In spite of Mr. Morton's efforts to hold it, the horse ran away. He was thrown out of the buggy against the sidewalk, and when picked up was unconscious. On being taken to the office of a physician it was discovered that his back was broken, and that he had concussion of the brain.

Look Sharp

The voters' lists of the various municipalities are now being printed and hung up for inspection. It is the duty of every man that is qualified to vote to see that his name is on the list if he wants to have a vote. It is his own fault if his name is omitted when the roll has finally passed the judge, as he should have seen that his name was put on the roll before. This is a personal matter and not to be left to do for you.

Another Pork Industry

Cobourg Post: Mr. A. Pratt, postmaster, informs this paper that a capitalist will visit Cobourg shortly with a view to establishing a pork packing industry. He is reported to be a man with unlimited means, and thoroughly conversant with the business. We trust that he will be well received and given every opportunity to locate here. There certainly appears to be no falling off in demands for our Canadian cured bacon, and there is no reason why Cobourg should not get a share of the trade.

Inflamed Nose and Throat

A trial will convince anyone of the startling merit of Catarrhozone. Costs $1.00; small size 25c. At Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

PICTURES SENT OVER THE WIRE

opens his key, stopping both machines. The operation has taken from six to fifteen minutes, regardless of the distance and dependant upon the fineness of the half-tone plate. The machine is reversible; that is, the machine can either send or receive a picture, the change being effected almost instantly by the substitution of a stylus for a pen or vice versa and the turn of a switch.

Any number of machines can receive pictures at the same time from one sending apparatus. While the picture is being sent the various operators receiving are in constant communication with the sending office. A telegraph sounder is connected with the same wire used by the picture transmission. The transferring can be stopped at any time, a message relative to the picture can be sent, and the work of transmission resumed. The machine can be used single, duplex (sending and receiving at the same time) or quadruplex (receiving two and sending two different pictures at the same time.)

When the picture is received at a newspaper office from the sending machine all that remains to be done is to reproduce a zinc etching from the picture on the paper unwrapped from the cylinder. This is published as those made first hand in the office. This operation described above has been gone through in the production of the pictures accompanying this article.

The inventors and perfectors of the electrograph are H. R. Palmer and Thomas Mills, both of Cleveland. Mr. Palmer, who is a native of Cleveland, is a young man of great promise in the electrical world.

Mr. Mills is a practical electrician, who was previously employed at the Consolidated power house as an expert.

They have been at work for three years on the machine. It has only been brought to a state of approximate perfection within the last month. As at first made, the machine would transmit only drawings which were laboriously made upon metal plates by hand. Inventor Palmer later conceived the plan of using half tones. The outcome was the result of a wager made by him with a friend. He bet that it was possible to transmit pictures from a half-tone, and agreed to devise the means of doing it within a week. He won the bet.

As he himself says, however, he won by a narrow margin. There was very little left of the week by the time he had succeeded in getting the apparatus to work properly. He had trouble in securing the half-tone of a proper mesh. A reproduction of the first effort is very crude in comparison with the results now obtained.

This accomplished, there remained but one important problem to solve. This was perhaps the hardest obstacle to overcome. It was the synchronizing of the sending machine and the receiving apparatus. That is a device to make the cylinders revolve exactly alike. Without this device the invention would be about as valuable as a neat pile of scrap-iron. Without it the reproduced picture would be distorted and twisted beyond all recognition. One device after another was tried and found wanting. One was finally found that served the purpose fairly well. This was employed when the machines were installed at the Pan-American Exposition, where they were operated under the auspices of the Government.

This device was, however, not entirely satisfactory. It demanded the use of a piece of leather that had to be replaced frequently. For the past four months the inventors have been at work perfecting an entire satisfactory synchronising apparatus. Less than two months ago they succeeded in reaching their goal.

The Electograph Company, of America, has been organized, with F. B. Squire, of the Standard Oil Co., as the president; W. H. K. Ross, vice-president and secretary; E. H. Bourne, of the Union National Bank, treasurer; H. R. Palmer, consulting engineer, all of Cleveland.

CURE YOURSELF! [illegible]

Sold by Druggists, [illegible]

I am 73 years of age and made my will, at the doctor's request, two years ago, having had such a serious attack of Bright's disease. My doctor, who is a practical man, said I could not live to settle my affairs. Mr. Hanover, my neighbor, hearing of this, brought me a bottle of Powley's Liquified Ozone. My system surely required oxygen, as from the very first dose I felt Ozone was going to make me well. I continued its use and in a weeks' time was out of bed, and rapidly improved. This was two years ago. I have never had any return of the trouble, and have worked steadily ever since. Really I feel ten years younger since taking Powley's Liquified Ozone, and consider the preparation worth its weight in gold.

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

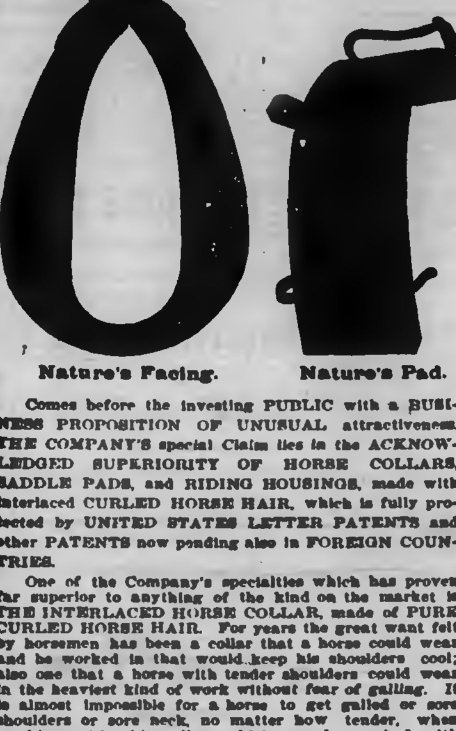
We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries, we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 25,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well.

Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

CANADIAN MINISTERS SOJOURN IN FRANCE.

The Ministers are Guests of Minister Delcasse of Paris

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Very Popular in the Land of His Ancestors—Comment of French Papers

Paris, Aug. 27.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, accompanied by Hector Fabre, Canadian Commissioner in Paris, was received on Saturday by M. Delcasse, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

A conference was afterwards held between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and M. Bompard, chief of the department of commercial relations.

A meeting with M. Bompard was arranged for today, when Hons. Messrs. Fielding and Paterson will be present.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is invited in the evening to the opera. He will occupy a seat in President Loubet's box.

On Tuesday Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. Mr. Paterson, and Mr. Fabre are going to Chateau Rambouillet, where they have been invited to lunch by President Loubet.

In the evening a dinner will be held at the Foreign Affairs' office in honor of the Canadian Premier and his colleagues.

On Wednesday all the ministers will leave for the Lille Exhibition, on an official invitation. The festivities will include a banquet and visits to the large factories.

The banquet at Paris in honor of Sir Wilfrid Laurier will take place on September 30. On the following day Sir Wilfrid will leave for Switzerland and Rome.

FRENCH VIEWS OF THE PREMIER.

London, Aug. 27.—The Times on Saturday, published a special despatch from Paris which says that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was lunched at St. Sulpice on Friday. He was received by Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal, who is in France at present.

The correspondent explains that the interest aroused in the Canadian Premier's second visit to the country is due partly to the pride the French people possess in the thought that he is the most distinguished French-Canadian living, and partly (this the Times representative calls an absurd impression), because that, although a British subject, his ambitions are so tinctured with American ideas that they look upon him as a great danger to British Imperialism, as Cecil Rhodes was in one moment of his career.

The Frenchmen recognise Sir Wilfrid's patriotism as chiefly Canadian. His visit is not only for the purpose of visiting his ancestral home, but to facilitate negotiations for better commercial relations.

It is reported that Premier Laurier proposes to treat France the same as England and will reduce the tariff in favor of France by 15 per cent., Canadian products to secure a benefit of an entry to France at a minimum tariff.

The Times correspondent also says that a result of the visit will be the establishment of an ocean service, with a subsidy of 800,000 francs ($160,000) from both countries. The scheme is said to be well advanced toward realization and is profoundly interesting to Parisian industrial and financial circles; yet to mock the scheme some French journals accuse Sir Wilfrid Laurier of making as his life work, the slow, relentless destruction of French influence in Canada. The truth of the matter is, the correspondent says, that some French journals have never forgiven Canada's action in giving assistance to Great Britain in her war in South Africa.

COMMENT OF FRENCH PAPERS.

The Courier de Soir reproves this class and speaking for thinking Frenchmen remarks that the Nationalists are insulting the Canadian Prime Minister, upon whom they look as too loyal for a man of French origin and says that "you cannot teach political geography to the cafe chantant patriots. They should understand that the secret of his loyalty resides in the English colonial policy, and we should imitate it."

It hits the nail on the head, says the Times' despatch.

The Daily Chronicle says that Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Paris is proving almost as great a trial to his kinsmen as General Botha is proving to Leyds the bosom friend of Kruger.

The Daily News, in referring to the reported proposition of the Canadian Premier to offer preferential treatment to France asks: "What would Colonial Secretary Chamberlain have said if the Transvaal attempted a similar deal under convention without consulting him?

The Daily News says that it is a trifle odd that the sequel to a private conference at Downing street should be sort of announced from Paris.

A PRETTY WEDDING

Marriage of Miss Taylor, of Niagara Falls and Mr. A. C. Thorburn, Gore Bay

A very pretty wedding in which the young people of Niagara Falls South were greatly interested took place on August 20 at 7 o'clock in Drummond Hill church. The happy couple were Miss Alexandrina Margaret, daughter of the late Wm. H. Taylor, M.D., and granddaughter of the late Rev. Wm. Taylor, D.D., of Montreal, and Mr. Allan Cameron Thorburn, of Gore Bay. The altar of the church was beautifully decorated with rare evergreens and palms, intertwined with many lovely flowers. The work of the members of the choir, friends of the bride, besides some other friends. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James Wilson of Glencoe, formerly of this town, while the musical service was executed by A. D. C. Blanchard, B.Sc., C.E. After the ceremony at the church the reception was held at the home of the bride's mother on Lundy's Lane, and amid good wishes and enthusiastic assistance the wedding couple made their departure for Atlantic City and other eastern cities. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Wm. Taylor of Montreal, was gowned in white taffeta silk, trimmed with real lace, and wore the traditional veil and orange blossoms which were worn by her mother. Her sister, Miss Etta Taylor, assisted her, and looked charming in pale pink lace organdie. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses, while the bride's was also a shower bouquet of white roses. The bride's little nieces, Amy and Jean Hill, acted as flower girls, and were India silk organdie and carried baskets of sweet peas. Mr. Bertram Nelles of Toronto ably supported the bridegroom. Messrs. Palmer and Seale had the agreeable duties of ushers to perform, which they did very acceptably. Among the guests from a distance were noticed Rev. James Wilson of Glencoe and Mrs. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Hill of Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. McGregor of Hamilton, Col. and Mrs. Nelles of Parkdale, Mrs. John Bertram, Miss Jacks, Mr. B. Nelles of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Thorburn of Brantford, Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Brown of Montreal, Mr. Taylor, Mrs. W. G. Duncan of Toronto, Mrs. and Miss Bessie Steele, Mrs. Sweering of Buffalo, also Miss Ewart, Miss Erskine of Ashburnham, Mrs. Bennett of Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Mr. H. L. Taylor [illegible] of Cincinnati.

The Latest is that Premier Ross will Quit The Party

Special to The Times.

Toronto, Aug. 27.—The latest concerning the political situation appears in print, as follows: There are some Grit politicians around Woodstock who stand pretty close to the powers that be in the parliament buildings in Toronto, and there has been a strong rumor amongst them for the past week or two that Hon. G. W. Ross was so incensed at the attempt of some of his colleagues to throw him overboard and form a coalition, that in a few days he will tender his resignation to Sir Oliver Mowat, Lieutenant-Governor, and let the traitors look out for themselves in the shipwreck.

SIGN OF RAIN—IN ENGLAND

Dr. Jenner, of vaccination fame, found time, writes a contributor to American Medicine, to worship occasionally at the shrine of the muse. While he was not noted as a poet, yet some of his metrical compositions were quite clever. It is said that on receiving an invitation from a friend to make a country excursion, he sent his excuse in the form of a poem. As this poem shows very acute power of observation, I think it worth reciting. It is entitled, "Signs of Rain":

The hollow winds begin to blow,
The clouds look black, the glass is low,
The soot falls down, the spaniels sleep,
And spiders from their cobwebs creep.
Last night the sun went pale to bed,
The moon in halos hid her head.
The boding shepherd heaves a sigh,
For, see! a rainbow spans the sky.
The walls are damp, the ditches smell,
Clos'd is the pink-ey'd pimpernel.
Hark! how the chairs and tables crack!
Old Betty's joints are on the rack.
Loud quacks the ducks, the peacocks cry,
The distant hills are looking nigh.
How restless are the snorting swine—
The busy flies disturb the kine.
Low o'er the grass the swallow wings;
The cricket, too, how loud it sings.
Puss on the hearth, with velvet paws,
Sits smoothing o'er her whiskered jaws.
Thro' the clear stream the fishes rise,
And nimbly catch the incautious flies.
The sheep are seen with early light
Cropping the meads with eager bite.
Through June the air is cold and chill,
The mellow blackbird's voice is still.
The glow-worms, numerous and bright,
Illumed the dewey dell last night.
At dusk the squalid toad was seen
Hopping, crawling, o'er the green.
The frog has lost his yellow vest,
And in a dingy suit is dress'd.
The leech, disturb'd, is newly risen
Quite to the summit of his prison.
The whirling wind the dust obeys,
And in the rapid eddy plays.
My dog, so altered in his taste,
Quits mutton bones on grass to feast;
And see you rooks, how odd their flight
They imitate the gliding kite,
Or seem precipitate to fall,
As if they felt the piercing ball.
'Twill surely rain—I see with sorrow
Our jaunt must be put off to-morrow.

100 MILES AN HOUR

High Speed Train Being Made for an Illinois Elevated Railroad

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 24. — Machinery for a train that may revolutionize the railway transportation of the world is being built at the general electric works here. It is soon to be tried on the new Chicago, Elgin and Peoria elevated railroad. The engineers estimate that the train will make 90 to 100 miles an hour.

The line is about 150 miles long and the construction throughout is remarkable for solidity and strength. As far as possible all grades have been eliminated. Electricity will be the motive power, and the third-rail system will be used.

A train of three cars has been built with which the first trials are to be made. The train will be equipped with twelve 120-horsepower motors, four in each car. It is estimated that the train will even be safer and will run less risk of leaving the rails than an ordinary street car going at a moderate rate of speed.

WIFE KILLED HIM AS HE SLEPT

She Confessed When Directly Accused by the Coroner's Jury

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 26.—John E. Wright, a prosperous farmer residing near Waverly, was shot and instantly killed last night by his wife, while he was asleep. She used a shotgun.

The neighborhood was aroused by the cries of Mrs. Wright and a crowd soon gathered. Sheriff Fentress arrived arrived with bloodhounds, but they failed to strike a trail.

The officer searched the house and founded two loaded shells and one empty one. Mrs. Wright had previously stated to the Coroner's jury that there was not a shell on the place shells were found concealed between the ceiling and the floor.

Wright and his wife did not get along well, and this, with other evidence, caused suspicion to rest upon her. The verdict of the jury was that Wright met his death at the hands of his wife. Later, in conversation with Sheriff Fentress, the woman confessed. The confession is being kept quiet for fear of mob violence.

Mr. Wright was about 65 years of age. He and his wife had five children two of whom were at home at the time of the killing. Mrs. Wright was taken to Waverly and placed in jail.

THE BRITISH MASSES SAID TO BE UNDERFED

One Third of the British Population are Forced to Go Hungry

IS THE RACE DETERIOATING?

Remarkable Statistics are Made Public by Sir Browne—How the Scotch are Also Getting Behind

London, Aug. 26.—Thirty per cent of the population of Great Britain is underfed.

Such is the declaration of Sir. J. Crichton Browne, M.D., president of the Medical Section of the International Congress for the Welfare and Protection of Children, lately held in London.

"The conquest in South Africa is complete, the empire is in a state of peace, the king has recovered from a dangerous illness and has been crowned and may reasonably look forward to a long reign. Now, what about the thousands of young Britons right here in Edward's Imperial City who, for lack of food, may never reach healthy and robust maturity.?"

I am quoting the sentiments of philanthropic workers in the slums, and in the factory districts. But Sir Crichton Browne's statement has a broader application. He finds that even in the rural districts the food habits of the masses are calculated to prevent boys growing up into useful material wherewith to fight and conquer Great Britain's remedies in war.

"My observation leads me to believe" says the distinguished medical authority, "that the masses are improperly fed as well as underfed. For example, in rural districts of Scotland, where milk was to be had in plenty, it is now scarce. It is sent off to the city to be sold. The children are fed on bread, and tea and cheap jams, and even oatmeal has passed into the background as a staple article of diet.

"When we turn to the townsfolk, we see in the anaemic faces, the lack of sound teeth and the stunting of bodies evidences of deterioration due to misuse of food."

In the factory town of Dundee boys between the ages of eleven and twelve years were found to average ten pounds under weight and nearly four inches under height. Girls were also found to fall below the standard.

The publication of these figures and the ratatistion on the subject has attracted much attention throughout England. Nothing can cause greater consternation in the average Briton than the conviction that his race is deteriorating. The matter will likely be brought up in parliament.

SUIT AGAINST ORILLIA

Company That Built the Power Plant Wants to be Paid

Suit has been entered by the Electrical Supply and Maintenance Company against the town of Orillia for over $220,000 as payment for the construction of the power plant at Ragged Rapids on the Severn River.

The work was completed about a year ago, and the cost was considerably in excess of what the town was authorized to pay under the by-law voted on by the electors. The question came before the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature last session, and the point was raised, whether the company's claim should be left to another popular vote. The compromise reached was that the company should be entitled to collect whatever it could prove in the courts without depending on another by-law. This is the origin of the writ. Several prominent Torontonians are interested by reason of advances to the company.

CITY OF LONDON VS. NEW YORK CITY.

American Town Perhaps the Financial Metropolis of the World

PURELY AMERICAN VIEW

The Great British Capital Leads in Population and Shipping and will Maintain Its Place

But Gotham May Excel in It's Financial Bubbles which May or May not Burst

New York, Aug 27—An interesting discussion as to the comparative growth and influence of the city of London, which has so long proudly held the title of metropolis of the world, and New York, whose people call it the Empire City of the new world, was printed in a recent issue of the London Daily Mail. Some startling admissions were made by the English writer, who, however, still claims that the ancient city still maintains her supremacy. He says:

New York is now the chief financial metropolis of the world and New Yorkers assert that it will soon displace London in population and commerce.

New York may soon become a greater port than London. It depends on whether we reform and modernise our docks. It depends, too, on whether America develops its foreign trade by lowering its tariff—making the American metropolis the clearing house and emporium of the continent. But there is no evidence in sight that New York will in the lifetime of anyone living equal London in population. New York has grown chiefly by annexation, London by natural expansion and absorption. London is in great part as much a new city as is Chicago.

ELEMENTS OF GREATNESS.

London has more elements of permanent greatness than New York. Unlike New York, London does not depend on its commerce for its growth. Four-fifths of the population of London, as the census shows, are dependent, not on industries, but on the continuance of London as one of the leading ports of the world and as the capital of the Empire. London, being the world's market for wool, tea, sugar, coffee and one of the chief markets for wheat, the undisputed commercial capital, a vast emporium, is the political capital of the Empire.

It is the city to which all civil servants, soldiers, naval men, statesmen, who have served in the colonies and dependencies turn in the days of their retirement. This class and their dependents form a vast population in themselves. London is the one social centre of the kingdom and the Empire; the city to which all traders and merchants, whether in Manchester, Glasgow, India, Australia or Africa, come to spend the evening of their days.

So long, therefore, as London remains the lodestone of Empire it will increase.

LONDON GROWS NATURALLY.

The phenomenal growth of London suburbs is one of the most marvellous things in the world's history.

Drive round the outer zone of London and you pass through miles and miles of comparatively new houses—some colonies of workmen, others the houses of the genteel clerk, then the villas of the small business man, and so on through all the social strata until the more imposing residences of the merchant and the higher middle-class are reached.

Not in one direction, but in all, has the builder been at work. The house push southward over the broad fields of Surrey and Kent. They blot out the green valley of the Thames, convert the flat marshlands in Essex into forests of brick and mortar, cover the clay plains beyond Tottenham and scale the northern heights, sometimes so steep that the houses look like the steps of a huge terrace.

Nothing impedes the progress of the Imperial City. Its outposts cover the Home counties and it can claim the health resorts by the sea in Kent and Sussex as its natural suburbs.

NEW YORK'S ANNEXATION.

Compare the growth of London and New York. New York city chiefly Manhatten Island, has now a population of 1,850,093; the enlarged city, of Greater New York has a population of 3,437,202. The county of London, at the last census had a population of 4,536,063; Greater London had a population of 6,580,616.

New York has only maintained its position as the first city in America by annexation. It annexed Brooklyn—a city almost as large as itself, which had absorbed a number of other towns. Brooklyn was a sister city, with all the elements of independent existence. Within twenty miles of City Hall, New York, there are a number of manufacturing towns such as Newark, Elizabeth and Paterson whose position would not be seriously affected if New York did not exist.

All the towns in Greater London are natural outgrowths of the parent city London in its onward march picks up small hamlets and absorbs them. It turns old cities, which, if left alone, would have long since sunk into insignificance into populous towns. London in fact, from the bank, to the limits of the police area, and far beyond, is one homogeneous body, one vast community of interests, each part of which is dependent on the other.

New York does not enjoy such homogeneity.

LONDON A NEW CITY TOO.

London, as I have said, is in great part a new city. In 1861 the population of the zone between the county boundary and the limits of Greater London was 413,873; in 1901 it had turned two millions. In the same period the suburbs of New York, including that is Brooklyn and the boroughs of Bronx, Richmond and Queen's increased from 266,389 to 1,587,000. In London the increase in the thirty years was at the rate of 425 per cent., in New York at the rate of 330 per cent. If we add Jersey City, Hoboken and other places in New Jersey as outgrowths of New York, the comparison is still in favor of London. Nor can New York show such mushroom suburbs as West Ham, grown from 18,807 in 1851 to 268,000 in 1901, or Walthamstow from little more than a village with 7,000 inhabitants in 1861, now a great town of 120,000 people; or East Ham, which from a few houses on the marshes in 1861 is now a community of 100,000 people, an increase of nearly 5,000 per cent. in forty years.

The percentage, of increase in New York suburbs is only about 500 per cent. in forty years with the exception of Bronx, which has increased 2,400 per cent. in fifty years.

RIVALRY OF CHICAGO.

London has more elements of permanent greatness than New York. It has no competitors. It is New York, Boston and Washington in one. Chicago will be a very serious competitor to New York. It is a city which, like London, has grown by natural expansion. It is the natural centre of the North American continent. As the Northwest develops so will Chicago. If it succeeds in shifting the financial capital from New York, and becomes more of a literary and publishing centre, it will be the American metropolis of the future.

There is no indication that the phenomenal growth of London's suburbs will be arrested. The development of rapid transit—the revolution brought by electric railways, tramways and motor-cars—will extend the area of the mammoth city, but it will still be London. Already many workers in London live twenty miles distant. In a few years they will perform the journey in less time than they now require for half that distance. The towns in Herts, Essex, Surrey and Kent will all be suburbs of London. The health resorts round the coast, within sixty or eighty miles, will be outposts of the capital.

By 1940, without reckoning these farther outgrowths, the population of the area which we now know as Greater London will exceed the estimate of the last Water Commission of fourteen millions.

THE CASH VALUE OF A CHILD

A Thousand Dollars the Price Fixed in New Jersey

Jersey City, N. Y., Aug. 27. — The North Jersey Street Railway Company has just settled a remarkable case arising out of a claim for damages for killing a child. The case was tried six times, the juries in the lower courts awarding from $3,000 to $5,000 damages. These verdicts, however, were set aside as excessive by the Supreme Court, which gave the weight of its authority to the opinion that when a child is killed through the negligence of a railway company the parents are only damaged to the extent of one dollar. The Company has settled with the plaintiff upon the basis of a thousand dollars damages, and the costs, amounting to about two thousand dollars more. In assessing the value of children there is apt to be a wide difference between buyers and sellers. How the Supreme Court in its wisdom arrived at one dollar as a fair valuation of a child's life it is difficult to imagine. Possibly the court was of the opinion that the only damage done to parents by killing their child is of a sentimental character and does not feel justified in awarding compensation for sentimental damages. In that case it would have been more logical to have given judgement for the company. A child is either worth something or is worth nothing in law. If it is worth anything, with all respect to the Supreme Court of New Jersey, it is worth a great deal more than a dollar.

GAYNOR-GREENE CASE

A Pittsburg Man Says Feeling is High There—Proceedings will not be Abandoned

Toronto, Aug. 26—Joseph O. Rent, of Pittsburg, thinks there may be trouble between his Government and the Canadian Administration over the Gaynor-Greene case. The freeing of those men was a most unjustifiable act, said Mr. Rent, who is at present in the city, to a reporter. "The men are alleged forgers, an offence which is plainly extraditable under international laws. By all principles of right and justice those men should have been returned to the United States."

"There is considerable feeling over the same in your section, then?"

"I should say so. Sentiment is very strong and our Government intends to carry the matter to the highest courts in London, England. The release of those men established a dangerous precedent. We might easily retaliate on many occasions, if we were so disposed." and Mr. Rent cited a number of cases where the United States had returned noted criminals to Canada within the past few years.

"There never was a clearer case for extradition," continued Mr. Rent, emphatically. "What's the use of making treaties if they are to be ignored in this fashion. I think you will find that relations between the two Government will be somewhat strained in consequence."

Washington, D.C., Aug. 26.—Attorney-General Knox sails for Paris next Wednesday on the Oceanic. He had hoped that this trip to France might be avoided, but Mr. Russell, who is now there investigating the Panama Canal question for this Government, has cabled that there are some features in the case which, in his opinion, should receive the Attorney-General's personal attention.

As to the Greene and Gaynor case Mr. Knox said that within a day or two he would formulate instructions to the Government counsel in Quebec as to the next step to be taken to extradite the men. The Government, he said, had no thought of abandoning its case, and every possible means would be exhausted to secure the return of Greene and Gaynor to the United States.

PICKETS OUT AGAIN.

Hazelton, Pa., Aug. 26.—Suspecting that another attempt would be made to resume operations at the No. 40 colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company to-day, the strikers had pickets stationed along all of the approaches to the mine. Most of the nonunion men who had attempted to reach the colliery were turned back, but no serious trouble occurred. Three strikers who, it is alleged, participated in yesterday's riot, are under arrest. Other arrests are expected.

SHAH RETURNS THANKS FOR KING'S KINDNESS

Prays For Continuance of His Reign, and Prosperity of Great Britain.

Rusian Deficit is $750,000,000—Forty Per Cent. of the Companies Have Failed—Frenchmen Advised Not to Pay Direct Taxes.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 27.—The Times publishes the text of a valedictory message from the Shah of Persia to King Edward. It was sent from Calais as follows: "On landing at Calais, I desire once more to express to your Majesty my sincere thanks for the kind and sympathetic welcome which was accorded to me during my enjoyable stay in London, equally through your Majesty, her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and for the pleasant company of his Royal Highness Prince Arthur of Connaught. Your Majesty may be certain I carry away a pleasant and never-to-be-effaced remembrance of my visit to England. I pray God for the continuance of your reign, the happiness of your august family and the prosperity of your dominions.

RUSSIAN INDUSTRIES BANKRUPT.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 27.—A correspondent at Odessa draws attention to the unsatisfactory state of many leading industries in Russia. Of companies formed during the last twenty years to exploit the resources of the country fully two-fifths are now bankrupt. Pioneer companies having unexplored fields and a home demand equal to the supply have generally been successful. Later syndicates, however, lacking an outlet either at home or abroad, have mostly failed. The correspondent says the protection scheme of De Witte has not proved successful, home consumers refusing not to deal with foreign concerns. The inadequate company laws of Russia which permit swindles are partly responsible for many collapses. The prospects for improved conditions are not rosy. A well-known South Russian financier estimates the loss in recent years at $750,000,000. He regards the absence of industrial organization in Russia as the chief obstacle to progress.

REFUSE TO PAY DIRECT TAXES.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 27.—A Paris correspondent says Libre Parole publishes an article appealing to Frenchmen to refuse to pay direct taxes, by way of a protest against the Government's measures regarding Catholic schools. The paper says that peoples like the British and Americans, possessing habits of liberty, contemplate what is going on in France with disdainful pity. This, says the correspondent, is rather amusing, coming as it does from men who abuse Dreyfusards for appealing to the opinion of foreigners. The correspondent says it is a good thing there is no intention to refuse to pay indirect taxes, because Coppee and Lemaitre, who are prominent Nationalists, are great smokers and would either have to leave France or give up cigarettes as well as tea, coffee and alcohol.

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

Special to The Times.

Rossland, B. C., Aug. 26. — A fire, which originated yesterday in P. Burns and Company's butcher store, near First avenue, where they were rendering lard, spread east and west, and before it was subdued destroyed $[illegible] worth of property in the business section of the city. The entire business district was at one time in serious danger, but a shift in the wind carried the flames back over the section already burned, and the fire spent itself.

The butcher shop was in the center of a large block of wooden buildings, and though the fire brigade had a stream of water playing upon the butcher shop within two minutes after the flames were discovered, the fire ran right through the block, licking up the wooden structures like a blast flame does a fuse. As soon as the fire commenced to spread, the fire brigades from War Eagle and Center Star mines turned out to help the Rossland brigade, and when the blaze was at its height, the Trail brigade, with thirty men and a thousand feet of hose arrived on a special train, and took a hand in the struggle. The fire in its first run destroyed the Anaconda saloon, the Coeur d'Alene saloon, the M. and M. saloon, Thompson's restaurant, and threatened the International Hotel and music hall, which adjoin the Coeur d'Alene saloon. This is an immense wooden structure. If the fire had secured a foothold in the building it would have spread to the most important business section of the town. Just when the building had been given up as doomed the wind shifted, and it was saved. The fire jumped across First avenue, and wiped out a block of three-storey stores and a number of residences within an hour of the first outbreak. Then the combined brigades secured control of the conflagration, and the danger was over.

When the fire was threatening the best business section, the merchants commenced to move out their stocks. They pressed into service every kind of a vehicle, and hurried wagon upon wagon load away to safety. At one time it was proposed to blow up the buildings in the path of the flames, and so prevent them from spreading. Powder was secured from the mines, but before the details of the proposal were settled the fire was under control.

During the fire a live wire struck Chief Guthrie on the head, dazing him. He recovered after he had been carried to the firehall. After the blaze was over a posse of a dozen special policemen were sworn in to protect the piles of goods carried out of the burned and threatened stores by the owners and occupants.

New York, Aug. 27.—"We pay fifteen cents a foot for snakes; the longer the better," is the unique sign which is now attracting the attention of the villagers of Brown's Mills, N. J. The sign is posted in a conspicuous place in the general store of Warner Hargrove, and a truthful statement it is.

Perhaps it has never before occurred in the history of the country that snakes sold so high. The cranberry and huckleberry crops failed, the farmers and the small boy contingent were turning thoughts in their respective minds as to how best ensnare the elusive dollar. Mr. Hargrove and his sign have proven a saviour for them.

There are no end of snakes in the swamps and bogs—more, in fact, than Ireland ever saw, and it is a rich harvest that the faithful workers are reaping. The snakes caught measure from one foot to eight feet in length. Twenty-five feet of snake is a good day's work. After they are sold to Mr. Hargrove he sells them to managers of small shows, circus freaks and manufacturers of snake skin belts. The industry is growing, and threatens to become a prominent one in the vicinity of Brown's Mills.

GLASGOW'S GREAT PROGRESS

She is Giving the World an Object Lesson on Economy

London, Aug. 26.—Glasgow, foremost British cities in municipal enterprise, has just given London, slowest of all British cities, a lesson in municipal management of city-owned street railways that is invaluable.

Glasgow owns and operates all its street car lines and it does it at a profit that would make any traction company in the United States envious.

During the last two years the horse car lines have been gradually displaced and have now disappeared from the streets. Although working expenses during the transition period are not perhaps so low as they will be, yet they remained practically the same as the previous year, although the revenue increased from $[illegible] to $[illegible].

After $[illegible] has been set aside for depreciation, the profit for the twelve months ending in May last was $[illegible], a sum sufficient to pay a dividend of 8 per cent. on the whole capital expenditure—which is more than the capital borrowed—and to carry $[illegible] to the reserve fund. What [illegible] after paying the interest and [illegible] charges and [illegible] general city funds, went to the sinking fund.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 27, 1902.

THEIR NAVAL STRENGTH

Some recent magazine articles have been comparing the prospective German fleet with the British and not altogether to the advantage of the latter. According to the present programme, the German fleet will, in 1920, consist of 38 thoroughly modern battleships and 17 older reserve battleships, and 52 cruisers, making 107 ships in all. In that year the British navy will be only three battleships stronger that the German; and both English and German writers doubt if it will be much more effective. Abundant criticisms of the British ships and their crews accompany these figures. There is, of course, a big "if" in all this. Britain may easily take alarm at the growth of the German fleet and keep her own well ahead. She has a long start as it is. The British seamanship is admittedly much better than German; and, after all, sailors are an important factor in the working of a fighting fleet. Still, the lessons of the Boer war should give Britain a hint to make very sure of the efficiency of her fleet before risking the existence of the Empire upon it. A naval war can never be, for Britain, "in the enemy's country."

MR. SAGE AND TRUSTS

Russell Sage, New York's aged financier, holds views on the trust question which will likely afford J. Pierpont Morgan food for reflection. Mr. Sage believes these trusts which have been formed with the right idea and on a sound basis will live, but that the others will fall and die of their own poor construction. What he is afraid of is the constant formation of inflated securities which are disposed of to the American people with a good brand on them. Securities have been made in great quantities and sold at high prices on the idea that economies to be affected will give them the arbitrary value which has been placed upon them. This theory, he says, will be exploded least on, for there will always be competition. When the crash comes it will be a national disaster. Everyone will be more or less affected and the industrial stagnation will be far greater than if half a dozen small concerns became bankrupt. Under the old conditions only a score of people would sustain losses, but when a great big company goes under thousands will have to bear the loss. Another thing Mr. Sage fears is the centralization of big industries in the hands of five or six men. The control of the industries of the country should be more widely distributed, in his opinion, but if the trust idea continues to progress at the same speed that it has done within the last year all the leading industries of the nation will be left in the control of half a dozen men. When half a dozen men direct the business and financial policies of the great industries there is a danger that they may make a mistake in judgment. It would be different if a hundred or a thousand men controlled these industries. If part of them erred the rest might be affected, but they would be able to stand it. If, however, a mistake was made by this small group of powerful men then the whole nation would be plunged in financial loss and ruin. Mr. Sage does not want to be held up as a fighter of combinations, but he thinks, to use his own words. "We had better go slow."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Necessity is the mother of invention. Experiments are now being actively prosecuted with a view to obtaining a suitable substitute for coal as fuel. The first thing the quarreling mine owners and miners may awake to the fact that an article has been discovered sufficiently plentiful and cheap to enable a large proportion of their long-suffering customers to get on without them.

FIRST IN PEACE AS IN WAR

Reports from the Hague assert that notwithstanding the efforts of Kruger Leyds and Fischer, the non-combatant irreconcilables, the Boer generals refuse to embark upon any seditious projects, says the Ottawa Citizen. If Botha, De Wet and Delarey continue to act with the good judgment they have exhibited since peace was signed they will enhance the admiration they won on the battlefield. They are in a far better position to judge what is best for their country than the men who have lived in Europe and are not in touch with the changed conditions that now prevail in South Africa. Botha De Wet and Delarey were prominent public men and legislators before they gained their reputations as soldiers and may now be regarded as the really representative men of the Transvaal and Orange River colonies. The emigres who fled to Europe early in the struggle are out of date, and might as well gracefully accept the situation and retire into oblivion. For men like the three Boer generals there is a great future in connection with the future progress of South Africa, provided they keep their heads and continue to command the confidence of the British public by their attitude. There is no disloyalty to their country or the Lost Cause implied in the course they are pursuing—indeed it requires with such men a high quality of moral courage to run the risk of being misunderstood in frankly carrying out a policy under the new order of things which they believe to be in the best interests of their people. There will not be wanting bitter critics who will accuse them of being flattered into forgetfulness of injuries by the laudation of their late enemies but the Boer leaders are men of too much strength of character to be swayed by the animus of envious detractors. After the American civil war the hardest fighters for the South were the first to throw in their influence to aid in the process of reconstruction and the South would have been saved years of subsequent suffering, almost as bitter as the war had the settlement been left to the men who fought. The unfortunate assassination of President Lincoln removed the best friend of the South and substituted for him the rancorous, narrow-minded Vice-President Johnson, who, instead of treating a gallant foe in a generous spirit proceeded to make it as hard for them as possible, with the result that the reconstruction period is possibly a more bitter memory in some parts of the South than the war itself.

In South Africa if the generosity of Britain toward the conquered is accepted in the right spirit and the Boers under the example of such leaders as Botha, De Wet and Delarey show a disposition to make the best of the situation and let bygones be bygones it will be a good thing for all concerned.

STONY LAKE NOTES

Items of Interest from Peterborough's Popular Summer Resort

—Many of the cottagers are preparing to leave for home. Already several have taken their departure and closed their houses for the season.

—Mr. Crane and family will leave Tuesday, and Mr. Meldrum will follow a few days later, closing their cottages for the season.

—Burleigh Falls Hotel has had a busy season. Notwithstanding, the cool weather, the business kept up straight along. Messrs. Darcy and Son know how to manage a house of this kind, as those who spent the season with them can testify.

—The steamers have had a busy month of it during August. On Saturdays especially has the capacity of the boats been taxed to their utmost to carry the numbers who go to spend Sunday at Stony Lake. Next year an additional boat should be put on.

—On Sunday a vigorous sermon was preached at the pavillion by Rev. Mr. Geggie, of Dunn Avenue Presbyterian church, Toronto, on the subject of "Lot and Demas." There was a large congregation, who listened with rapt attention to the eloquent words of the divine. During the services there was much disgust over the noise made by those who sat outside the pavilion. This should be stopped, as it tends to bring the religious services into disfavor. Not only do men gather and talk audibly, to the annoyance of those who are at worship, but many of them smoke and almost smother those who happen to be sitting above in the pavillion.

When Victoria Was Crowned.

In the Marquis of Lorne's "Life" of Queen Victoria there is a chapter on the coronation now quite interesting in view of the much-discussed ceremony which is to take place in London in June. The former Governor-General's description of the pageant is too impressionistic to be very effective, but the following account of the ceremony, given by Lady Wilhelmina Stanhope, one of the trainbearers of the Queen, who later became the Duchess of Cleveland, is very amusing. She writes:

The Queen looked very well and was perfectly composed. She wore a circlet of splendid diamonds, and was dressed in gold tissue, over which was fastened a crimson velvet mantle, bordered with gold lace, and lined with ermine, with a long ermine cape, which very ponderous appendage we were to support. . . . We were all dressed alike, in white and silver. The effect was not, I think, brilliant enough in so dazzling an assembly, and our little trains were serious annoyances, for it was impossible to avoid treading upon them. We ought never to have had them; and there certainly should have been some previous rehearsing, for we carried the Queen's train very jerkily and badly, never keeping step properly, and it must have been very difficult for her to walk, as she did, evenly and steadily, and with much grace and dignity, the whole length of the Abbey.

The Abbey itself was a beautiful coup d'oeil, as we marched up amid thunders of applause and handkerchiefs and scarfs waving everywhere. The Queen acknowledged her reception very graciously. I think her heart fluttered a little as we reached the throne; at least, the color mounted to her cheeks, brow, and even neck, and her breath came quickly. However, the slight emotion she showed was very transient, and she stood perfectly motionless while the archbishop, in almost inaudible voice, proclaimed her our undoubted sovereign and liege lady. . . .

The burst of applause in the Abbey when the crown was placed on her head, and the sight of all the peers and peeresses crowning themselves at the same moment, was really most impressive, and in the midst of the cheering Handel's magnificent anthem, "The Queen Shall Rejoice!" thundered in. After this the Queen was enthroned, and we took up our station on the steps of the throne during the homage, and amused ourselves with watching Lord Surrey, the treasurer of the household, dispensing medals in the midst of a most desperate scramble, and nearly torn in pieces in the universal excitement. The pages were particularly active, and some of them collected ten or twelve medals apiece.

I saw little of the homage. The Duke of Wellington was prodigiously cheered. Lord Rolle fell down, and was carried away by two strong peers. . . . After the homage, we returned with the Queen to the chapel, where her mantle—now a purple one—was fastened on, and we waited for three-quarters of an hour for the procession to form in the same manner as on entering the Abbey.

The Queen complained of a headache from having the crown very ceremoniously knocked by most of the peers—one actually clutched hold of it; but she said she had guarded herself from any accident or misadventure by having it made to fit her head tightly. She had, besides, to bear the heavy orb and sceptre across the Abbey; but when she reached the robing-room, she disembarrassed herself of them, unclasped her mantle, took off her crown, and having got rid of all her royalty, sat down on the sofa and amused herself. We, too, were allowed to sit down for the first time.

But her day of fatigue was not yet over, for she had to entertain one hundred persons at dinner in the palace.

The Duke of Wellington had a great ball at Apsley House, two thousand persons having been invited, the cabinet ministers gave state dinners. Illuminations, fireworks, a fair in Hyde Park, and free admission to the theatres were provided for the gratification of Her Majesty's subjects in London. There was no accident of any importance, except in one case, where a balloon made a bad descent. The House of Commons voted $350,000 on account of the coronation, a very small sum when compared with the large amounts given for similar ceremonies abroad. A number of peers were created or raised a step in the peerage, among these being the father of General Lord Methuen, and twenty-nine baronets, among them Lytton Bulwer and William Herschell.

Mystifying the Audience.

At the first production of Augustus Thomas's dramatization of Richard Harding Davis's "Soldiers of Fortune," at New Haven, Robert Edeson, the star, made the first speech to the cheering Yale boys. Then there were calls for Richard Harding Davis, author of the novel, and Augustus Thomas, who had dramatized it. A large, smooth-shaven man, who tallied with the descriptions of the novelist, appeared and thanked the students for their kind reception of his book in play form, said he hoped it would awaken new interest in the book, enlarging its sale, and that he would like to have Mr. Thomas dramatize his latest novel, "In the Fog," which name he impressed upon possible buyers. About a third of the audience knew that the man who had represented himself to them as Davis was really Mr. Thomas. The rest saw the joke when Mr. Davis came out and said: "Of course this reception is very gratifying, but I don't think my dramatization of Mr. Davis's story is particularly good. But then, to a man who has written a play like 'Arizona,' that has been successful all over America, and recently was praised by the King and Queen of England, dramatizing a novel by a mere Richard Harding Davis seems unimportant and trivial."

PACIFIC STOCKS

Union Pacific will Follow the Southern Pacific

The Long Dormant Union Pacific Will Soon Advance, and Should be Good for From 15 to 20 Points Rise.

New York, Aug. 26—Our special letter of Aug. 6th 'appertaining to Southern Pacific which was written and advertised for distribution under caption, "a stock that should advance 30 points," came pretty close to hitting the mark. It was the first announcement in Wall street of the coming rise in the stock, and was issued when it was selling at 68c. has already advanced one-third of the amount we stated and with time will advance the full 30 points. It is a purchase right now, and on each and every reaction to hold for much higher prices. We now state it to be our belief that the long dormant Union Pacific will soon commence to advance and that it should be good for from 15 to 20 points rise. The increase in market values of its greatest asset, Southern Pacific, would be sufficient reason. The Southern Pacific folks are preparing to make their specialty pay dividends. This will give Union Pacific an additional income of $3,000,000 annually. The crops along the Union Pacific are simply enormous and the stock will show fully 12 per cent. earned for it the coming 12 months. Both Southern and Union Pacific are based for very much higher prices. The other market is good to buy also. There was more doing last week in the industrial department of the stock exchange than for a long time past. These stocks are hardening and making their preliminary upward move prior to a bull speculation of some considerable dimensions. This is one of these kind of markets where additional stocks should be purchased when the market is advancing utilizing your profits as a margin upon your additional purchases.

The most fearless will prove to be the largest money makers. In no other business is the plan of using your profits for the acquisition of more likely to prove so profitable. To do this is to grasp the opportunity presented by the present market. This is what the clique and large speculators are doing. The market plainly indicates it by striking when the iron is hot and things are going your way. You will do better than to wait until the great advance is about to culminate then make your purchases on the way down. The former will make you money, the latter will lose your money. It is a fine bull market. HAIGHT & FREESE COMPANY.

RICE CONFESSED GUILT.

Murderer of County Constable Boyd Made the Admission to Mr. Curry

Special to The Times.

Toronto, Aug. 26.—Fred Lee Rice, who murdered County Constable William Boyd, and was hanged in the Toronto Jail on July 18, confessed his guilt to Crown Attorney Curry.

Those who are conversant with all details of the case never had any doubt as to the part played by Rice in the affair, although, as it always happens, there were many who feared that possibly an innocent man had been hanged, and that too, in spite of the direct and positive testimony of Walter Stewart, who was sitting beside the victim when the murderer sent the bullet through his brain, and in spite, too, of the fact that it was practically impossible for any other person to have done the treacherous act.

When under the tremendous influence of the shock of the suicide of his accomplice, Rutledge, in the jail, Rice weakened enough to tell the Crown Attorney that what Walter Stewart said was the truth, that he (Rice) had murdered Mr. Boyd.

The prisoner had not been cautioned, and under all circumstances, Mr. Curry did not think it fair to make a public statement which would have cut away the wretch's last hope. Now, however, that justice has been vindicated, Mr. Curry sees no reason to keep the confession quiet.

THE FATAL RIDE.

On the occasion of the fatal ride from the court house to the jail, the three desperadoes, now all under the sod, sat in the rear seat of the closed cab, facing the horses. As they drove east, Rutledge sat to the south, Jones was in the middle, and Rice, who was a left-handed man, was on the north. Opposite Rice sat Constable Boyd. When the pistols were thrown into the vehicle, Rice got one, and, after a few seconds of a struggle, holding it in his free, left hand, he placed it close to the right side of Mr. Boyd's head and fired. From the position in which the occupants were seated, and from the direction of the path of the bullet, it was practically impossible for any one to have committed the murder but Rice. Moreover, Mr. Stewart saw him fire. The murderer's confession coming on top of all this will probably remove all doubt from the minds of the most timid.

—Police Magistrate Dumble is in receipt of a communication from the firm of W. Schueller & Sons, Johannesberg, South Africa, containing information concerning the death of George Washington Bates, prospector, who claimed that he hailed from Peterborough. The cause of death was Bright's Disease. Any relatives wishing further particulars can obtain the same by applying to Mr. D. W. Dumble.

MORE MUSICAL TALENT.

Peterborough is fortunate in securing as a permanent resident another capable musician, in the person of Mr. Wildgust, of Nottingham, England. Mr. Wildgust arrived in town with Mr. J. J. Turner, about a month ago, and it is entirely due to Mr. Turner's efforts that he came to Peterborough. He is a musician of merit and rare ability, and will find a fertile field here.

On Sunday morning he sang in the Charlotte street church, and in the evening in St. Paul's, at the latter church assisting at the organ, at which he is extremely proficient.

Two Rigs Collide

Mr. J. M. Brooks, proprietor of the Palace Hotel, and wife, together with several guests, met with an exciting experience while en route to their summer cottage at Chemong Lake on Saturday evening last. While passing through the long swamp on the Smithtown road, Mr. Brooks, who heard a rig coming towards him, pulled to one side, and at the same time gave a warning cry, but too late, as the fast approaching rig was upon him, but luckily Mr. Brook's rig escaped without injury, but the approaching rig driven by a small boy, who had lost control of the horse, came to grief, and the outfit sent after in the morning. Mr. Brooks wishes to state that the aforesaid small boy, after getting his horse under control, acted very gentlemanly by coming back to ascertain if any of the party were injured.

A Splendid Illuminant

Yesterday The Times had a pleasant call from Mr. F. Sims, the genial manager of the Sicho Gas Company, of Toronto, who was on his way home from Stony Lake. Mr. Sims has a cottage at the Lake, where his family now are, and where he spent several weeks off and on during the season. Mr. Sims, while up north, placed his splendid illuminator in Burleigh Falls Hotel, Viamede and in the store at Juniper Island. Next year many others are sure to follow suit, and Stony Lake will become brilliant at night. Sicho Gas is not expensive, and it is one of the best and cheapest methods of lighting. Mr. Sims, while waiting for the Toronto train, went over to see the lift lock.

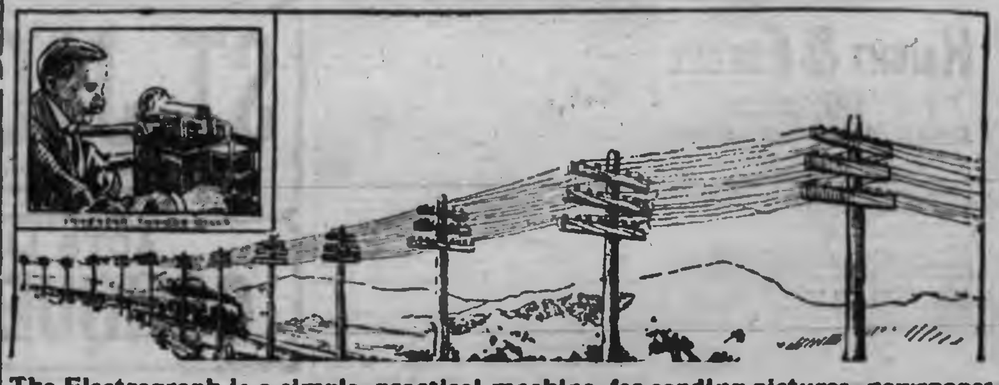
Finance and Mining

To Investors! A Chance of a Lifetime.



The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $600 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realised a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realise the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $600,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

ANNOUNCEMENT
La Mina Blanca!

50,000 SHARES AT 20 CENTS

For August Only

—PAR VALUE $1.00—

Ore in sight and value per ton makes our Shares well worth 75c. Watch them grow. Apply for terms, etc.

Nearly two years ago a party of well-known business men of Minneapolis organized the LaSonora Gold & Silver Mining Co., for the express purpose of developing the famous old Spanish Mine, La Blanca, well-known all through Sonora, Mexico, as a heavy producer of rich ore in ancient days, the company allowing only a few friends to invest with them, preferring to take the risk (if any) on their own shoulders. BUT HAPPILY THERE WAS NO RISK, and after ten months' labor and hundreds of feet of tunnels and shafts, they cut in Nov. the ore, and found below the old works what the ancients mined above them, 10 feet of very rich gold and silver ore, assaying from $24.75 to $217 per ton. Since Nov. 9 have opened the vien by drifting over 60 feet, and have now no scruples in offering to the investing public a chance to join with us is an absolute certainty.

The mine is ready for a concentrator, and for that purpose (only) we have alloted 50,000 shares.

Permanent Cure for Neuralgia

Experienced sufferers state that no remedy relieves neuralgia so quickly as a hot application of Polson's Nerviline, the strongest liniment made. Nerviline is certainly very penetrating and has a powerful influence over neuralgic pains, which it destroys almost at once. Nerviline is highly recommended for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica and Toothache. Better try a 25c. bottle. It's all right.

—The Town Council and Board of Works and Property committee will meet this evening.

—The Canadian Printer and Publisher, in speaking of the Cereal advertising says: "The large factory at Peterborough for the American Cereal Company will come out strongly in the advertising field."

—A Hamilton judge has ruled that a hotelkeeper or his servant has no right, after selling a man liquor to make him drunk or disorderly, to turn him out on the street, but should call in a constable to remove the victim. It cost a Hamilton porter $5 and costs to find this out.

—The invasion of our northern lakes by so many of our American cousins is likely to promote closer relations with our friends over the big lake, more particularly when cupid gets in his work. PRETTY CATHEDRAL WEDDING

Miss Annie Tobin and Mr. Chas. Meyette Wedded Yesterday Morning

Yesterday morning a very pretty wedding was celebrated in St. Peter's cathedral, when Miss Annie Tobin, daughter of the late John Tobin, of Ashburnham, was united in marriage to Mr. Chas. Meyette, of the same place. Rev. Dr. O'Brien performed the ceremony. The bride was very becomingly attired, and was assisted by Miss Sarah Tobin, while Mr. Harry Gainey supported the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyette will reside in Ashburnham. A host of friends wish them all happiness and prosperity.

DROWNED IN MISSOURI

Sad Death of a Bright Lad, a Recent Visitor of Peterborough

The following taken from the Cairo, Ill., Daily Telegram, refers to a fatal accident to a son of Mrs. Richard E. Gannon, of Cape Girardeau, Mo. Mrs. Gannon is a relative of Mrs. Thomas Henry, of town, and will be remembered by many who met her during a recent visit to Peterborough, where she was accompanied by two bright boys, one of whom was the victim of the accident recorded below:

The distressing news of the drowning of little Loren Gannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Gannon, of Cape Girardeau, Mo., reached this city late yesterday afternoon, and caused a feeling of intense regret in the hearts of their many friends. Full particulars were not obtainable then, and Mr. Thomas W. Gannon, Dr. James McManus and Mr. Bernard McManus, jr., at once started to drive overland to the scene of the disaster. They returned by rail at 10.45 this forenoon, accompanied by the bereaved parents and the remains of the unfortunate child.

Mr. Gannon is superintendent of the waterworks at Cape Girardeau, and yesterday afternoon went to look after some business of the plant at Sloan's Creek, near where it empties into the Mississippi. He was accompanied by his seven year old son, Loren. About three o'clock the lad was missing, and Mr. Gannon began a search for him. It seems from the circumstances surrounding the case that the boy had wandered away to a point on the creek where the water until recently, had been very shallow, and where he and the other boys had been in the habit of bathing, but a few days ago a considerable quantity of sand had been dredged out, making a deep hole. Loren was unaware of this fact, and had undressed to indulge in a play in the water alone.

The first intimation of his fate was given when some men in passing heard the mournful howling of a dog, and on searching for the cause found a little water spaniel, a pet of Loren's, lying on the boy's clothing, and making his anxiety known by his cries. Immediate search was made, and the body recovered, but life was extinct. Mr. Gannon, who was searching for his boy, soon learned of his tragic death. The little body was borne to his home, and then to the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. B. McManus, sr., and thence was tenderly laid away in the cemetery.

Galt's New Library

If Peterborough ever proposes to take advantage of Mr. Carnegie's munificence, to establish a Carnegie library, the following may be of use:

Galt is not hanging fire with its Carnegie library. The work was begun Wednesday morning. The cost is estimated at $16,000. The Carnegie grant is $17,500, leaving $1,500 for exigencies. The building will be 70 feet long, 45 feet wide at the south end and 62 feet at the north end, containing a basement and two storeys. It will be an elaborate structure of stone; the ornamentations will be of terra cotta. The stock room will have a capacity of 28,000 volumes, while the present number is only 5,000. The lecture room will seat 200 people. The foundation will be built by the Board of Public Works under the supervision of an architect, the cost to be charged to Library Fund. This will save money enabling the purchase of stone and cement from the town at cost.

THE LANDLADY'S SON

Set Right by a Boarder

Most people are creatures of habit. The person who thinks he cannot get along without his morning drink of coffee is pretty hard to convince unless he is treated like Mrs. Clara Hoffman, of Portland, Ore, treated her landlady's son. She says, "Having suffered with stomach trouble for several years I determined to discontinue the use of coffee and try Postum Food Coffee.

I carefully followed directions for making and the result was a beverage very pleasing to the taste. I induced my husband to give it a trial and soon noticed the improvement.

He complained of 'heart trouble' but as he drank coffee I felt sure that this was the cause. It proved to be so, for after having used Postum for a short time his 'heart trouble' completely disappeared.

Last year we went East and while there boarded with a private family. Our landlady complained of sleeplessness and her son of obstinate stomach trouble. It was a plain case of coffee poisoning in both. Knowing what Postum had done for me I advised a trial but the son declared he wanted none of that 'weak, watery stuff.' Well I had been making Postum Coffee for myself and husband and next morning I offered him a cup and he drank it not knowing what it was. 'Well,' I said, 'You seem to like Postum after all.' 'What,' he exclaimed, 'that was not Postum, why, that tasted fine.' 'Well, if you will learn to make it like this I will always drink it.' The next morning she watched me and I explained the importance of allowing it to boil long enough. After that we all drank it regularly and our landlady and her son soon began to get well. They continued to use it after we returned home and recently wrote me that they are improving daily."

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT!

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

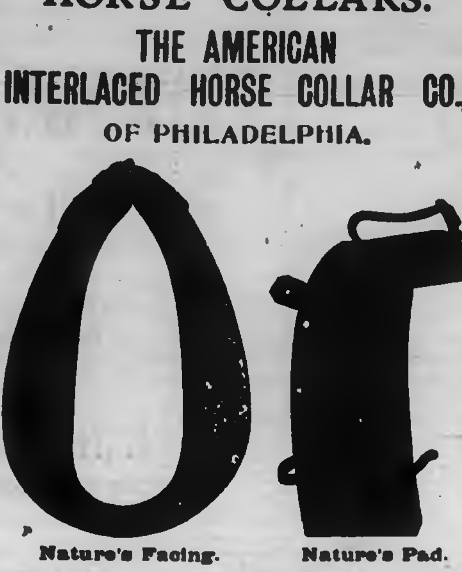
We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain. This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries, we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 32,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an Immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM HALPEN, GREEN & CO.

Wholesale Grocers, Nos. 13 S. Front St. and 17 Letitia St.
Philadelphia, December 28th, 1901.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours truly,
HALPEN, GREEN AND CO.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 12, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well.

Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

NEWFOUNDLAND AND THE UNITED STATES

The Old Provinces Chooses to Make Reciprocity Treaty with United States.

And will of Course not Join the Dominion—Newfoundland's Course Not Patriotic—Bond Returns from England

St. John, Nfd. Aug. 27 — Sir Robert Bond, the Premier of Newfoundland, is now on his way back from England, where he has been attending the coronation ceremonies, and taking part in the colonial conference; and, if a report brought by cable is to be believed, he carries with him full powers from the Imperial Government to reopen negotiations, through the British Charge d-Affaire at Washington, for the ratification of the Bond-Blaine convention. This convention was a special agreement entered into in 1890 between the late J. G. Blaine, then United States Secretary of State, and Colonial Secretary Bond, of Newfoundland. The instrument was framed with a view to admitting the Americans to free baiting and other privileges in Newfoundland waters, in return for free entry of Newfoundland fish and crude minerals to the United States markets. Canada was not included because, so it has been said the "Americans felt that to include her was to destroy themselves.' Practically, it was said, the proposed treaty would create a preference for United States fishermen in Newfoundland or British waters over Canadian fishermen. Mr. (now Sir Robert) Bond had been authorised by the Imperial Government to go to Washington to negotiate the treaty, and he acted at Washington in conjunction with the British Ambassador. As soon, however, as the terms of the draft of the convention were made known, the Government of Canada presented a most vigorous protest, claiming that the treaty, if ratified, would affect the fishing interests of Canada more injuriously and would greatly embarass Canada in carrying out fishery arrangements with the United States. The British Government recognises the validity of this protest, and declined to ratify the Bond-Blaine treaty. The convention was also objected to by a strong party in Newfoundland itself, on the ground that it made large and valuable concessions to the United States, but failed to secure corresponding concessions for the colony, so that the advantages were nearly all on one side. It was, however, believed to be the protest of the Dominion which decided the Imperial Government to refuse ratification of the agreement. Having declared himself in favor of free trade with the United States as against union of Newfoundland with the Dominion of Canada, Premier Bond, it is understood, will proceed at once to Washington with the object of reopening negotiations. While his attitude is to be regretted, and a few years may convince the Newfoundlanders of the unwisdom of their present course, Canada in the meantime cannot reasonably object to her sister colony exercising the same measure of freedom she claims herself—so long as that freedom does not interfere with Canadian rights. Such interference, however, is less likely now, seeing that the Atlantic fisheries is no longer the burning question of controversy it was twelve years ago. At the same time the Newfoundlanders should not expect that the privileges they now enjoy in Canadian waters will be transferred to the people of the United States by any treaty they may enter into.

The New South African Line Under Federal Authority

Full Text of the Contract has Arrived in Canada

Montreal, Aug. 27—The full text of the contract between the Imperial and Canadian Governments, and the Allan Elder-Dempster and Furness line for the South African service was received today by the agents of the lines interested. The vessels must be under the British flag, have cold storage accommodation and be furnished with electric light.

The contract is for five years; the vessels to carry the mail between Canada and South Africa. The vessels may coal at another Canadian port. No preference is to be given against shippers of Canadian goods and goods are to be shipped in priority according to the time received.

The rates are to be fair and moderate and at all times subject to the approval of the Dominion Government. In the event of sufficient cargo offering additional steamers may be placed in commission under the same stipulated conditions of the contract. The subsidy is £20,000 and the contract is to be considered as a Canadian one, subject to the laws of Canada and construed according to the statutes of the Dominion. The vessels may call at one or more South African ports, but so far the itinerary has not been decided. There is one thing which will be against Cape Town, via., that wheat grown in the colony, and flour milled there is distributed at half rates. The Canadian article would, therefore, be charged full rates The scheduling rates from here have not been drawn up yet. Mr. James Thom, of the Furness line, said today he was in favor of a fair living rate, neither as low as the cut rates of New York nor as high as the combine. The New York rates run all the way from ten shillings when there are plenty of berths offering to fifty-five shillings when bottoms are scarce. A meeting of the agents will be held this week to arrange rates.

THE BIG COAL STRIKE NO SIGN OF ENDING

Over Sixteen Weeks the Strike Has Been in Existence

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS LOST

The Claims of the Coal Barons and Those of the Strikers Being Weighed

New York, Aug. 27—Over sixteen weeks ago the anthracite coal miners in Pennsylvania went out on a strike because the coal barons refused to listen to their grievances. In that time the mine owners have lost $35,700,000 in the price of coal, and the miners are out $19,900,000 in wages lost through their enforced idleness. This is only a part of the cost of the strike for in round numbers it totals $66,945,000. Three classes have suffered by the strike, the miners, the consumers, of coal and the industries dependent upon steam power. The owners of the mines and the railroad companies directly interested in the transportation of coal from the mines to the points of distribution, will not be losers on account of the present suspension of business, for in the end the consumer will have to pay dear for the freight on the coal he has to buy for the next twelve months at least. One of the grievances which the miners asked the owners to consider was the low wages they earned, the best miners only making $1.60 a day. The labor is hard and dangerous and when the miner has to lay off on account of sickness or injury the pay stops and the families must suffer. The scale of wages was only one item, but an important one, in the schedule of grievances. It is only through their labor union that the men can unitedly present their case to the owners; an individual miner or a committee would not have much standing with the autocratic owners. The owners refuse to submit the causes of difference to arbitration and the result is the fuel supply of the whole country is jeopardized and all of the industries dependent upon steam power are crippled. One of the coal barons claimed the other day that the coal was theirs by God-given right, and he refused to listen to arbitration as a means of settling the strike. Pierpont Morgan, whose return from foreign countries was anxiously awaited in the hope that he would have the strike ended, positively refuses to say the word that would bring the mine owners and the miners together. In the end the government of the United States will have to adopt legislation that will make it impossible for the bloated autocrats of the country to tie up the industries and cause suffering. The cost of a ton of coal at the mines is very small when compared with what the consumer has to pay for it after the railroads compaines add the freight.

REMARKABLE PATIENT DEAD

William H. Weeks, the Colored Barber Turned White

Special to The Times.

New York, Aug. 28—William H. Weeks, a colored barber, who was until Aug. 10, a patient in Bellevue hospital, died last evening in the Manhattan State Hospital on Ward's island. Weeks suffered from a rare disease. His case attracted much attention. He was admitted into the hospital during the first part of August, and soon after his arrival began to turn white. At the time of his death he was almost as white as a man born of that color.

Weeks lived with his sister, Mrs. Butler, at 216 East Fifty-sixth street. On July 24 he married and gave the clergyman who performed the ceremony two cents and a key. This was the first indication of insanity, but he grew worse, until he was finally removed to Bellevue hospital. Soon after his arrival a white spot appeared on the back of his neck. Then other spots appeared and spread over his entire body.

A NEW FUEL

A Company Organized to Manufacture Dirt Into Fuel

Special to The Times.

New York, Aug. 28 — A company is to be organized in Baltimore to manufacture a fuel, which, it is said, will enable the people to defy the coal producers. Dr. Jacob Mellinger a prominent chemist is the discoverer. The basis of the fuel can be ordinary dirt. A careful test just made at a tannery seems to indicate its efficacy While Dr. Millinger will not make public his process of treatment, he says: "The basis of the fuel may be made of any kind, the use of which is a carriable vehicle only, the chemical compounds being virtually the heat producing factors. A chemical test shows that the fuel has 7 per cent. of moisture, 82 per cent. of organic and combustible matter, and 11 per cent of inert matter, or non-cumbustible residue." The fuel gives off no smoke, is not affected by lamp storage, and during its use the doors of furnaces and stoves can remain open.

THE OLD SHE-TYRANT

The Dowager Empress Once More at Her Old Tricks

Special to The Times.

Pekin, Aug. 27—The Empress Dowager of China, who, a cable despatch from Shanghai states, has instructed the new governor of Kwang-Si Province to try speedily to secure the death of the reformer, Kang-Yu-Wei, has, according to report, long been endeavoring to have Kang-Yu-Wei assassinated, as she regards him as one of the most dangerous men in the empire, owing to his advocacy of extreme progressive ideas. The story of Kang's influence over the Emperor, and its result in the shape of a series of edicts of a sensationally progressive character, is a familiar one. It is said that the ideas which the reformer inculcated in Kwang-Su's mind were the immediate cause of the virtual dethronement of the Emperor and the seizure by the Dowager Empress of the reins of power. After the coup which deprived Kwang-Su of power, Kang-Yu-Wei only escaped capture and death by means of the aid of the British Legation in Pekin.

VOTED WITH THE BOND

Cape Colony Premier's Virtual Surrender to the Boers

London, Aug. 28—The Cape Town correspondent of the Times says the breach between Premier Sprigg and the Progressive was dramatically made prominent in the assembly on Friday, when on a motion for filling the parliamentary vacancies, Sir John and members of the ministry, unaccompanied by any Progressives, left their plans at the right of the house and joined the ranks of the Afrikander bond in order to vote. It is pathetic, says the correspondent, to see Sir John, after being 25 years champion of British progressive interests, surrendering in the closing days of the parliamentary career to the Boers.

The labor outlook is becoming brighter, says the Times' correspondent at Johannesburg, though the increased influx of natives is hardly yet perceptible. Still, the exodus is diminishing with spring, and recruiting prospects are decidedly better. The labor difficulty existed before the war and sensible men did not expect it to disappear immediately after the declaration of peace. The extended areas of the operation of the native labor association is due to the anticipation of development of industry and a consequent increased demand for labor. The white labor experiment is showing promising results. On the larger and richer mines white men, plus machinery, can replace natives, though small mines perhaps must continue to employ cheap native hand labor.

Where is the Invasion

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 27.—The increased demand for British iron from Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, has sent up prices here. A report that orders have been received for 80,000 tons has not been confirmed by authority, but the American demand for manufactured iron and steel has sufficed to stiffen the prices, and to compensate for declining trade with India and Australia and the stagnant conditions in South Africa.

When the United States steel combination was formed, there was a general conviction among British ironmasters that there must be a defensive movement among the manufacturers here, and in Germany, and Belgium. The exports of iron and steel from these countries has been increasing steadily since December, and the effect of the United States trust is not dreaded as it was last year. The British market has not been converted into a dumping ground for United States iron and steel, and prices have risen with the increased demand for an export to the United States.

He Collapsed at a Temperance Meeting Held at Brattleboro

Brattleboro', Vt. Aug. 28—The collapse of Rev. Sam Small, the well known temperance lecturer, who was to speak for the No License Option party here last night, was by Rev. Mr. Small's own admission today due to intoxication. Mr. Small says: "I was drunk, I have no excuse to offer."

TO INTERVENE IN VENEZUELA

"Cologne Gazette" Says One of the Powers Should Control the Finances

Special to The Times.

Cologne, Aug. 28— The Cologne Gazette discussing the situation in Venezuela advocates the intervention of one or more of the three Powers — Germany, France and the United States—who have sunk capital in the country, in order to prevent the professional revolutionists from doing further mischief.

The Gazette recommends an idea which, it says, has already taken root in Venezuela, namely, the appointment of a finance committee, consisting of an equal representation of Venezuelans and representatives of the Powers, to exercise control of the chief sources of revenue, to collect customs duties on imports, and generally to administer the finances without interfering with Venezuela's status as a separate entity. The Gazette believes that Gen. Matos would, in the event of the final triumph of the revolutionists, consent to such a scheme.

To Spend $20,000,000

Special to The Times.

Montreal, Aug. 27.—One of the largest property holders in Montreal, Mr. Jesse Joseph, objects to the bonus to a fast Atlantic line, and says: "They talk of subsidy of $750,000 annually for 10 or 12 years. For $600,000 of this amount per annum, Canada could borrow, at 3 per cent., $20,000,000. If this amount were expended on improving the St. Lawrence route, we might have a forty-foot channel 1,000 feet wide, and thoroughly lighted, from the lakes to the ocean, which would be absolutely safe for the largest and fastest vessels afloat. That would mean that the large ships in Atlantic service would come to Montreal.

"To me it seems a mistake to spend such a large sum as, the subsidy mentioned, for such poor returns, when a less amount annually would help to make the St. Lawrence the finest route in the world, and an attraction to the trade of the world."

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

Ottawa, Aug. 28.—The Federal authorities have been notified by the Rev. A. W. Buckland, of the discovery on a lonely island in Hudson Bay of a lost tribe of Eskimo, a community which has been for centuries without intercourse with other representatives of the human species, and whose members never saw a white man until five years ago.

Mr. Buckland says these people live in the stone age, knowing no metals, and their homes being built entirely of skulls of whales.

The home of this strange tribe is on Southampton Island, a piece of watergirt land nearly as big as the State of Maine, lying at the extreme north end of Hudson's Bay.

These people, without a doubt, have lived there ever since pre-Columbian times, and to-day they subsist in exactly the same way as they must have done then. Having been isolated for so long a period, it is natural that they should possess many peculiarities.

A collection of their utensils, weapons of the chase and other objects was secured by Mr. Buckland, which was given, to the regret of the Canadian authorities, into the hands of private persons.

Their houses of skulls, more properly described as huts, are built by putting together the great jaws of whales and then covering them with skins. In the middle of the primitive dwelling is an elevated place, on which stands the inevitable stone lamp employed for lighting, heating, cooking, melting snow, drying clothes, etc. The lamp is nothing more than an open dish of whale oil, with a wick of dry moss soaked in it.

LIVE ON THE WHALE.

The whale is the chief means of subsistence of the strange people. They use the whale bone for many purposes, making cups and plates and toboggan like sleds. They also manufacture sleds with walrus tusks and deer antlers for crosspieces.

Mr. Buckland said it would be hard to find more daring hunters than they are.

The tribe comprises only six individuals. Its members speak a dialect peculiar to themselves and quite unlike that employed by many other Eskimos.

Mr. Buckland disbelieves the story that Andre was murdered by Eskimos. He speaks of these people (having lived months with them in their iggloo and tent), as being a charitable and kind-hearted people, a people who would take care of a white man and provide for his wants.

With regard to the instruments which have been found, they no doubt belonged to J. Burr Tyrill and his brother, who in the year 1894 nearly lost their lives near Marble Island, Hudson's Bay. Messrs. Tyrill left many valuable things behind them, among them their camera, plates, etc. Last year Mr. Buckland was asked would undertake a journey of investigation with regard to the finding of Andre, but declined, knowing it by the Norwegian Government if he would be time and money wasted.

Summit Hill, Aug. 28.—Excitement prevails throughout the Panther Creek Valley to-day. At daybreak the strikers assembled to prevent non-union men from going to work. Anticipating trouble, Major Gearhardt sent two companies of soldiers in trolleys through the mob which had col- Park to this place, and their presence prevented a possible outbreak.

Several non-unionists had been attacked, and the town was in a turmoil. The soldiers escorted the workers from the camp in Manila located, and placed them in safety on the cars, which carried them to work.

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC HAS BUILT UP THE WEST

Wonderful Development of the Country During Past Year or Two

Where No One Lived is Now Thriving Hamlets and Busy Farms —Advance of Busines and Industry

Special to The Times.

Winnipeg, Aug. 27 — Except by Canadians themselves it is not generally realised how marked has been the advance of business and industry throughout the territory served by the Canadian Pacific Railway. Where there was absolutely no population even ten years ago, flourishing communities now exist along the entire western part of its lines, and, in respect to wheat production, the region tributary to the road now promises to take a place which is of the utmost concern to the agricultural interests of the United States. The growth and development of Western Canada has been truly marvellous, and it must be admitted that this material progress has been the direct result of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Bradstreet's, in commenting on this, says the outcome is a complete answer to the criticisms so freely urged at various times in the past as to the cost of the enterprise and the extremely large contributions which were made to it, directly or indirectly, by the taxpayers of the Dominion. Without Governmental aid the building of the road between Winnipeg and the Pacific coast would have been a slow process and the settlement and bringing under cultivation of the intervening territory would have been correspondingly delayed. As it is, Canada owes the increase in population and the development of the vast natural resources of its western provinces to the Canadian Pacific, and it is also a matter of no doubt that the progress already effected in that part of the continent will be continued and increased. At the same time, there is an impression that the management of the Canadian Pacific is being influenced by the tendency of the American railroad systems towards extensions and consolidations. At present the Canadian Pacific has large interests in railroads in the United States, but they are mainly, if not entirely, feeders to its own road and do not play an important part in the railroad situation in this country, particularly since the Canadian Pacific has ceased to be a disturber of rates and has lived in harmony with the trunk lines of this country. The St. Paul, Minneapolis & Sault Ste. Marie and the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic are certainly valuable properties, and are capable of further growth in their traffic. The control of these two systems, which the Canadian Pacific acquired some years ago, is of great importance to it, and in the past enabled it to play a part in the establishment of rates and the division of traffic which was exceedingly advantageous. It would seem however, that a Chicago connection is becoming desirable to the Canadian Pacific, and Wall street hears that the acquisition of the Wisconsin Central is one of the developments planned by the Canadian Pacific management. Such a deal, should it materialise would be of manifest benefit to the "Soo" and the South Shore roads, and would certainly strengthen the position of the Canadian Pacific itself to no small extent.

REITZ NOT FOR PEACE IN SOUTH AFRICA

Will Never Return to the Transvaal Country Except with Rifle in Hand

Special to The Times.

Paris, Aug. 28.—Mr. Reitz, former secretary of State in the Transvaal Government, has handed to J. McBride, who served as an officer in the Boer army during the war, a Transvaal flag wrapped in a parcel, on the outside of which the former Minister had written the following lines:

Though many a sigh and tear it cost
For those who rose at Freedom's call,
'Tis better to have fought and lost
Than never to have fought at all.

Mr. Reitz at the same time told his friend that he would never return to South Africa unless he did so with a rifle in his hand. He characterized as damnable Lord Milner's treatment of the people confined in the concentration camp.

In an interview Mr. Reitz said he would go to the United States in September. He will leave Paris next Thursday. His sons arrived here to-night. Mr. Reitz says he will deliver lectures in America for the purpose of earning money in an honorable way for the support of his family, as he has been ruined financially by the war. He is now engaged in translating into English the history of the war which is being written by General De Wet from notes kept by his secretary, in order that the truth may be made known to all. Mr. Reitz says he will never take the oath of allegiance.

DISARMAMENT A DREAM?

The King of Italy has recently, to a certain extent, been reviving the interest excited by the famous rescript of the Czar, inviting the nations of the earth to a universal peace conference. The gathering at The Hague was a remarkable one in almost every respect, except that of carrying out the object for which it was brought about. It was followed by the outbreak of two wars, and did not for a moment arrest the process of progressive militarism among the nations. Did The Hague conference typify an unrealizable dream, an ideal condition of affairs which would be impossible if everybody agreed, but which is impossible because everybody never will agree, or did it mark a movement in line with the evolution of man, namely, the bringing of international disputes under a legal code similar to that which private disputes have been long subjected to? It must have been a very long time before private war gave place to law as a means of settling disputes. There can be no question at all but that the right of private war was originally viewed as one of the inalienable rights of the individual man. To this day an atrophied remnant exists in the duel with all its rules and punctilio. The abolition of private war has not by any means brought about a social millenium. Men dispute as bitterly and as acrimoniously as when they fought with one another to decide the issue, and the sanction of every law remains what it always was, the power to enforce it. Behind our law courts there lies the irresistible force of the organized community, ready to enforce their decrees against the possession or the liberty or the life itself of the individual who comes in conflict with them. But it is remarkable how seldom this force has to be exercised even to the most inconsiderable degree. In the city of London a stream of traffic may be flowing along with the force of many regiments of soldiers. A single policeman may, and does, arrest that force by simply holding up his hand. In a similar way the authority of the law is obeyed without one manifestation in a thousand of the physical force which enforces that obedience in the last resort. Now what lies behind the organized force which is the sanction of law. Is it not the general acceptance by the community of certain principles of justice, and the decision of the majority to enforce these principles against individuals in particular instances? No law could survive for more than a short time a general conviction that it was wrong to obey it. What lies behind the power to enforce it would be gone. Far from being among those who believe that international warfare will always remain the means of deciding international disputes, we believe that a general acceptance of certain principles of justice as applied to such disputes will gradually be arrived at. The establishment of a tribunal to interpret these principles will naturally follow and a general determination to enforce the decrees of that tribunal. Thus the reign of law in international relations will succeed in the time of war just as in private relations. It has already so succeeded. Disarmament may follow this process of evolution, it can never precede it. Those who aim at disarmament now are trying to enjoy the fruit without the trouble of cultivating the tree. Those are doing the real work who are planting the seeds of international justice in the minds of men.

MR. BORDEN'S TASK

Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservatives, is billed for a political tour in the Northwest in September.

Mr. Borden is always a man of judgment and tact, but if he comes well out of a trip of the kind at a moment like the present, he will establish a claim to the very rarest quality of these abilities.

The Conservative leader represents the policy of protection, and a party which would raise the tariff. The farmers of the west are averse to Protection; they desire the tariff reduced.

Mr. Borden's argument must be that Protection is needed to make a people prosperous, an argument which would be a telling one if business and agricultural depression existed; but on the contrary great prosperity is evident in Canada, and Mr. Borden must be prepared to explain why Canada which is more prosperous now than it used to be under a higher tariff, needs to go back to a higher tariff to ensure future prosperity.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Some of the European newspapers are slow in getting away from gullibility regarding the Boers and the British. A Vienna paper of high standing reports General Botha as saying that the British will have trouble with the Kaffirs, "the British having armed these savages to fight the Boers." Botha could not have said that. Botha knows what he is talking about when he talks of South African things. He knows that the British did not arm the natives either to fight the Boers or for any purpose.

THE CASH VALUE OF A CHILD

A Thousand Dollars the Price Fixed in New Jersey

Jersey City, N. Y., Aug. 27. — The North Jersey Street Railway Company has just settled a remarkable case arising out of a claim for damages for killing a child. The case was tried six times, the juries in the lower courts awarding from $3,000 to $5,000 damages. These verdicts, however, were set aside as excessive by the Supreme Court, which gave the weight of its authority to the opinion that when a child is killed through the negligence of a railway company the parents are only damaged to the extent of one dollar. The Company has settled with the plaintiff upon the basis of a thousand dollars damages, and the costs, amounting to about two thousand dollars more. In assessing the value of children there is apt to be a wide difference between buyers and sellers. How the Supreme Court in its wisdom arrived at one dollar as a fair valuation of a child's life it is difficult to imagine. Possibly the court was of the opinion that the only damage done to parents by killing their child is of a sentimental character and does not feel justified in awarding compensation for sentimental damages. In that case it would have been more logical to have given judgement for the company. A child is either worth something or is worth nothing in law. If it is worth anything, with all respect to the Supreme Court of New Jersey, it is worth a great deal more than a dollar.

GLASGOW'S GREAT PROGRESS

She is Giving the World an Object Lesson on Economy

London, Aug. 26.—Glasgow, foremost British cities in municipal enterprise, has just given London, slowest of all British cities, a lesson in municipal management of city-owned street railways that is invaluable.

Glasgow owns and operates all its street car lines and it does it at a profit that would make any traction company in the United States envious.

During the last two years the horse car lines have been gradually displaced and have now disappeared from the streets. Although working expenses during the transition period are not perhaps so low as they will be, yet they remained practically the same as the previous year, although the revenue increased from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000.

After $250,000 has been set aside for depreciation, the profit for the twelve months ending in May last was $1,450,000, a sum sufficient to pay a dividend of 15 per cent. on the whole capital expenditure—which is more than the capital borrowed—and to carry $250,000 to the reserve fund. What Glasgow did after paying its interest and sinking fund charges and presenting $62,500 to the general city fund, was to carry $500,000 to its reserve fund.

—The invasion of our northern lakes by so many of our American cousins is likely to promote closer relations with our friends over the big lake, more particularly when cupid gets in his work. In this connection a story comes to the Times of how a young employee of the Grand Trunk here was completely "knocked out" recently by a shot from cupid's dart. Let the bonds strengthen.

Seventy-Five St. Louisan Eats Dirt.

Newest and most singular of St. Louis sects are the dirt-eaters, a community of seventy-five men and women whose Moses is William Windsor. The dirt-eaters take every day a spoonful of dirt. Their leader believes that grit is necessary to every animal, and that because mankind will have no dirt in his food he is subject to many stomach troubles that no other animal has. So the dirt-eater goes every day to his little sack of soil. He plunges a teaspoon in and brings it forth heaped with good old earth. He washes it down with a glass of water, smacking his lips and blinking his eyes as though no morsel e'er tickled the palate of man so deliciously as dirt.

Dirt-eating is easy—when one is a child or an experienced dirt-eater. At all other times it is hard, and it must be learned. It is not easy to forget that it is dirt. It is not reassuring to think that the particles of dirt in the stomach might cause a thousand diseases now unknown because dirt has been kept out of the stomach for hundreds and hundreds of years. But after a while the dirt-eater develops his appetite. He comes to relish his dirt as a girl loves her fudge. He carries a sack of it with him, and whenever he is seized by a feeling that he is getting away from the animal plan upon which he was created, he steps into a corner and regales himself with a loam lunch. The dirt-eater is particular, though, what sort of dirt he eats. He would be no true epicurean if he were not. This article of his singular diet is technically a sand. It comes from the river bottoms, and is made up of many little particles of granite, marble, quartz, and flint well rounded with age. The chief dirt-eater has the sand collected and sterilized, and he distributes it among his followers at 25 cents a sack. The sack is small, but it holds a good deal of sand. So that daily dirt-eating after the St. Louis fashion costs about 10 cents a week.

Dirt-eating in St. Louis is six months old, and flourishes like a green bay tree. The chief dirt-eater looks happy and prosperous. The lesser dirt-eaters have every day a keen hunger for their dirt, and they bring in their friends. The dirt-eaters have pretentious quarters. They are up at Eighteenth and Olive streets, in what was until recently the home of the Merchants' League Club. Here the chief apostle of dirt-eating, Mr. Windsor, has offices and a lecture-hall. He receives visitors during the day, and every night he lectures to his class. He has now seventy-five men and women who attend his lectures and eat dirt.

This is an amusing sect, and amuses no one more than its founder. Kris Kringle himself is not a more rotund nor more rollicking character than Dirt-Eater Windsor. He is fifty. He is bald. He has the Senator Bill Mason build. He can sit in a chair and tweedle his thumbs on his stomach, which they say is the piece de resistance in happiness.

"Are you the chief dirt-eater?"

"Yes, sir, I'm the chap. I've eaten my peck a hundred times over. Dirt is good."

Then he laughs as fat men can laugh, and brings out a sack of the sacred soil.

"Have a dirt sandwich with me?"

"No, thanks."

"What are you afraid of—sandbar in the stomach?"

Then he takes a heaping spoonful and swallows it with that sly wink with which a Kentucky colonel takes his whiskey. He sends a glass of water to chase it, and heaves a huge sigh of content.

The Courtship of the Future.

He—Do you love me as much as ever?

She—Oh, more. Since I received your thought registering machine I have been so close to you!

"And I to you. By the way, where are you?"

"I'm in Naples. And you?"

"In Harlem. I came here from London. Did you hear me call you up at midnight last night?"

"Yes, dear; but I could not answer. I had just eaten a broiled lobster, and the psychic current wouldn't respond."

"Sometimes I wish I could see you—hold you in my arms."

"What nonsense! That's so unnecessary."

"But an actual kiss!"

"There! Feel that? Wasn't that nice?"

"For a vibration, yes. But I can't help feeling——"

"Nonsense! You're such an old fogy. By the way, when shall we be married?"

"The sooner the better."

"Well, I will arrange it all. We can have the ceremony performed, if you like, by the Graboni system."

"All right. And the wedding trip?"

"Oh, we can take every morning, say from eight to ten—that is, if you can get away from business."

"But wouldn't it be nice to take it together? I should like—nay, I long, actually to hold you in my arms."

"Why, you goose, don't you see that would spoil the whole romance?"—N. Y. "Life."

On His Own.

"While I was engaged to her she made me give up drinking, smoking and golf. Last of all, I gave up something on my own account." "What was that?" "The girl."—"Judge."

Mrs. O'Rourke (to charitable old Mr. Hartwell, who is giving away poultry to the needy)—Long life to yer honor; sure, I'll niver see a goose agin, but I'll think of yez!—Harlem "Life."

Mrs. Malaprop — That's young Mr. Jenkins. He's engaged to be married, you know. Mrs. Gabble—Indeed? And is that the young woman with him now? "Yes, that's his fiance."—Philadelphia "Press."

STOCK MARKETS

Relative to the Progress of the South

New York, Aug. 27—The Southern Railway Company has issued the following statement of the productive resources and industrial growth in the Southern States. It is impregnated with interest, amounting as it does very largely for the remarkable advances in southern securities, and being a factor which can be accurately and certainly expected to advance them still further. "The census bulletin shows that while in 1890 the value of farm products in the South exceeded the value of manufactured products by more than two hundred million dollars, in 1900 the value of the the manufactured products exceeded the value of farm products by more than $190,000,000. During the same period the number of persons engaged in agriculture in the south increased 36 per cent. while the number of wage earners in manufacturing increased 157 per cent., both rates of increase in the south being larger than the rates in the country at large. Other items are as follows:

Increase of capital invested in manufacturers—the South, 348 per cent.; the United States 252 per cent. Increase in the value of products—the South, 220 per cent.; the United States, 143 per cent. Increase in value of farm property—the South 92 per cent., the United States, 113 per cent.

These facts bear out the statements made in these letters showing by comparison that the South has been and is still leading the rest of the country proportionately in the march of prosperity. This condition to-day is even to greater degree than in 1900. We steadily advised purchase of all stocks whose business is conducted south of the Mason and Dixon Line. Buy L.N. Illinois Central Southern Railway T.C.I. etc. No wonder the financial magnates in the present speculation in Southern securities, have so avariciously grabbed up the offerings, in some instances comprising almost entire issues. They base their conclusions as to future values from just such studies as these outlined in this letter. In speaking of the South we of course under existing conditions commend the shares of its industries and transportation lines. We, however, are equally bullish upon issues located elsewhere in this country. Recoveries from yesterday afternoon's reactions are in order.

HAIGHT & FREESE CO.

Care of Horses' Feet.

Quarter cracks are generally occasioned either from improper shoeing, permitting the feet to become very dry by standing on hard, dry floors, paring away the bars and weakening the heels, burning the foot in shoeing or springing the shoe off at the heel. These causes produce contractions of the hoof, which becomes dry, loses its elasticity and finally cracks. In treating the object is to remove the contracted disposition in the hoof by rasping it at the quarters until an appearance of serum, after which let the crack be opened on both sides with a drawing knife, so that friction of the fractured parts may be avoided. Then rasp or cut out the bottom of that quarter which is cracked, so that no part of it may bear on the shoe. After the wall has been lowered, should the frog project below the bottom of the foot, pare it flat. By doing this the frog will grow wider and assist the foot in expanding. When the cracks occur well back at the heels it is sometimes necessary to protect the weak parts from concussion by applying a bar shoe.

Commence thinning the shoe at the centre of the quarters, carrying it off both toward the heel and toe, having the shoe light and the tear wide to obtain strong frog pressure. When the cracks occur opposite the wings of the coffin bone level the foot and shorten the toe as much as can well be done. If the crack occurs only on one side have the shoe cut off on the side of the crack so as not to extend quite to the latter. This will relieve the weak quarter of all the weight. If there are cracks on both sides of the hoof, shoe with a three-quarter tip. File or rasp the wall on both sides of the crack from coronet to ground surface as thin as can be done with safety. New growth of hoof can be promoted by keeping the hoof moist with cold water bandage around the coronet. Have the shoe removed every three weeks to prevent an excessive growth of horn.—N. J. Shepherd, in Twentieth Century Farmer.

Do not overlook buckwheat, especially where bees are kept. It will grow on poor land, and if not desired for its grain makes an excellent crop for ploughing under. It provides forage for bees at a time when many other plants are not in flower.

A West Lambton Joke.

The following joke (if it is one) comes from West Lambton:—

Public School Inspector (testing a senior Part I. class in phonics in a school-room where election day brings the children a holiday)—"Now, little folks, who can tell me what this word is?" writing "e-lec-tion" on the blackboard.

Small boy (aside) whispering to Inspector—"Eh"-"lech"-"shun."

Inspector (not satisfied that the boy recognizes the word)—"What does it bring you, my boy?"

Small Boy (in a whisper)—"Money."

The Inspector was satisfied, but he declines to name the boy.

GAYNOR-GREENE CASE

A Pittsburg Man Says Feeling is High There—Proceedings will not be Abandoned

Toronto, Aug. 26—Joseph C. Rent, of Pittsburg, thinks there may be trouble between his Government and the Canadian Administration over the Gaynor-Greene case. The freeing of those men was a most unjustifiable act, said Mr. Rent, who is at present in the city, to a reporter. "The men are alleged forgers, an offence which is plainly extraditable under international laws. By all principles of right and justice those men should have been returned to the United States."

"There is considerable feeling over the case in your section, then?"

"I should say so. Sentiment is very strong and our Government intends to carry the matter to the highest courts in London, England. The release of those men established a dangerous precedent. We might easily retaliate on many occasions, if we were so disposed." and Mr. Rent cited a number of cases where the United States had returned noted criminals to Canada within the past few years.

"There never was a clearer case for extradition," continued Mr. Rent, emphatically. "What's the use of making treaties if they are to be ignored in this fashion. I think you will find that relations between the two Governments will be somewhat strained in consequence."

—The Canadian Printer and Publisher, in speaking of the Cereal advertising says: "The large factory at Peterborough for the American Cereal Company will come out strongly in the advertising field."

—A Hamilton judge has ruled that a hotelkeeper or his servant has no right, after selling a man liquor to make him drunk or disorderly, to turn him out on the street, but should call in a constable to remove the victim. It cost a Hamilton porter $5 and costs to find this out.

Finance and Mining

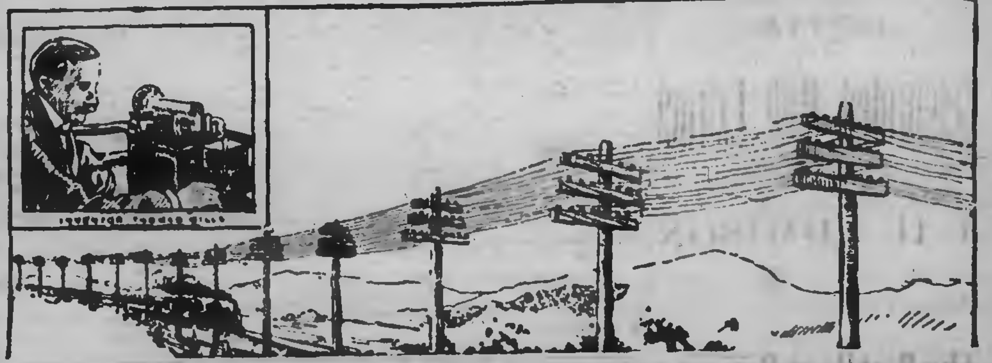
To Investors! A Chance of a Lifetime.



The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at [illegible] per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realized a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realize the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 14, 1902, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

50,000 SHARES AT 20 CENTS

For August Only

—PAR VALUE $1.00—

Ore in sight and value per ton makes our Shares sell worth 75c. Watch them grow. Apply for terms, etc.

Nearly two years ago a party of well-known business men of Minneapolis organized the LaSonora Gold & Silver Mining Co., for the express purpose of developing the famous old Spanish Mine, La Blanca, well-known all through Sonora, Mexico, as a heavy producer of rich ore in ancient days, the company allowing only a few friends to invest with them, preferring to take the risk (if any) on their own shoulders. BUT HAPPILY THERE WAS NO RISK, and after ten months' labor and hundreds of feet of tunnels and shafts, they cut in Nov. the ore, and found below the old works what the ancients mined above them, 10 feet of very rich gold and silver ore, assaying from $24.75 to $217 per ton. Since Nov. 9 have opened the vien by drifting over 60 feet, and have now no scruples in offering to the investing public a chance to join with us in an absolute certainty.

The mine is ready for a concentrator, and for that purpose (only) we have alloted 50,000 shares.

The First Steamer

Although one or two small yachts have traversed the canal between Lakefield and Peterborough, the Alert is the first steamer in these waters. She ran down as far as Nassau with a scow the other day. The canal should be opened for traffic at once.

Early Closing

The local druggists have entered into an agreement by which all stores except one will close each evening, commencing with September 2nd. This agreement is for three months only. After December 1st the stores will remain open until ten o'clock until New Year, when, it is expected, a new agreement for closing will be made.

People With Bad Breath

Generally suffer from Catarrh and should use Catarrhozone Inhaler four times daily and be cured. The pleasant scented Catarrhozone vapor spreads through every air passage of the breathing organs, and reaches the very root of the disease at once; it kills the germs, purifies and cleanses the mucous surfaces, and erradicates every vestige of catarrh in a short time.

Pure, sweet breath, free from headache, sneezing and discharge are quickly derived from the use of Catarrhozone Inhaler. Complete outfit, guaranteed to cure, costs $1.00, trial size 25c. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Successful? Nimrods

In our short notice of the fishing party which went up the canal a few days ago, the name of our esteemed fellow-citizen, Mr. Wm. Croft, was accidentally omitted. This great family journal hastens to apologize for the stupid oversight, and to assure Mr. Croft that the careless reporter has been put in irons. While the expedition, as far as fish-catching is concerned, could not be pronounced a brilliant success, (one small sunfish being the result of their combined labours), it is nevertheless annoying to have one's name omitted from the galaxy of nimrods who made up the party. We are informed by Mr. Ed. Brown that he has secured a special permit from Mr. Snowden, (who has control of the creek from the Snowden House to the river), for the entire party, and that they will shortly make another attempt to redeem their lost prestige, as worthy and successful followers of Izaak Walton.

Lindsay Getting More Power

Says the Lindsay Post:—"It is gratifying to know of the success of any any of our local industries, and particularly one in which its promoters ventured the investment of a large sum of money in the face of adverse criticism as to its success. We refer to the Light, Heat & Power Co., who have decided to duplicate their present plant, the capacity of which has become taxed owing to the demands upon it. The new plant will mean an addition of about 600 horse power. Orders have been placed for forty miles of No. 4 copper wire, one 400 kw. generator, with switch board, transformers, etc., a water-wheel of sufficient capacity, and a steel flume. The duplicate plant will be a great advantage to the town and company, and it will be so installed that both plants may be operated in unison, independent of each other, constituting a greater guarantee against any interruption of the company's lighting or power service.

Turned Her Hair Grey

Binghampton, N.Y., Aug. 28.—With the sensation of having the top of her head torn off by the draught of a swiftly moving passenger train, Miss Anna Heath of Pittsburg clung with a death-like grip to the ties of a trestle and held in her arms a three-year-old child. While playing she had found the little one in the middle of a high trestle, and before she could reach the end of the bridge a train was upon her. Realizing that both would be inevitably hurled to death, she climbed between the ties, hanging suspended over the water until the train passed. The severe fright has left its evidence in silver streaks plainly visible in her hair, which was previously all of a dark color.

THE CORUNDUM WORKS

Meeting of the Company at Ottawa on Monday Last

The first meeting of the Sapphire Corundum Company was held Monday in the Canadian office at Ottawa. The Canadian chairman, Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary of Ontario, occupied the chair. The meeting was called for the purpose of having the board meet Mr. W. Douglas Wales, a member of the English board of directors, who came to this country for the purpose of inspecting the company's properties. Mr. Wales visited his properties in company with Mr. Stratton, Mr. Taylor McVeity and Mr. J. Carling Kelly spending some days in investigation, the result of which is that his report was most satisfactory, and large crushing and grinding works will be erected for the grading of corundum on the company's properties in Peterborough county and also at Niagara Falls, NY., on the American side.

The board of directors for Canada are: C. D. Warren, president Traders' Bank; Hon. L. Brodeur, speaker House of Commons; H. G. Carrol, solicitor-general for the Dominion; and Dr. Adam T. Shillington, Ottawa.

Mr. J. Carling Kelly is president of the company in London, England. Mr. Taylor McVeity is solicitor for the Company in Canada.

OUT OF SORTS

Pleasant Way to Drive Away the Blues

A food that will bring back health and rosy cheeks to the sick as well as please the palate of the healthy is a pretty good food to know about. A lady in Minneapolis says, "I am such an enthusiast upon the subject of Grape-Nuts that I want to state a few instances of its value that have come under my personal experience.

I was taken ill with a serious stomach trouble, so ill that the slightest movement caused me pain and could take nothing into my stomach or retain even medicine or water. I had been two days without nourishment when my husband suggested trying Grape-Nuts.

The nurse prepared some with warm water, sugar and cream and I took it hesitatingly at first until I found it caused me no pain and for ten days I took no other nourishment. The doctor was surprised at my improvement and did not resent my attributing the speedy cure to the virtues of Grape-Nuts. He said he had a common record of a teething baby who grew rosy and fat on the same diet.

Grape-Nuts are so dainty and delicious that it appeals to the whole household and when either husband or I feel generally 'out of sorts' we try confining ourselves exclusively to the food for a day or two with the happiest results.

For a year I have had for a neighbor a delicate girl—an epileptic—when I first knew her she was a mere shadow weighing 70 lbs. and subject to fearful attacks having as many as 12 and 16 convulsions in a day. At such times she took no nourishment whatever. She had never tried Grape-Nuts and as any food seemed to increase her trouble at such times it was difficulty I persuaded her to try it. But I told her of my experience and induced her to try a few spoonfuls.

The taste delighted her and ever since she has made it her chief article of diet. The result has been wonderful; her improvement is the subject of remark with all who know her. The attacks are less frequent and violent and she has gained 30 lbs. since last November and her family attribute her improvement solely to Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

IMPROVED EDUCATION

While the people of Ontario have been nursing the idea that their system of education was the best in the world, they have been allowing even slow old England to get ahead of them. The trouble with the Ontario school system is that it is in politics, and the moment one points out a defect in the system, or suggests an improvement, the government press, as in duty bound, with one accord declares that the schools are attacked for political reasons. And the schools go on in the rut.

There is now a party of British educationalists in Toronto, and the Mail tells us that it has learned from these gentlemen that while Ontario says, Let every boy attend school as long as his parents can send him, the London County council says, Let every boy receive as much education as he shows capacity for, and if his parents cannot afford to send him we will send him and the state will foot the bill.

Dr. R. P. Scott, secretary of the Headmasters of Secondary Schools association, thus explained the London idea to the Mail:

That the primary education for a boy who is to go to the university should be the same as that for a boy who will not go beyond the public school is to Dr. Scott as absurd as the proposition that the foundation for four-storey building should be the same as that for a cottage. In each case the one should be deeper and broader than the other in proportion to the weight to be carried. From Dr. Scott's standpoint therefore an educational system such as that of Ontario appears a great unwieldy machinem rather than a living organism, growing, expanding and changing as the needs grow and change.

Dr. Scott argues that if in a community 95 per cent are children of ordinary capacity, four per cent talented children and one per cent possible geniuses, each class should be looked after. The 95 per cent should be provided with proper schools, but four per cent and one per cent have equal claims for recognition, because it is by cultivating its brains that a nation lives.

This capacity catching machine is continually on the lookout for bright boys, whether the sons of peasant or patrician, and when it finds one who will repay a training better than that of the public school it drafts him at once across into what is termed a secondary school, where the foundations are laid on a broader plan than in the public school. And if in this secondary school he shows still higher capacities he is sent to the higher secondary school, and so on to the university. The primary, secondary and higher secondary schools all, in a sense, overlap, in that they may have in them boys of the same age, who study the same subjects, but they study them more thoroughly in the two latter than in the former. In other words, one school lays the foundation for a one-storey, the other for a two-storey and the third for a three-storey building. Boys do not finish one school and go to the next, but are drafted across sideways, so to speak, as they show capacity for the broader training.

The tests are now scholarship examinations, held annually by the joint scholarship board, and the winners of scholarships are drafted out to the broader school. There are three examinations, the minor for pupils not over thirteen years of age; the intermediate for those not over sixteen; and the senior for those not over nineteen. If the parent is in each case able to send his son to the school for the terms of years necessary to complete the course, he is allowed to do so, but if not, taking the London County council as a type, the state steps in and does so. The minor scholarship carried with it free education and £10 per year, but only given to the children of those parents who have incomes of less than £150 per year. The intermediate scholarship carried free education and £20 per year where the parent has less than £400 per year, and the senior scholarship carried a free university course and £90 a year, where the parent is unable to bear the expense, which is ascertained by inquiry into each case. At present London has about 2,000 scholars enjoying the minor scholarships; 160 the intermediate, and 25 the senior, which carries with it the university career.

This plan of trying to find the bright youths of the community was, Dr. Scott thinks, expanded by Cecil Rhodes into a capacity-catching machine for the empire by his plan of scholarships. From both combined Dr. Scott looks to see good, even great results in the future of the empire.

—The date of the holding of the Horticultural Society's annual show will be changed, so as not to conflict with the Central Exhibition.

—While driving a couple of weeks ago, Mr. Adam Hall and Mr. Geo. Howson were thrown out of the rig by the horse shying. Mr. Hall escaped without injury, but Mr. Howson was badly shaken up, and is still lame.

—Dan Whitung's annual excursion takes place from Bridgenorth to Lindsay this year on the steamer Kenosh on Wednesday, September 3rd. The boat leaves Bridgenorth at 8 a.m. calling at Chemong station at 8.30, Chemong village at 8.45, and Gannon's Narrows at 9.15 o'clock.

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT!

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

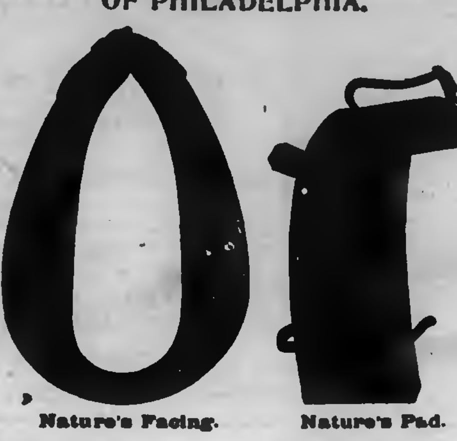
We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries, we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 33,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
166 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

FROM HALPEN, GREEN & CO.

Wholesale Grocers, Nos. 13 S. Front St. and 17 Letitia St.
Philadelphia, December 28th, 1901.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours truly,
HALPEN, GREEN AND CO.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1899.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well.

Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

Argentine Interests to Join Hands With Big Chicago Trust--Fxporting Rails to Chicago.

Agreement Among English, Aemrican, German and Belgian Firms — Grumblers in South Africa Regarding Official Delay.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 29.—The Times says Edward and William V. Casey, of Buenos Ayres, with the assistance of British capital, are organising a combine of refrigerating, packing and cattle growing interests of the Argentine Republic, with a view to joining hands with the Chicago packing trust to control the meat trade of the world. They believe when such an amalgamation has been effected the United States and Argentina will be able to dictate the price of food wherever a human family depends on pork and beef for sustenance. Edward Casey to-day said: "The United States is at present the worfdU's butcher, but the increasing demands of its own population and the's butcher, but the increasing de- eventually force the American packers to devote themselves exclusively to the home market. Then will be the time that Argentina will demonstrate the inexhaustible productiveness of its virgin soil. Whether we ally ourselves with the American trust or not, we shall certainly give it a fight for a profitably British market, which is dependent on North and South American meat for nine months of the year. The chilled meats of Argentina and the United States can be sold in Great Britain at a profit of 60 per cent., while the demand constantly exceeds our capacity."

AGREEMENT AMONG STEEL MILLS.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 29.—A Berlin correspondent says the combination of American and English steel and iron exporting interests continues to supply food fur discussion. The announcement is made that English, American, Belgian and German steel mills havearrived at an agreement to export steel rails to Canada,of which United States and English works supply 116,000 tons; and German and Belgian works 58,000 tons.

SOUTH AFRICA GRUMBLERS.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 28.—A Cape Town correspondent complains of the working of the martial law at the docks, where the British Commissioners and others arriving yesterday while their permits were checked by a single official. This system, says the correspondent, is likely to add hundreds weekly to the number of South African grumblers.

DEPRECATING THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 29.—It is felt in Vienna, says the Times' correspondent, that the systematic deprecation of the Triple Alliance in the Italian press is a more serious matter for Austria than Germany, because Germany's relations with Italy are predominantly commercial and free of disturbing elements and hereditary resentments. On the other hand, but for the Triple Alliance, Austro-Italian relations would consist of an armed truce, difficult to maintain and subject to frequent interruptions.

SWORD OF HONOR TO ST. REMY.

A MOVE TO END STRIKE EIGHT COLLIERS WORKING

And with Few Miners, Three Thousand Tons. Troops to Scene of Trouble

Special to The Times.

Pittston, Pa., Aug. 28.—The chances for an early resumption at the mines in the anthracite coal fields, on the same scale as they were operated previous to the strike of the mine workers, are not very good, according to the outlook here. The superintendents of the coal companies practically admit that at the present rate there is no chance of getting all the collieries open for many weeks.

Several of the collieries have been started, but not one is working at anything like its capacity. At each of these mines it is said by the companies, they have only about one hundred men at work, but they are getting more every day.

The collieries working are the Ford, of the People's Coal Company; the Von Storch and Dickson, of the Delaware and Hudson; the Cayuga, Dodge and Hampton, of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western in this city; and the Avondale of the latter company at Kingston.

The average tonnage of these mines in normal times is 1,000 tons per day, while at present they are turning out only about three hundred tons. While an average of 3,000 tons of mined coal is being turned out in the district daily, the averages of 1901 when there were but 178 days' work during the year, was 232,000 tons a day.

A MOVE TO END STRIKE.

Hazelton, Pa., Aug. 28.—A call was issued here to-day for a general convention of the People's Alliance of the six anthracite coal counties and the cities at Philadelphia and New York, to be held in this city on September 4. It is said a movement will be set on foot to terminate the miners strike.

TROOPS AT SCENE OF TROUBLE.

Huntingdon, W. Va., Aug. 28.—Major James K. Verlander, of the second battalion West Virginia National Guard, has received orders from Governor White to proceed at once with the three companies of the State militia here, and with one company at Milton, to the New River coal fields, where trouble is imminent. The companies have been assembled and will leave at once on a special train. Serious trouble is predicted.

A FIGHT TO THE END.

New York, Aug. 28.—George F. Baer, President of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, after a conference with J. P. Morgan and the heads of other coal carrying roads, made this statement concerning the miners' strike in the anthracite region:

"I only wish to say that the issues of the strike are just the same now as when the strike began; they have not changed in the least. Nothing has occurred to alter the policy of the operators, and we see no reason it should be changed.

"We will give no consideration to any plan of arbitration or meditation or to any interference on the part of any outside party. We have announced that as our decision from the start, and to that we will adhere. Our policy was fixed from the very beginning, and it will remain so until the very end.

"As far as the situation at the mines is concerned, we consider it is improving daily. While I cannot say there has been any decided break in the ranks of the miners, I know that each day sees more of them applying for work. They are getting restless as the days go on, and they see we are not weakening, and they are anxious to get back to work."

METHODISM'S GREAT NEED

How a Prominent Methodist Pastor Regards Century Fund

The Times has been requested to publish the following letter from Rev. Dr. C. S. Eby, of Alliston, which appeared in the Christian Guardian, commenting on the effect of raising the Twentieth Century Fund in England as well as Canada: In Canada when we saw the prospect of material results from such a movement, in England, we said, "Go to, we also shall have a Twentieth Century Fund, and we, too, shall therewith have a revival." When the financial part was formally launched in the Metropolitan church, Toronto, we had a multitude to greet the effort of great ecclesiastical officials and financial magnates, pillars and leaders in church, and one-fourth of the million was promised. When the spiritual revival, that was to sweep the country was to be inaugurated in the same Metropolitan, every great official and lay magnate was speedily conspicuous by unanimous absence, and the whole left in the hands of the —Epworth League! At a time when the colossal strategy of a Lord Bobs and the mobilizing genius of a Kitchener were needed our war department entrusts the campaign to a detachment of promising infantry. And results?

He adds—"A revival is not to be had when it is ordered. But start a revival right, stick to it, and God only knows the mighty results of it. But it will never come on a large scale by running the forces on lines of "Little Methodism" * * * Methodism needs no new theology or revelation, but a consciousness of her hidden works in light of modern conditions, but for the times must be consecrated leadership."

SERPENT MONSTROSITIES

Found in a Field Near Stratford - One Had Two Heads

Stratford, Aug. 29—While working in a field of oats today, Mr. J. Sallifant, Victoria street, killed a garter snake with a fork. No less than thirty-six snakes were prematurely torn and one of these was shown to the Herald today. The remarkable thing about it is that it has two heads, with four eyes, two mouths and two tongues. The two heads are joined together and are at right angles. Another of the young ones had a head at each end.

The old snake was three feet long and the young ones were all alive although they have since departed this life. The snake with two heads will be kept by Mr. Sallifant as a curiosity.

POTATO ROT PFEVALENT

Growers in Western Ontario Report a Com Failure

Reports that popatoes are rotting badly in heavy land are coming in different parts of the country. The tubers are so plentiful a crop that the general effect may not be serious, but some growers report an almost complete loss of their crops. Others say one-third and one-half of their crop has rotted. The apppearance of the disease in the potato has been very sudden. In patches ten days ago not at all affected the potatoes are not now worth digging. The disease first affects the inside of the "Murphy" and many seemingly sound potatoes are discovered to be worthless when cut open.

FURIOUS BEES

Stung Leroy Mitchell and His Son Until Neither, It is said, will Recover

Rochester, N.Y., August 28. — With their bodies swollen out of all proportion, Leroy Mitchell and his son, of Allen's Hill are lying at the point of death as the result of stings by infuriated honey bees. While Mitchell and his son were reaping oats their team became infuriated and dashed among several dozen beehives, overturning them right and left.

The maddened occupants swarmed forth and thousands of the bees fairly covered the men and horses, stinging them countless times. One of the horses got away, but its mate fell to the ground and died in a few minutes.

The cries of the men brought assistance from the farmhouses. With burning straw the bees were driven off and their victims rescued. Physicians say neither can live.

GOOD TIMES FOR CANADA

Member of a New York Stock Exchange Firm Talks of Good Times Ahead in Canada.

Toronto, Aug. 28—"I can see good times and increasing prosperity for this country for many years yet,' said Mr. John M. O'Loughlin to a reporter today. Mr. O'Loughlin is a member of the firm of O'Loughlin & Ruddell, of New York, the latter being a member of the New York stock exchange. Mr. O'Loughlin who lived in Toronto about 25 years ago is paying a visit to his native city. Although he likes New York he has unbounded faith in the future of Canada." "Have no fear of bad times," he remarked. "so long as Manitoba is increasing her acreage of wheat every season. Seats on the New York exchange are now worth $75,000; on the Toronto exchange they will be worth $50,000 before many years." Mr. O'Loughlin spent a number of years in the west, having been in business in Winnipeg, but did not like the severe climate. He maintains, however, that if a man can stand the weather, there is no better place in the world to make money. He takes a great interest in the New York Canadian society, of which there are several hundred members, and predicts a memorable gathering at its annual dinner this fall, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. G. W. Ross will be invited to give addresses.

KEENE.

Walter Bryce, of the public school teaching staff, Toronto, is home for a few days.

A great many young folks enjoyed the moonlight on Friday night. It is said that the harvest moon has exceptionally fine qualities, but it excelled itself on that evening. It is to be regretted that such a lamentable misunderstanding occurred between Keene and Harwood parties. It is understood it arose from the smallness of some private parties whose feet were larger than the crowd warranted and therefore had not room enough to dance.

J. Weir has gone to Toronto for a term in the Normal.

T. Stockdale is spending a few days in the village, or rather in the village to the north of us.

Ed Porter is renewing acquaintances here.

Wall Wood, of Ashburnham, returned home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Andrews, of Toronto, are the guests of Miss Hope this week.

The boys of Villiers and Westwood intend running a private excursion up the lake on Friday afternoon.

Ducks are reported very scarce just yet.

Mrs. (Dr.) Laurison, of Richmond, Hill, is spending a few days with her parents here.

HOPES TO CLEAR HIS SON

General Molineux Appears Confident of Final Victory

New York, Aug. Aug. 28—"I know positively that my son, Roland Burnham Molineux is innocent of the crime of murder. I do not say this because I am his father. I say it because I have the absolute proof in my possession. It is that knowledge of the innocence of my son that has kept me in such excellent health as you find me enjoying today."

Gen. Edward L. Molineux, hale and hearty in spite of his 70 years and the burden of his trouble he has borne made this statement today. His son is in the Tombs awaiting his second trial for the murder of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams. It is more than ten months since the court of appeals granted young Molineux a new trial. During that time the old gentleman has been hard at work on his son's case. Gen. Molineux has played the part of a private detective and has worked up the evidence through which he says he will establish the innocence of his son beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Gen. Molineux has sepnt his fortune in his son's behalf. The new trial is set for the first Monday in October next.

LAWN SOCIAL IN OTONABEE

Held at the Residence of Mr. S. Deyell— A Huge Success

On Wednesday evening a most successful and pleasant lawn social, given by the Ladies' Aid of Bethel church, was held on the charming grounds of Mr. Samuel Deyell, Otonabee. An ideal spot and an ideal night, combined, made the entertainment delightful in every sense of the word. The residence and grounds were decorated with Chinese lanterns, and plants, having a very pretty effect and the illuminations could be seen for miles. The refreshments were most elaborate and fully sustained the reputation the ladies of Otonabee have for anything in this line.

During the evening several solos were most pleasingly rendered by Mr. Robt. McCamus, Keene, and Mr. Bert Deyell, Otonabee. The proceeds which were over $100, are to be donated to the parsonage, Ashburnham.

The Ladies' Aid are to be congratulated on their success and the splendid crowd which was assembled. A number from town drove down and are loud in their praises of the evening's entertainment in romantic Otonabee.

WEDDING BELLS

Nuptials of Miss Helen I. Haggart and Mr Albert E. Mutton

The residence of Mr. Jas. E. Haggart, Sherbrooke street, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, when his only daughter, Miss Helen J., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Albert E. Mutton, of London.

The solemn and impressive marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of George street Methodist church. The bride was becomingly attired in a brown travelling suit, carried white roses, and was given away by her father, and was attended during the ceremony by Miss Lottie Scott, wearing fawn Venetian, and carrying pink roses. Mr. W. T. Cartner ably supported the groom.

A dainty and elaborate wedding breakfast was served at the conclusion of the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Mutton left town on the nine o'clock G.T.R. train, where a crowd of enthusiastic friends and well-wishers had gathered to see them off.

Many expensive and handsome presents testify to their popularity.

SON WAS INDICTED BEFORE HIS OWN FATHER

A Queer Case in Orangeville—Father Tries Son

Orangeville, Aug. 28 A peculiar state of affairs exists in a law case in Orangeville, in which Dr. Dalton McCarthy is charged with assaulting Mrs. D. J. Mungovan, wife of the editor of the Dufferin Post, who formerly lived in North Easthope. The accused is the son of Judge McCarthy. The latter, in order to avoid appearance of unfairness asked Judge Chadwick of Guelph to preside at the trial but received, at the last moment a telegram announcing that gentleman's illness.

The telegram came just when the case was to be tried. County Attorney McKay had intended asking for an adjournment owing to the absence of Mrs. Mungovan who could not be found by the law officers, but an adjournment on this ground was unnecessary. It was concluded to call upon the accused to plead to the indictment for aggravated assault. Mr. McKay handed the indictment and depositions before the Police Magistrate to Judge McCarthy. Mr. Dalton McCarthy, the accused stood up, and father and son faced each other—the father on the bench, the son the person mentioned in the grave indictment! The father read the indictment and the son was asked to plead to it. One of his lawyers pleaded "not guilty" and the son was asked whether he elected to be tried by a jury or summarily. Again the lawyer answered for the son and demanded a summary trial. There was then an adjournment for a week, an order for bail was made, and the brief proceedings were over.

INDIAN RIVER.

The harvest weather at present is favorable and the farmers are taking every advantage of it.

—Mr. Martin Guerin, of Ashburnham has moved back to his old residence at Indian River for the winter months.

—Miss Lucy O'Lean, of New York, is visiting her friends in this part. She is accompanied by her cousin, Miss Curran. The two young ladies seem to be delighted with their trip.

—Mr. Bert Kelly is teaching in School No. 1 Douro. He opened it on August 25th.

—The Indian River grain market is open and Messrs. Hall & Duff are doing a rushing business.

—Two young ladies of this locality while returning from a neighbor's house on Sunday evening got a severe fright by a gentleman lover, and when asked why he did it the answer was, "I thought you knew it was Tom."

COBOURG'S VAIN WAIL

The Town Wants a Railway to the Back Country

Cobourg Sentinel-Star:—Some time ago the Town Council gave a franchise to Mr. J. Alex Culverwell for electrical purposes. He claimed he was to bring to us manufacturing establishments and give us cheap electric lights. He spent some time here in getting this franchise having also obtained a similar grant in Port Hope and right of way in several of the townships. We do not hear a word of this now, and, of course, his franchise has run out. But we notice that Mr. Culverwell has been in communication with the councils of Seymour and Campbellford in reference to power, and also in trying to bring a furniture factory to the latter place. He also appears to have acquired a large interest in the Healey's Falls power. We cannot see what idea Mr. Culverwell could have in coming to Cobourg with a scheme if he could not, or did not, intend to carry it out. An electric railway from Cobourg to Harwood, and along Rice Lake to Hastings and Campbellford and to Havelock would be a paying concern, and a great benefit to the townships back, and also ot Cobourg and Campbellford, and we are surprised that capitalists do not try to get such a road built. Cobourg is cut off from the back of Hamilton and other townships, and the trade goes largely to Peterboro and Hastings. If we wish to visit Campbellford or Hastings we have to go by rail to Peterboro or Belleville and that is a very roundabout way. Electricity is to be the motive power of the future, and the sooner we wake up to the fact the better it will be for the town and country."

The Times would suggest that the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway be reopened. What proved to be an insurmountable difficulty a few years ago in the bridging of Rice Lake, is no longer so. Under modern systems of bridge building it is now a comparatively easy matter. The road is in running order between Cobourg and Harwood, and is graded between Hiawatha and Peterborough and the only serious difficulty would be the bridging the lake. The Canadian Pacific wants at outlet on Lake Ontario, and if Cobourg took the matter up with this progressive company the road might be rebuilt, and thus afford our sister town the desired railway connection with the country to the north.

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

London, Aug. 28—Eighty thousand men of the British army have left South Africa for their homes since June 6, embarkations having begun five days after the declaration of peace on the 1st of that month. Arrangements have been made for the return of 37,000 more before Sept. 17, sailings of this batch having begun on Aug. 2.

New York, Aug. 28.—Regardless of what may or may not be done by Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, with whose recent work in Arctic seas he is far from satisfied, William Ziegler, whose hope it is that an expedition under his auspices shall be the first, to reach the pole, admitted yesterday that there is now far on its way a second expedition equipped by him. It has orders to proceed independently of Baldwin, and to make every possible effort to reach the long-coveted goal.

This is what is known as the Frithjof expedition, which was until yesterday supposed to have been sent out merely as a relief for Baldwin, but which Mr. Ziegler admits is in reality practically distinct, and in itself fully equipped for a dash for the pole.

Baldwin declares in his messages to Mr. Ziegler that he is still undaunted, but it begins to appear that it will either be a race for the pole between him and the new leader, or that the glory will be for another than himself if the pole is reached.

Who this new leader is Mr. Ziegler declines to make known, contenting himself with the statement that he is a perfectly competent man in whom he has great confidence.

"All I will say now is that the man I have selected is not Mr. Champ, who is not an explorer, and does not want to go," said Mr. Ziegler.

William S. Champ, Mr. Ziegler's former secretary and confidential adviser, left here on July 1 to take the Frithjof to Camp Ziegler, on Alger Island, Franz Josef Land. Since leaving Tromsoe, Norway, Champ has had time to make the trip to Camp Ziegler twice over, yet not a word has been heard from him, and Mr. Ziegler is becoming anxious, on this account. He is now thirty days overdue. He has cabled orders to Baldwin that unless Champ reaches there by September 15, he shall take the America and go in search of him.

ZIEGLER DISPLEASED.

Mr. Ziegler is distinctly displeased over the scanty and unsatisfactory reports he has received from Baldwin since the explorer reached Norway on August 1.

"Although I have tried repeatedly, I have been unable to get any definite information from him," he said yesterday. "When Champ returns to Tromsoe I shall learn all the facts, and then, at any rate, it will become clear why Baldwin's coal ran out.

"I am extremely sorry that there has been any apparent setback, but it has not altered my determination to have the Pole located. I shall get there if it is possible to reach it, and I am not by any means entirely dependent upon Mr. Baldwin.

"The fact is," said Mr. Ziegler, with a smile, "I generally have two strings to my bow, and this case is no exception. On the Frithjof with Champ I sent a fully equipped party, entirely independent of Baldwin, and gave them explicit instructions that if they did not find Baldwin they were to go right on on their own account and try to do what he had evidently failed to succeed in.

"If everything has gone well with the Frithjof expedition, it is now safe in Franz Josef Land, where it will remain for the winter and in the spring make a dash for the Pole.

"Baldwin, who is still lying in Norway, will receive orders to go north next spring to Camp Ziegler, where he will remain during the following winter. He will then either go further on to relieve the other expedition or make an effort on his own account to reach the Pole in the spring of 1904."

Vancouver, Aug. 28.—"Everybody is talking quarts in Dawson now, and the rush at the mining recorder's office is remarkable," said Mr. Thos. Scott, formerly a business man of Cordova street, who returned on Saturday from Dawson, coming down by the Amur.

"Quarts is being opened up in all the sections. Claims are being opened out to such an extent that some of the creeks are becoming unrecognizable. A large amount of new mining business is being done. Times generally in Dawson are rather quiet, for the demand for labor is not large, yet the business is there and the camp is good."

Dawson papers received by the Amur this morning state that the month of June marked the greatest activity in the history of Klondike quarts operations. All previous showings for a single month were easily outdone.

During June ninety-two quarts claims were recorded at Dawson office alone. Renewals numbered seventy, the most of which represented large work. Representation fees were paid on eleven claims.

Recent Dawson arrivals claim that there is a movement of Yukon capital toward quarts properties, and it is fast becoming the fad of those with money to develop them. The more development work that is done the more favorable become the prospects.

The opinion of A. F. George, who has just come from Dawson, was that the quarts mines would be producing big revenues long before the hydraulic and placer operations shall begin to decline.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous services.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

TROUBLE IN SETTLING THE SOUTH AFRICAN MATTERS

Boers Will Demand Rifles to Protect Themselves From Natiyes--Good Work of Generals.

The Work of Pacification One of the Most Gigantic Efforts Ever Undertaken by the British.

London, Aug. 27—In discussing the present South African situation and the work of pacification the Post says: The Boer commanders, Gen. Louis Botha, Gen. De Wet and Gen Delarey have thus far evinced remarkable discretion and circumspection since their arrival in Europe. They have been in a difficult position, for, on the one hand neither gratitude nor common decency would permit them to repel the effusive demonstrations of admiration and sympathy with which they have been welcomed in Holland and Belgium while, on the other hand, they owe an obvious duty to their fellow countrymen, whose present and future interests will be materially furthered by the maintenance of friendly and even cordial relations with the British authorities.

It would be easy for the generals to chill the amicable and obliging disposition of the Colonial Office and it would be just as easy for them, by too eager an acceptance of overtures, to forfeit the confidence of their fellow Boers at home. There is reason to think that Gen. Lucas Meyer, whose premature death is deeply regretted by his comrades in arms, might have found his influence in South Africa somewhat impaired by his generous willingness to receive the proofs of esteem and of good will which were showered upon him during his recent sojourn in London. The three Generals whom we have named have exhibited a more cautious, but not a churlish, reserve, and, should they continue as they have begun, they should be able to secure important concessions from the British Government without for a moment jeoparding their hold upon their own people.

Of the concessions which a maintenance of a judicious attitude would assist the representatives of the Boers in gaining from the Colonial Office, three or four will at once suggest themselves. A despatch which we printed last week from Johannesburg, shows that it is a matter of vital import to the protection of women and cholدren on the Boer homesteads, not only that the adult male whites should be suffered to bear arms, but that the blacks throughout South Africa, including especially the Zulus and the Basutos, should be deprived of modern weapons. The Colonial Office may be reluctant to take such a step if it be true that the services of the tribes just named were enlisted on the British side during the war, but in no other way can the Boers be conciliated and convinced that the outrages committed by the blacks are not connived at by the British Government. According to the despatch which we have mentioned the whites are unanimous in the opinion that it is necessary to disarm every native in South Africa.

There is another matter with regard to which the Boer Generals might find it for their advantage to meet Mr. Chamberlain half-way. We refer to the list of so-called "undesirables" who have been excepted from the amnesty proclamation. It is obvious that the relatives and friends of such excepted persons will constitute so many centres, not only of irreconcilaible opposition to British rule, but also of suspicion and disaffection toward the Boer Generals who have striven to bring about a restoration of peace and order in their distracted and almost ruined country. The task of pacification will be sensibly lightened if the sentence of banishment imposed on most of the "undesirables" be remitted at the personal request of the generals now in London. In the third place, the amount and promptness of the pecuniary aid to be given by the British Government for the purpose of restocking Boer farms, and also the method of distribution adopted, will naturally be affected by the spirit in which the advances of Secretary Chamberlain are met by the representatives of the Boers.

We hope it is true that Mr. Chamberlain has offered to give Gen. Louis Botha, Gen. De Wet and Gen. Delarey seats in the Council which is to be appointed to advise the Governor of the Transvaal and Orange River Territories while these occupy the status of Crown Colonies. In no other station could they render so effective service to their countrymen.

Turned Her Hair Grey

Binghampton, N.Y., Aug. 28.—With the sensation of having the top of her head torn off by the draught of a swiftly moving passenger train, Miss Anna Heath of Pittsburg clung with a death-like grip to the ties of a trestle and held in her arms a three-year-old child. While playing she had found the little one in the middle of a high trestle, and before she could reach the end of the bridge a train was upon her. Realizing that both would be inevitably hurled to death, she climbed between the ties, hanging suspended over the water until the train passed. The severe fright has left its evidence in silver streaks plainly visible in her hair, which was previously all of a dark color.

Guilty of Sedition

Manilla, Aug. 28—Frederick Dorr, proprietor, and E. O'Brien, editor of the newspaper, Freedom, who have been convicted of libelling Benito Legarda, were to-day sentenced each to undergo six months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $1,000.

The hearing of the charges of sedition against the editor, the manager and proprietor of the same paper ended today. All were convicted. Sentence was reserved.

Both cases will be appealed to the Supreme Court.

Successful Industries

Says the Lindsay Post:—"It is gratifying to know of the success of any any of our local industries, and particularly one in which its promoters ventured the investment of a large sum of money in the face of adverse criticism as to its success. We refer to the Light, Heat & Power Co., who have decided to duplicate their present plant, the capacity of which has become taxed owing to the demands upon it. The new plant will mean an addition of about 600 horse power. Orders have been placed for forty miles of No. 4 copper wire, one 400 kw. generator, with switch board, transformers, etc., a water-wheel of sufficient capacity, and a steel flume. The duplicate plant will be a great and it will be so installed that both plants may be operated in unison, independent of each other, constituting a greater guarantee against any interruption of the company's lighting or power service. advantage to the town and company.

THE PASSING OF PAUL KRUGER

Mr. Kruger has abdicated a throne which has no longer an existence, and General Botha has been nominated to succeed him. Strictly speaking, Mr. Kruger will have no successor. Even had Oom Paul not wrecked the Boer republics it is difficult to conceive of any one succeeding to the unique position he occupied among the Boer people. Botha or somebody else might have succeeded him in the presidency of the Transvaal republic, but it is highly improbable that anybody else would have become the uncrowned monarch, half patriarch, half despot that Mr. Kruger was to his countrymen. Under the new conditions prevailing in South Africa there is no room for Krugerism, which is practically dictatorship. General Botha will no doubt exercise an enormous influence among the Boers and there is reason to believe that his influence will be beneficial. When the good time comes in which the British Government will feel justified in establishing representative government in the new colonies General Botha's influence may be paramount in Boer politics. But the veto power vested in the representative of the Crown will always prevent him exercising his power in the tyrannical fashion that Mr. Kruger followed. By that time, too, there will be a new factor in Transvaal and Orange River politics to reckon with. There will be a substantial vote of British origin and the rising generation of Boer voters will be better educated than their fathers were. The new system will no doubt develop its own difficulties and evils; no political system is perfect; and some of the results may be worse than the effects of Paul Kruger's stern paternalism. But at least the new system will not tend to produce despotic tyrants. Under the King's reign the people of the Transvaal and Orange River Colonies, be they Boer or British in origin, will for the first time in their lives govern themselves.

The formal resignation of Mr. Kruger marks the passing out of active public life of a man whose character had in it many of the elements of greatness and a man whose patriotism was second only to his egotism.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND THE TRUSTS

President Roosevelt seems to be very much in earnest in his campaign against the trusts. In his very able and interesting speech at Boston he pointed out that one of the difficulties in dealing with the subject arises out of the possibility of conflict of jurisdiction between Federal and State legislative authority. He said: "At present we have really no efficient control in a big corporation which does business in more than one State. Frequently the corporation has nothing whatever to do with the state in which it is incorporated, except to get incorporated, and its actions may be taken in entirely different communities— communities which may object very much to the methods of incorporation in the State named, I do not think you can get action by any State action by all the States, that will give us satisfactory control of the big trusts or big corporations, and the result is at present that we have a great powerful, artificial creation, which has no creator to which it is responsible. The creator creates it, and then it goes and operates somewhere else and there is no interest to the creator with it. It does not do anything in that State. It does not do anything where the creator has power—it operates outside entirely."

It is one thing, however, to diagnose a disease and another thing to prescribe a remedy. The President believes that legislation can be enacted that will make the control of Congress over the trusts real, but he does not indicate upon what lines the legislation is to be framed. He evidently does not relish the idea of Congress having to deal with the matter at all, regarding such action as a necessary, but regrettable interference with State sovereignty. Mr. Roosevelt would prefer to see the State Legislatures enacting legislation on similar lines to regulate the trusts and commercial corporations generally, but has no hope of any such united action. One of the wisest provisions of the British North America Act is the clause which gives the Dominion Parliament exclusive legislative control over the trade and commerce of Canada. This does not prevent the Provincial Legislature from incorporating companies for commercial purposes, and, as the President points out, in the case of the United States, these companies frequently do business outside the boundaries of the provinces in which they are incorporated, but they cannot escape the general legislative authority of The Federal Parliament. We imagine Congress has somewhat similar powers, but there seems to be a greater reluctance to interfere with State rights across the border than there is to interfere with provincial legislative authority in Canada.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Barbados, the most densely populated of the West Indies, escaped serious damage by the volcanic convulsions which wrought awful havoc on Martinique and St. Vincent, but it is suffering terribly from smallpox. In an island having less than 200,000 inhabitants, there have been about 1,900 cases of smallpox in the last six weeks. That is, one victim of the pestilence out of every hundred persons on the island, and if the epidemic should continue a few months at the same rate one in every twenty would be stricken. Misfortune has never been a stranger to the West Indies, but that beautiful chain of islands has been more than commonly distressed in the past ten years. Industrial depression, and extreme poverty have been widely prevalent through that period.

In an interview with a Citizen reporter Mr. W. P. Ryrie, of the Ryrie Paper company, Toronto, says that Canadian pulp wood makes the best paper in the world, that we have a monopoly of the best quality of pulp and that the federal government should take steps to prevent it being shipped out of the country and to cause its manufacture in Canada. Mr. Ryrie is himself a large manufacturer and his views agree with those of the manager of the Lawrentide Pulp and Paper company as set forth in a paper read before the Canadian Forestry Association last spring. In addition to the benefit to Canada of having the great paper manufacturing industry centralized here, action by the federal government would compel the United States government to place paper on the free list and open the seventy million market to our manufacturers.

No Comparison

The sense of proportion is an excellent thing, and an old soldier who writes to The Globe upon the subject of the recent defeat of Lord Methuen makes a very good point as to some of the comments passed by certain newspapers. He signs himself as "one who saw this brave brigade from start to finish on October 25, 1854," and writes as follows:—

"I read the account of the Boer charge on General Methuen's rear-guard taken from The Standard newspaper, London, and published in The Globe of the 18th. The Standard compares the ride of the Boers with the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava. The editor of The Standard must know well there is no comparison. General Methuen's column or field force of all ranks was only about 700 or so. The Light Brigade, with the brave Cardigan leading, went right through the centre of thirty thousand Russians, with sixty guns, in a commanding position, blazing away on the brigade as they were advancing down to the guns, where they had to put the Russian gunners out of the way. They tried to get away the guns, but found it impossible. Every man had to fight for his life back through cavalry and artillery, as they all closed in on them with the intention to capture or kill what was left on the retreat. The brave Cardigan, who obeyed his chief's order to advance and take the guns, knowing well at the time it was impossible, was about the last to return. From the time the brigade started until what was left returned—about 180 when the roll was called after the return—twenty minutes would cover the time. Bear this in mind: it was every man for himself to fight his way back, as they were all broken up in the rush at the guns by the Russian artillery firing on the whole, Russian and British, at the same time. Every volley carried off as many Russians as British. This statement is correct about the Russians firing on their own men. It was a surprise to see any return from the dreadful artillery fire they got from the Russians."

Brave, dashing and skilful Delarey's charge certainly was; it was exactly such a rush as many times before in the history of war has carried cavalry to victory. To persons accustomed to think of the Boers as unable to attack, accustomed also to think of the day of cavalry as over, it must be a surprise to read of such a charge. But the Boers have been moulded by two years of warfare into excellent soldiers, able to attack as well as to defend, and the loose formations of modern war offer peculiarly good opportunities to good cavalry trained to shoot from the saddle. To compare such a charge to the Balaclava charge, or to Von Bredow's "death-ride" at Vionville, when a few German squadrons shook the whole French line of battle and saved their overmatched infantry, is absurd, as my old soldier correspondent convincingly points out.

In this connection a personal reference to Lord Methuen may be introduced, showing him in a light possibly unfamiliar to the majority of newspaper readers. Lord Methuen, as is indicated in the paragraph which is quoted, is a man of a deeply devotional turn of mind. The quotation is from The Daily Graphic, and is as follows:—

"A largely attended public meeting was held last evening at Corsham (near Bath, in England)—the home of Lord Methuen—for the purpose of passing a resolution to be sent to the wounded General, expressing his fellow-townsmen's high admiration for his distinguished services to the country during the South African campaign, and their sincere sympathy with him in being wounded. The Rev. J. D. Dunlap, vicar of Corsham, presided. The following telegram was sent:—

"'Dunlap, Corsham. To Lord Methuen, Klerksdorp: Enthusiastic public meeting. Resolution sincere sympathy and speedy recovery. Shall sing your hymn Sunday.'

"Mr. Dunlap explained that the hymn referred to was 'Lead, Kindly Light,' Lord Methuen's favorite hymn, which he promised his Lordship should be sung in church the first Sunday in every month. He had received a letter from the General speaking of the comfort it gave him to know that he was remembered on the first Sunday in the month, and also in their prayers. The resolution was carried by acclamation, and it was also agreed to telegraph to Lady Methuen informing her of the terms of their message to her husband."

Some dispute has arisen as to Lord Methuen's nationality. It cannot be appraised with absolute accuracy; the family was originally Scotch, it is said, from Perthshire, and has for many years been settled in England, living in Wiltshire, at Corsham. Lord Methuen's grandfather was elevated to the Peerage in 1838; prior to that he had for many years been M.P. for his county. It may be added that Lord Methuen pronounces his name in three syllables, with the accent on the first.

Breach of Promise Ethics.

If a man engages himself to marry a woman, and, on the understanding of that engagement, induces her to abandon, for, perhaps, a lengthy term, the chief business of her life—securing a suitable husband—and subsequently breaks his engagement, he inflicts just as real a cash wrong as if he had engaged her as governess and not paid her any wages. For a term of perhaps two years, possibly the best years of her life, he has kept the woman from the quest of a husband, and thus materially injured her matrimonial prospects. It is right, therefore, that he should pay compensation.—"Bulletin," Sydney.

—No, Maudie, dear, the man who makes the loaf is not necessarily a loafer.

STOCK MARKETS

Market Expanding—Your Market Opportunity Right Now

New York, Aug. 28—Dealings are on the increase; inquiry for stocks is improving each day and investors will have to become accustomed to accepting a lower rate of interest upon their stocks and investments; investors are already commencing to realise that fact. In these letters some little time ago we called attention to the lower rates of interest that were coming about, and to the fact that even the savings banks were reducing their rates all over the country, and that it would only be a short time when further reductions would be necessary. Low interest rates cause higher prices. Stocks that are earning in excess of their present dividends will sell according to their earning power and figure at a low interest return at at that. The coming in of the public has already commenced; consequently reactions will be frequent; they are good for the market, and advantage should be taken of them to buy. Purchase on reactions whether you have stocks on hand or not; the big fellows are all on hand now, fresh from their vacations, and things will be brisk in speculative circles. The boom is getting well under way, so we urge you to participate as speedily as possible. The early bird catches the worm in Wall Street as elsewhere; you can purchase with reasonable safety the trunk lines and southern shares. All the roads running in Texas are booked for higher prices. The corn and wheat carriers are almost a moral certainty if bought at present prices. The medium prices issued are on the eve of making much higher prices. The coalers are, as we announced for the past week, in these letters, right on the bargain counter, and should be purchased immediately.

The industrials have yet to make a pronounced and substantial advance, while as yet the tractions have not had the move due them. The entire market looks splendid, and it is our opinion that the proper thing to do is to buy it.

Today's market fell off in volume business, owing to the holiday; tomorrow is likely to do likewise. An erratic see-saw market with inclination to advance was the story of the day. Good buying was particularly noticeable in Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, Erie and Atch. Southern Pacific hung close around 77. C.F.,1 after an early decline rose 4 points.

There was good buying of sugar. Balance of industrials were steady to strong; but the entire market. Should reaction set in slightly, buy a little more. The market shows every indication of going higher the coming Prosperity of the railroads is title of tomorrow's letter. Money closed 3 1-2 and 4 p.c. Salas 670, 200.

Lee Low's Misapprehension.

Lee Low Wung, secretary of the Chinese consulate in New York, in the course of a conversation recently, spoke of some of the ideas prevalent in his country, as follows:

"In China it is generally supposed that a man's brains are located in his stomach, and the fatter he is the more his wisdom is deemed assured. Of course, there are many people in China who know that a man's brains are in his head, but they cheerfully assist in maintaining the jolly fiction of corpulent greatness.

"I began to learn English in China when I was 15 years old, under the instruction of Dr. Malcolm of Shanghai. I had begun to study it in secret by myself a year before, but it was too much for my unaided efforts.

"The word wind, being used in two senses, gave me as much trouble as anything else. For a long time I was under the impression that in England and America clocks and watches were filled with air to keep them going. I was curious to see this operation of winding the clock, and my disappointment when Dr. Malcolm explained the mystery was very acute."

It was a New England parson who announced to his congregation on a recent Sunday: "You will be sorry to hear that the little church at Jonesville is once more tossed upon the waves, a sheep without a shepherd."—Boston Christian Register.

Successful ? Nimrods

In our short notice of the fishing party which went up the canal a few days ago, the name of our esteemed fellow-citizen, Mr. Wm. Croft, was accidentally omitted. This great family journal hastens to apologise for the stupid overwight, and to assure Mr. Croft that the careless reporter has been put in irons. While the expedition, as far as fish-catching is concerned, could not be pronounced a brilliant success, (one small sunfish being the result of their combined labours), it is nevertheless annoying to have one's name omitted from the galaxy of nimrods who made up the party. We are informed by Mr. Ed. Brown that he has secured a special permit from Mr. Snowden, (who has control of the creek from the Snowden House to the river), for the entire party, and that they will shortly make another attempt to redeem their lost prestige, as worthy and successful followers of Izaak Walton.

Turned Her Hair Grey

Binghampton, N.Y., Aug. 28.—With the sensation of having the top of her head torn off by the draught of a swiftly moving passenger train, Miss Anna Heath of Pittsburg clung with a deathlike grip to the ties of a trestle and held in her arms a three-year-old child. While playing she had found the little one in the middle of a high trestle, and before she could reach the end of the bridge a train was upon her. Realizing that both would be inevitably hurled to death, she climbed between the ties, hanging suspended over the water until the train passed. The severe fright has left its evidence in silver streaks plainly visible in her hair, which was previously all of a dark color.

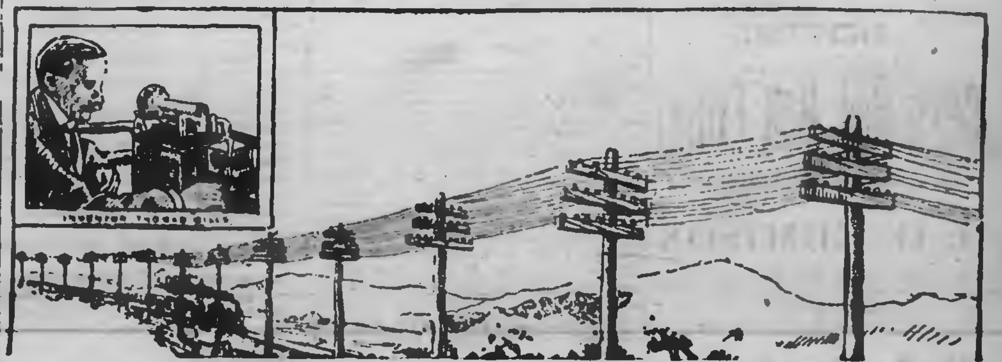
ToInvestors! A Chance of a Lifetime.



The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.
Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.
No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at [illegible] per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realised a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realise the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

ANNOUNCEMENT
La Mina Blanca!

50,000 SHARES AT 20 CENTS
For August Only
—PAR VALUE $1.00—
Ore in sight and value per ton makes our Shares sell worth 75c. Watch them grow. Apply for terms, etc.

Nearly two years ago a party of well-known business men of Minneapolis organized the LaSonora Gold & Silver Mining Co., for the express purpose of developing the famous old Spanish Mine, La Blanca, well-known all through Sonora, Mexico, as a heavy producer of rich ore in ancient days, the company allowing only a few friends to invest with them, preferring to take the risk (if any) on their own shoulders. BUT HAPPILY THERE WAS NO RISK, and after ten months' labor and hundreds of feet of tunnels and shafts, they cut in Nov. the ore, and found below the old works what the ancients mined above them, 10 feet of very rich gold and silver ore, assaying from $24.75 to $217 per ton. Since Nov. 9 have opened the vien by drifting over 60 feet, and have now no scruples in offering to the investing public a chance to join with us in an absolute certainty.

The mine is ready for a concentrator, and for that purpose (only) we have alloted 50,000 shares.

Mr. Grant has a national reputation as a track bicyclist, and has accomplished the wonderful feat of riding down the steps of the White House, at Washington.

To Go Into Camp

The 14th Midland Field Battery will go into camp at Cobourg on Tuesday next, and there should be a full representation of all ranks when the men go under canvas. The 14th is the only battery in the Canadian Artillery to be equipped with the latest quick-fir- to be a most successful one.

We again remind subscribers for stock in the Peterborough Hockey Club, of the meeting in the Council Chamber this evening. The election of directors and the transaction of general business will come up before the meeting, so that it is desirable that there should be a large attendance of subscribers.

A Handsome Store

Messrs. H. LeBrun & Company have taken possession of the handsome new store which has been fitted up for them next door to the Bank of Toronto. The plan of the new oval glass windows was prepared by Mr. John E. Belcher, and were made in England. They are a credit to Mr. Belcher, and add much to the beauty of the store. Mr. LeBrun will be "at home" to his host of friends and customers on and after to-morrow.

Incorporation of Chemong

A meeting of the cottagers and those interested in the incorporation of Chemong as a village, was held last night in the Chemong Park Hotel. The meeting was fairly well attended, about twenty being present.

It was decided to make application to the Government for a franchise.

Officers were appointed, and a committee formed to look after the interests and business of the property holders.

With Typhoid Fever

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Scott, of Water street, in the serious illness of their young daughter, Miss Lulu, who was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital on Wednesday evening, suffering from typhoid fever. She had just recovered from an attack of diphtheria, and to be again stricken so soon, is most distressing. Her condition last night was as favorable as could be expected.

Thirty Years Ago

The Lindsay Post publishes the following item, which it credits to the times: "We have much pleasure in recording the fact that Mr. C. Peters, of this town, and Mr. Robert H. Dennistoun, son of Judge Dennistoun, have passed a successful examination before the Law Society for the fourth year. Mr. Dennistoun has for some time been studying in Lindsay." This item appeared in this paper under the head of "Peterborough Thirty Years Ago," and is, therefore, hardly current news.

Miss Jones' Voice Greatly Improved

A startling improvement is noticeable in Miss Jones' singing. Her voice is stronger, and sounds clearer sweeter than before using Catarrhozone, which is a wonderful aid to singers, speakers and ministers. Catarrhozone Inhaler insures absolute freedom from Colds, Coughs and Catarrh, clears the nose and throat and prevents hoarseness and huskiness. Catarrhozone makes the voice brilliant and enduring, and is uncommonly well recommended by Prima Donnas, members of Parliament, Lawyers, Doctors and thousands that use it daily. That Fishing Party

A member of the party, whose exciting record was chronicled in these columns the other day, says that the name of Mr. R. H. Bradburn was omitted from the list. We humbly apologize to Mr. Bradburn for the injustice done him, which, we beg to say, was quite unintentional. Mr. Bradburn was along, armed with a fishing rod and several parcels of bait. The fact that the party landed only one small sunfish, does not in the least reflect on those who took part in the day's sport. It was not a good day for fishing. Besides, the bait for external application only. Mr. Snowden informed the Times yesterday that he has issued a permit to Mr. Bradburn, as well as the other members of the party, to fish in the creek. They can get bait at the Snowden House.

Good Rifle Shooting

At the matches of the Ontario Rifle Association at Long Branch, the Peterborough boys have done well. In the Canada Match Sgt. A. E. Jackson scored 40 against 47 high, and won $4.00. In the Canadian Club match Pte. Jos. Gibson made 46 as against 47 high, winning $12.00. Pte. Geo. Fitzgerald made 39 in this match winning $3.00, and amongst the tyros shooting, Sgt. Jackson won $3.00 more. In the Duke of Cornwall and York Match, as against 34 high, Sgt. Jackson made 30, as did Pte. Geo. Fitzgerald. Sgt. D. Cameron and Pte. Jos. Gibson each made 28. This qualifies all four for the second stage of the match.

LINDSAY MAN'S SUICIDE

Norman McMurchy, a Lindsay Barrister Drowned

Mr. Norman A. MacMurchy, barrister and clerk in the office of the Clerk of the County Court, was found drowned in the Scugog River, a short distance above the town, Wednesday afternoon. Deceased had been missing since Friday. His pockets and clothing were loaded with stones and his death is clearly a case of suicide. The deceased gentleman was no doubt in unsound mind when he committed the deed.

LAKE AND RIVER NOTES

The Traffic on the River Continues Good—The Summer Resorts

Mr. Louis Spry and Wm. James are in camp at the mouth of the river.

Miss Mabel Dusautelle is up from Jubilee Point for a day or two.

—The Rice Lake resorts have had a good season, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather. Jubilee Point has had the best season in its existence, while the Rice Lake House, at Gore's landing, kept by Capt. Harris, has had a similar experience. Idyl-Wild is also being fairly well patronized.

—The Government dredge will complete the opening of the new channel into Rice Lake, at the mouth of the Otonabee river, about the end of the month. This is what is known as the eastern channel. By the latter route the distance to points eastward on Rice Lake will be shortened two miles and three-quarters. The dredge has been steadily employed there since August 4th, and is doing a first-class job. The new channel will lie from eight to nine feet deep at low water and about 125 feet wide.

—The steamboat traffic on the Otonabee River and Rice Lake waters continues brisk and the returns of Lockmaster Collins will likely show that there were more lockages during the season 1902 than for many years previous. The fine weather of the past few days has had an additional stimulating effect upon the passenger trade and the Rice Lake route has been well patronized. The splendid service that the North Star has built up has been thoroughly recognized by the travelling public and each day the Star has a fair sized crowd of passengers.

Lieut. Mortimer, of Engine Company, No. 2, Rochester, N.Y., is a guest at Jubilee Point.

Mr. Hugh McCormick, who is in charge of the unusually large drive belonging to the Rathbun Company, consisting of 290,000 logs, is being complimented by the steamboat men on the river for the excellent time made from the Locks to the Point. The advance is already in the Trent River and the tail in Rice Lake. Mr. McCormick has the steamers Beaver and Rainbow engaged in towing, and is making a record trip.

Mr. James Edwards, one of the popular chefs with the Rathbun Company, came up the river Wednesday, en route to Trenton, where he was first in the employ of the company.

Messrs Frank Cassan and Dan McCorry are guests at Jubilee Point.

Among the guests at the Point are Mr. Frank O'Connor and wife, Buffalo; Mr. Robert Palen and Carl G. Whattler.

But time cannot complain;
For soon there will Be Days enough
To make a Week again.

The Times is requested to state that Ald. Edgcumbe has notified the members of the Legal committee that he would call them together next Tuesday evening, for the purpose of discussing the clauses in the Grocers' Early Closing Bylaw, when an opportunity will also be given for hearing the objections to its adoption, if any who are interested care to appear at the meeting.

A Surprising Discovery

You will be surprised in trying Catarrhozone to find how quickly it cures cold in the head. The agreeable penetrating vapor traverses every air cell and passage of the nose, throat and lungs. In one breath it carries instant death to the millions of germs infesting the respiratory organs and breaks up a cold in ten minutes.

A trial will convince you that Catarrhozone is the most potent, satisfactory and pleasant cure for Colds, Catarrh, Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma and Lung Trouble. Complete outfit, $1.00; small size 25c. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

CURE YOURSELF! [illegible]

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT!

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

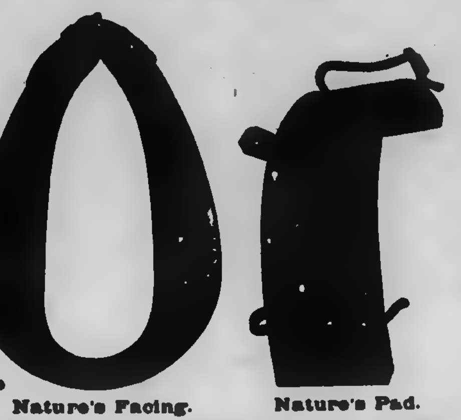
We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries, we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 percent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing. Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads [illegible] New Article, but is the True and Tried Material PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 32,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an Immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

The American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg. Pa.:

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

Yours truly.

FROM A ROUGH RIDER.

Coatesville, Pa., December 18, 1900.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1900.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well.

Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

STRIKERS BAYONETTED BY THE SOLDIERS

Encounter Between Troops and Miners in Pennsylvania Coal Fields

Coal Shipped in Large Quantities—Shipments from the Schuylkill Region are Increasing Daily

Special to The Times.

Tamaqua, Pa., Aug. 29.—In an encounter between the troops and strikers at Lansford this morning, Captain W. H. Heim, of Company "K," 12th Regiment, was slightly injured, and half a dozen strikers were bayonetted by the soldiers in the fracas. Major Gearheart, in command of the troops here, says that he will appeal to the military authorities to put the Town of Lansford under martial law.

As early as daybreak the troops were busy quelling disturbances and protecting non-union men on their way to work. At Summit Hill about double the usual number of men availed themselves of the protection of the soldiers and went to work.

The rumor that more men than usual were reporting for work spread through the lower part of the valley like wildfire, and in a short time the streets were almost blocked with people. When the corner of Center and East Bertsch streets were reached, the cars stopped to allow several non-union men to get off. As the men stepped to the ground the mob made a rush for them. A half dozen soldiers sprang off the car, and with levelled rifles forced the strikers back and made a passageway for the non-union men.

MOB CLOSED IN.

When the soldiers returned after escorting their charges to a place of safety, the mob commenced to close in around the cars. The strikers were in an ugly mood, and when ordered to disperse, merely yelled louder and pressed closer. As Captain Heim was about to jump from a car he was seized by the legs and thrown to the ground. A half dozen privates who followed him were roughly handled.

With gun butts and bayonets, the soldiers forced the crowd back. Many of the strikers stood their ground and would not move until the soldiers jabbed them with their bayonets. In the melee several of the strikers were knocked down, while others suffered slight bayonet wounds.

As has been the case for the past few days, the troops were jeered wherever they went. The officers repeatedly admonished the crowds not to insult or molest the militiamen, but their words had but little effect.

LARGE SHIPMENTS

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 29. — While mine operators and officials of the United Mine Workers say that the strike situation in the anthracite field remains unchanged, it is evident that there is greater activity at present in the coal regions than at any time since the strike began. Coal is being shipped from various sections of the field daily, and several washeries are known to be in operation.

It does not follow, however, that any of the companies are cutting coal. When the strike was declared a large quantity of cut coal was left beneath the surface, ready for the breakers. According to Miners' Union officials, it is this coal that is now being brought to the surface by the special deputies, foremen and others employed about the collieries during the progress of the strike. It is also said that the big coal carrying companies are drawing on their reserve supply to satisfy the more pressing demands.

The Pensylvania Railroad, through its agents, has been selling and shipping small quantities of coal almost daily since the strike began, securing its supplies from some 60,000 tons in storage. This supply has been exhausted, however, and what little coal the company is now sending out comes from the mines of the Susquehanna Coal Company at Nanticoke, where small quantities are being brought to the surface and sent to market daily.

The Reading Company, according to its sales agents, has old no coal since the strike was declared, except in a few cases, where coal taken from stocks on hand was parted with to help out certain mining interests on the line, and to supply one or two charitable institutions.

On the other hand, reports from the Schuylkill region, where the Reading Company's mines are, are to the effect that the shipments of anthracite from that section are increasing daily Within the past few days five hundred cars of hard coal have passed through reading. It came from the washeries and storage yards at Landingville and St. Clair.

The washeries established along the Schuylkill River in Northern Berks and Lower Schuylkill counties are in operation day and night, and as high as 100 cars are shipped in a day.

What is considered a significant move on the part of the operators is the return of many mules from pasture to the mines. Hundreds of mine mules were taken to Lancaster and Chester counties soon after the strike began and put out to graze. These animals are now being shipped back to the coal regions.

ACCUSED OF FURNISHING BOERS WITH SECRET CODE

Treachery Charged Against Tewater, German View of Monroe Doctrine

Vienna Newspapers Represent Roosevelt's Speech as Meaning That Britain Must Quit Canada

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 30.—"In his speech in the Cape Colony Parliament," says the Cape Town correspondent of the Times, "ex-Colonial Secretary J. W. Sauer delivered a scathing tirade against the loyal Dutch, who he alleged deserted their own people and deserved all they suffered. Dr. T. W. Smart, ex-Commissioner of Public Works, replying, repudiated the attempt made on the other side of the House to represent the rebellion as the result of martial law, instead of vice versa. In a latter despatch the correspondent says that as a result of grave charges brought by innuendo against Mr. Tewater, an official, by Dr. Smart, Mr. Merriman moved the adjournment of the House. Dr. Smart thereupon made a definite charge that Mr. Tewater, at the outbreak of the Boer war sent a secret Ministerial code book, of which there were only three copies, to Steyn at Bloemfontein, where it was subsequently found.

DEATH OF MAHDI OF SAHARA

Head of Semi-Religious Semi-Military Fraternity—and Anti-Christian Feelings

Special to The Times.

Jerba, Tunis, Aug. 28.—The death of the Sheikh Mohammed es-Senussi is an event of some importance. Senussi was the acknowledged head of a powerful semi-religious, semi-military confraternity, whose headquarters were in the Borku oasis of the Sahara, Morocco to Mecca and from Lake Chad to Darfur. The founder of the sect, who preaches a return of the "primitive doctrines" of the Koran, was Mohammed Sidi, father of the Sheikh whose death is now announced. Mohammed Sidi, a descendant of the Prophet, through Fatma, gained a great reputation in Fez some seventy years ago, for sanctity. He performed the pilgrimage to Mecca and afterwards founded a convent at Alexdria. His doctrines not finding favor with the Sheikh ul-Islam, Mohammed Sidi retired to the Libyan desert. At first he settled near Bengazi, in the Peninsula of Barca, afterwards removing to Jerabub, near the oasis of Siwa. At Jerabub he gathered together a large following and when he died, in or about 1860, the Senussi organization was firmly established. His son, who cherished bitterly anti-Christian feelings, had largely extended the power of the Brotherhood, which now has converts scattered all over North Africa. During the seventies he removed further into the Sahara to the oases of Kufra, and entirely closed the desert to European travelers. He acquired a predominant influence over the ancient Sultanate of Wadai, which he prevented from falling under the sway of Mohamet Ahmed, the Soudan Mahdi. With the Mahdi's movement Senussi would have nothing to do, and he contemptuously rejected Mohamet Ahmed's offer to make him (Senussi) one of his Khalifas, or lieutenants.

HOLY WAR PROCLAIMED

About the time of the Fashoda crisis the Senussi Sheikh made an important movement southwestward into the Tripoli hinterland. When, in March, 1899, the Anglo-French agreement defining our respective spheres of action in North Central Africa was made, it was found that the Senussi country law entirely within the French sphere. For a time the campaign against Rabeth kept the French full engaged, but ast year the forces of the French and the Senussi came into conflict in Kanem, the kingdom in which the Senussi is reported to have died. For many years the followers of the Senussi had spoken on their Sheikh as El Mahdi—"the guided one," who is expected to complete the work left unfinished by the Prophet—and from the reports which have reached France of the fighting in Kanem it would appear that the Senussists have proclaimed a "holy war." It is, however, impossible as yet to estimate the strength of the Senussi army, or whether the brotherhood intends at this time seriously to challenge the advance of the French. At present the Colonial Ministry in Paris has given orders for all aggressive military movements to cease. Judging from past experience it might be expected that the Senussi would remain quiescent if left alone. They have, however, largely extended their influence westward during the past two years. Kanem, which lies northeast of Lake Chad, being the last country to fall under their sway. In 1899, when Kanem was traversed by the Foureau-Lamy and Jolliand missions, it was free from Senussisism. Since then Mohammed es Senussi and the Sultan of Wadai have placed themselves in closer relation with the Sultan of Turkey, and through the valley of Tripoli there exists a safe and easy means of communication—and of importing warlike stores. If the new head of the brotherhood—who will be either a son or brother of the Sheikh just deceased—were to choose to begin an active campaign he would not lack for men, money, or munitions—and the Arabs of the Sahara are among the finest fighters in the world. Not only would the French position on Lake Chad be threatened, but also it might be found that the newly-established British posts in Borna would be in danger. Indeed, the whole of North Africa would be involved in the conflict. Nothing is known of the personality of the Senussi leaders, and this ignorance greatly adds to the perplexity of the situation.

THE ILLS OF WOMEN ARE TOO OFTEN WRONGLY DIAGNOSED BY OUR PHYSICIANS

A Lady Who Would Not Submit to an Operation is Cured by

Paine's Celery Compound

It will prove interesting and comforting to thousands of women to know that almost all their troubles and diseases are due to a poor condition of the nervous system.

ills, irregularities and diseases peculiar to women, such as nervous headache, nervous prostration, anaemia, loss of memory, irregular and suppressed periods, hysteria, bearing down pains, poor and watery blood, neuralgia, general weakness and other troubles can only be cured by a specially compounded medicine like Paine's Celery Compound.

This wondrous medicine of nature, popular with tens of thousands of our women, carries its rich nutriment and healing virtues to the blood, nerves and tissues, giving power and new life to inactive and diseased organs. No other medicine can so quickly banish and permanently cure painful and obdurate feminine ills; no other medicine ever devised can so truly keep the nervous system, blood and bodily organs in a healthy condition to fulfil their important duties. Mrs. A. Saunders, Brancondale, Ont., says:

"I was a great sufferer from severe attacks of neuralgia in the left ovary At times the attacks were so acute that I thought I would lose my reason. Several doctors treated me, and I was a patient in the hospital. I obtained no relief from medical treatment. The doctors said unless I had the ovary taken away I could not be cured. Instead of submitting to the operation I used Paine's Celery Compound and I am thankful your valuable medicine cured me. I feel like a new woman and would like all to know what your medicine has done for me."

PETERBOROUGH'S BIG LABOR DEMONSTRATION

With Splendid Morning Afternoon and Evening Features

IMMENSE STREET PARADE

In the Morning with Sports in the Afternoon and Concert at Night In the Opera House

The splendid demonstration on Monday next, Labor Day, under the auspices of the Trades and Labor Council of Peterborough, and local Labor Unions, is attracting much attention, and is sure to be worthy of the great interests it represents.

The Committee who have charge of the details are doing everything possible to make the affair the best and most successful ever held in Peterborough. Large crowds are expected in from the surrounding towns and villages. The following is the programme for the day:

IN THE MORNING.

There will be a trades and labour street parade at 10 o'clock. This parade will be representative of the several occupations followed by those taking part. A prize will be awarded and given to the union making the best representation in the parade.

IN THE AFTERNOON.

In the Driving Park a magnificent programme of novel and interesting attractions, which are attractions, will be presented, including sports, and games for which valuable prizes will be given; a lacrosse match between the Peterborough and Uxbridge teams and other sensational and entertaining features. These will include the celebrated New York fancy dancers who will give an unique exhibition of the latest and most fetching Terpsichorean novelties. During aerial acts surpassing in thrilling interest anything ever previously seen in Peterborough, will also be given and the marvellous Musical Team will be heard in a repertoire of high-class vocal and instrumental music and vaudeville. The 57th Band will be in attendance all the afternoon.

The price of admission to the driving Park is 25 cents for adults, and 10 cents for children. It will be of interest to know that the holding of an adult admission ticket to the Driving Park entitles the holder to one chance in the drawing for a handsome tea set, now on exhibition at Stroud's Tea Store, George street. The drawing will take place in the evening at the concert in the opera house.

IN THE EVENING.

The day's programme will conclude by a grand concert in the opera house, by the splendid band of the 57th Regiment, assisted by Mr. Owen A. Smiley, Canada's greatest character humorist and vocalist. The admission to the concert is 25c. and 35c.

The above programme represents a day of enjoyment and festivity never before presented in Peterborough It is incumbent upon every member of every labour organization to give his active suppport and co-operation. If the labour men of Peterborough fail to unite in making the day set apart as sacred to labor the occasion of interest it can and should be made, the public will, apart from unpreventable causes, be justified in concluding that the Labor Unions and organizations do not mean all they profess.

Let every labour representative in town heartily join in assisting the already over-worked committee, and make Labour Day, 1902, a long-to-be-remembered anniversary marked by a demonstration in every way worthy of the great cause of Labour in the best town of the Dominion.

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—John Loftus, of Ottawa; Nicholas Loftus, of Perth; and Francis, of Lockport, N.Y., have received legal notification that they are the heirs of an estate valued at seven million dollars by the death of their uncle, Sir Francis Loftus, Kilkenny, Ireland. The estate consists principally of landed property in Ireland. Its is very extensive and includes the freehold of several small towns, where the real estate is let on building leases, much of which will soon be falling in. The legal adviser of the heirs is Hon. Edward Blake.

London, Aug. 29.—The English press strongly condemns the military ride from Brussels to Ostend, in which three horses were ridden to death and several others till they dropped from exhaustion. The cruelty, it is said, was not balanced by any benefit. On the other hand, Lieut. Madamet, who won the race, denies that there was any cruelty, and declares that the winning horses were those which were well treated. A point established by the race was that the horses will run until the last without slackening speed, and will then drop from sheer exhaustion. Another point was that the maximum which a horse could develop at full speed was 65 miles a day. It is noteworthy that Emperor William forbade any officer of the German army to take part in the competition. It is said that he regarded it as a useless experiment.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 29.—While suffering from temporary insanity yesterday, Emma Bankardt, a spinster, 40 years of age, attempted to kill her mother and her sister, Dorothy, and then committed suicide at their home, four miles south of Covington, Ky. Mrs. Bankhardt and Dorothy were asleep in separate rooms, at the time, and each was dealt a terrific blow on the head with some blunt instrument, their skulls being fractured. Both probably will die. Having dealt these blows to her mother and sister, she saturated their beds with oil and applied a lighted match. As soon as the flames began to spread she ran to a cistern in the yard and jumped in, drowning before assistance could reach her. Hundreds of neighbors were attracted to the Bankardt home by the fire and succeeded in rescuing the two victims of the insane woman before they were harmed by the flames. Emma had been eccentric for several months, but the family did not consider her dangerous, and had not restrained her.

New York, Aug. 30.—The London correspondent of the Tribune says: In the September number of the National Review, Captain Mahan examines the question of the Persian Gulf. His opinion is that the Russian project for the acquisition of a port on the Persian Gulf is one in the realization of which no British Government can acquiesce. He holds that Great Britain has acquired by use the right to keep order in the Persian Gulf, that she ought to fight to preserve that right, and that if she is determined to do so there is little chance that she can be beaten. He therefore holds that, if the British Government knows its mind, keeps its eyes open, is ready to act and acts in time, no power will challenge her right. From those judgments he draws the further conclusions that those who talk of an understanding with Russia to be reached by the sacrifice of British rights in the Persian Gulf are talking nonsense.

London, Aug. 29.—A correspondence between the India Office and certain British firms relating to the competition between German and British manufacturers of railway locomotives was published yesterday in the form of a white paper. The correspondence opens with a despatch from Lord George Hamilton, accepting the tender of a Glasgow firm, but stating that he had received a tender twenty per cent. lower than a German firm. As, however, private railways had already ordered engines from Germany the Indian Government had decided to wait and see how those engines turned out before placing their orders abroad.

The British manufacturers state in their reply that these German engines ordered for the East Indian Railway, were to be ready in forty-six weeks; forty-one weeks have now elapsed, and not one engine has been shipped, owing to the wholesale rejection of materials. The British manufacturers maintain that the quality of the German work is inferior, and Lord George Hamilton replies that "this inferiority has not yet been proved." The British firms then express their willingness to abide the issue, believing that when the Germans discover how high are the requirements they will not be able to make tenders at such a low figure.

Antwerp, Aug. 30.—A Belgian officer just returned from the Congo Free State reports that in the caverns of the Uelle River there dwells a species of octopus that presents a grave danger to all who navigate the river in small boats.

The strange beasts are called "megwe" by the natives, and are very numerous in the neighborhood of the station of the Amadis, owing to the number of rocks and caves in that region. They attack the native canoes, capsizing them easy with their tentacles, and, according to their state of hunger, seizing one or two men.

The octopus drags his human prey to his cavern, and there, without inflicting the slightest external wound, feeds on his victims brains by inserting the points of his tenacles in his nostrils. He generally keeps his prey fifteen hours, then lets the body float out on the river.

"I was an eye witness to a disaster of this kind," says the Belgian. "A canoe was capsized in the river, and one of the three occupants disappeared. When the survivors swam ashore they told us that an octopus had turned their boat over, and carried off their companion. The next morning, about nine o'clock, the body was found floating, and no trace of any wound could be found, while the only abnormal appearance was the swollen state of the nostrils. On examination it was found that the brains had been extracted. The natives of the Uelle all dread the "megwe," while those of the Itimbri know nothing of its existence."

Ottawa, Aug. 29—The big American combines are not overlooking the Canadian market. A few weeks ago the U.S. Agricultural implement trust, whose capital is $120,000,000, decided to start a factory in Hamilton and already the building is in course of construction. Now comes the report from Chicago that Claus Spreckles, the San Francisco sugar refiner, who practically controls the entire sugar output of the Hawaiian Islands, is about to establish branch refineries in the Dominion, the proposed capital being six millions. The report further states that Spreckles is applying for a Canadian charter of incorporation.

Enquiry at the state department, where all applications for charters by letters patent of incorporations are dealt with, elicited the information that as yet no formal application of the kind had been received there. A few days ago, however, the secretary of state received a telegram from a firm of Chicago lawyers asking to be supplied with instructions as to how to proceed to obtain incorporation in Canada for a new company, already incorporated in the United States. The secretary of state had the Chicago applicants supplied with copies of the incorporation act and all other necessary particulars. It is not improbable that the information was required by attorneys for the Spreckels concern.

Winnipeg, Aug. 30.—Private advices were received here to-day by an official to the effect that the Dominion Government will interfere in the case of the Doukhobors, who are suffering from a religious mania. The foreigners are making no provision for the winter.

Five thousand are now affected and the mania is spreading. They have discarded the use of horses and cattle claiming they are gods, and have let them run wild on the prairie. They will not eat the product of any animal, and live on bread, water, and a few vegetables. A few weeks ago they decided not to wear leather shoes or woolen clothing, following their strange beliefs. It is feared that thousands will suffer if the mania does not abate or the Government does not soon act in some way. The Doukhobors are totally unprepared for a severe winter.

THE FUTURE OF THE WEST INDIA ISLANDS

Federation with Canada, Annexation to the States, or Reform of Colonial Government System the Choice

Special to The Times.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 29. — The leaders of the American annexation idea in at least two of the largest and most important British West India possessions, Trinidad and Jamaica, are generally planters and business men. They point to the growing prosperity of Porto Rico, and criticise the system of British colonial Government. They also point to the desperate state of the sugar of the sugar industry and to the deplorable condition of the people of the islands, and seriously suggests annexation to the United States, as the only possible chance of reviving their fallen fortunes.

NATIVES OPPOSE IT.

The natives on the other hand, resurrect stories of lynchings and the workings of the anti-negro laws in the Southern States, and declare themselves emphatically against annexation, and strongly in favor of the British rule, which gives them a freedom that has become to them even more precious than industrial and financial superiority. Between these two factions comes another class, influential enough, though in a minority, holding that federation with Canada is the only remedy for the ills from which the islands are undoubtedly suffering. And between them all the newspapers have been kept busy publishing letters and recommendations and protests. One paper had finally to decline to publish any letters bearing on the subject.

THE PROFITABLE TRADE.

The fruit trade with the United States is the most profitable undertaking in Jamaica to-day. Its growth is continuous and phenomenal. It is the mainstay of the island. Nobody attempts to deny that without the United States Company the island must have long ago given up the struggle.

The depression of the country is as acute as it is real. Government departmental reports teem with references to it. Taxes are becoming harder to collect because the people are daily going out of work in consequence of the failure of the sugar industry. Within the past few months thousands upon thousands of persons have been prosecuted for non-payment of taxes. They are generally given a month or two in which to pay their dues or in default take a term of imprisonment, which does not cancel the debt.

EXPENSIVE GOVERNMENT.

It is the opinion of a good many intelligent men that if the expensive system of government which obtains here were superseded by a system of the kind being introduced into Porto Rico, the island would not be long in recovering itself. The salary of $25,000 (besides the numerous exemptions and privileges) which the Government is paid is regarded as distinctly extravagant, and out of all proportion to the colony's general revenue. And the revenue cannot be increased. Import duties are at the highest possible point, and the Government dare not raise them any higher.

It is realized that the colony is rapidly nearing the parting of the ways, and the future will depend almost entirely on the future policy of the Imperial authorities with regard to this and the other islands of the West Indies.

ONTARIO POLITICAL SITUATION VIEWED

BY HON. J. R. STRATTON IN A SPEECH AT BOWMANVILLE

It is a Growing Time and the Majority of One Will Increase—This is How the Government Would Prefer It

At a Liberal picnic in West Durham, Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial secretary in addressing those present referred to the political situation in Ontario and said. The Administration in the last election came out of the contest with a majority of one, and he supposed that the Liberal electors of West Durham would claim that Mr. [illegible] was that one. That majority of one appeared to be a great source of disquietude and uneasiness to the Conservatives. It worried them terribly, but the Administration were not at all anxious over it. The situation reminded him of the business man who found himself in rather a tight place financially. He could not meet his debts as they came due. He confided his troubles to a friend. "It worries me greatly," he said; "I can't rest. Sometimes I get up and walk the floor all night." "You great fool," replied his friend, "why don't you take it calmly and let the other fellow walk the floor?" It was the Conservatives, not the Liberals, who were doing all the fretting and fuming over the majority of one. Some people were very hard to satisfy. For years they had been raising the cry that the Government majority was too large. Now, when they had a small, he might say a compact majority, they didn't seem a bit better pleased. They couldn't see how Mr. Ross could carry on the Government with a majority of one He would commend to their attention the alternative position. "How is Mr. Whitney going to form and conduct an Administration with a minority of one?" They were satisfied that their position would be sustained when the House met. If their majority was small it would grow. This was the growing time. The farmers had had splendid crops and he did not doubt that the political field would yield equally well after the winnowing process was over. The election courts would undo much which the Conservatives had accomplished by those corrupt and unworthy methods which, he regretted to say, had been largely restored to by that party, in pursuance of their regular tactics. When a number of constituencies had been thrown open he was confident that the practical business sense of the electors would assert itself, and that many who had from motives of pique or resentment rather than from political feeling voted against the Government would realize their mistake.

"ONE-PAW" BEAR

The Animal which is Supposed to Have Killed Charles Gubious, Indian

Ottawa, Aug. 29.—A farmer, named Jones from the vicinity of Eardley, brought a bear upon the market yesterday which, it was thought, would weigh fully 400 pounds. The bear was minus the left forepaw from which fact it is believed to be the bruin which caused the death of Charles Gubious, the noted Indian hunter and trapper on June 1st. The circumstances of the case support the supposition The Indian in question had been the terror of the bruins for the past twenty years, but on the above-mentioned date he was overcome by his formidable adversary and lacerated to such an extent that he died in Water St hospital the following day. The unfortunate Indian had been inspecting some traps which he had previously set and, finding the huge bear caught by the left forepaw started in to despatch the prisoner using an axe as a weapon. During the encounter a blow from Gubious' axe severed the leg which held the bear fast and thus the bear escaped alive, but not before he inflicted fatal wounds on the trapper. The missing paw on the animal shot by Mr. Jones is thought to furnish proof that this was the bear that killed the trappper. The carcass was sold for $10.

SAVED HER CHILD

The great majority of mothers are now convinced that Lactated Food is the safest and most nourishing for babies in summer time. Mrs. L. P. Smith, Truro, N.S., says:

"When my baby was three months old he was seriously ill and weighed only ten pounds. I gave him Lactated Food, and now, at the age of ten months, he is well and hearty and weighs twenty-five pounds." Lactated Food is recommended by over twenty thousand physicians.

Privileges of Labor Unions

How far a labor union may go in endeavoring to interfere with the business of a firm or company with which it may happen to have a disagreement may be decided by the Canadian courts, a test action having been taken by a manufacturing firm in Toronto.

The Metallic Roofing Company of Canada, Limited, through its solicitors Messrs. Thompson, Henderson & Bell, made application before Mr. Justice Falconbridge for an injunction to restrain Local Union No. 30, Amalgamated Sheet Workers' International Association, and certain members of that union, William Rose, Daniel McCrea, Richard Ruffell, S. Cox, W. C. Brake, J. S. Chapman, who are being sued on behalf of themselves and all other members of the union for damages for interference, from unlawfully interfering with the plaintiff's business.

The cornice sheet metal workers of the Metallic Roofing Company, some fifteen men, went out on strike on Aug. 7. They claimed that an agreement had been reached between the sheet metal workers and all the firms in the city, but that the Metallic Roofing Company refused to sign the agreement, so the men went out, and there has been no settlement made since.

In the affidavits put in by the plaintiffs they claim that the union and the men of other unions have refused to handle any of the goods of the company and place them on other buildings, and particularly on the buildings at the Exhibition, and at the Polson's Shipyard the union men refused to handle the goods of the company. The defendants are being sued individually as representing themselves and other members of the union

The defendants deny any responsibility for the non-handling of the goods of the company. Mr. Justice Falconbridge granted an interim injunction and the case will come up for argument on Tuesday next. Messrs. Lee & O'Donoghue are acting for the defendants.

—About forty more harvesters will leave for the Northwest over the C. P.R. to-morrow. Mr. [illegible], ticket agent, states that the [illegible] number will compare [illegible] with that of last year.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 30, 1902.

A PROBLEM IN FINANCE

In England recently a man killed himself because he had, or fancied he had, too much money. The amount that overwhelmed him was two million. Values vary. In this country he might have killed himself because he did not have enough.

The late Mr. Lorillard stated that it was not possible to live like a gentleman on less than a thousand dollars a day. At three and a half per cent. which is all one can get now with safety, it takes over ten millions to produce such an income. Ten millions is the amount which Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt secured from his father's estate. In comparison with the rest of that estate it is generally felt that he was cut off with a shilling.

Values vary, therefore, and so do opinions on them. Were the sum that alarmed the Englishman to come our way we should feel that we had seen worse days. Yet to Mr. Schwab, who is cultivating French, it would be a bagatelle. To Mr. Carnegie, small change. To Mr. Gates, a stack of chips. Mr. Morgan could write it off or tack it on and never know the difference. On the other hand, with such a pittance as that, Mr. Rockfeller's light would cease to shine before men Col. Astor would be reduced to the shabby genteel, and Mrs. Green to beggary.

We may wonder then, at the Englishman's suicide and in wondering we are forced to assume that what frightened him to death was not the money, but the fear of losing it. In that case he will have the sympathy of all who are being bunkoed in the Street today. He will have the sympathy of all who were let in on Copper, and of all who are nursing babes of similar charms.

These premises admitted, there remains a very pretty problem in finance: Whether it is better to have loved money and lost it, or never to have had any to love and lose. This problem the Englishman solved after a fashion of his own. But there will be no rush to imitate him. For clear it is, and has been and will be, that life without money, is more enjoyable than money without life.

NEW BLOOD WANTED

A report comes from Rome to the effect that the Pope has announced to the Catholic reigning houses that he will grant no more dispensations for consanguineous marriages in order that by alliances outside the royal circle the degeneration of royal families may be remedied. This is a somewhat surprising announcement, yet for that very reason it should be all the more welcome. The ancient line—quicquid delirant reges, plectuntur Achivi—has no longer its ancient force. A good king is a Godsend, but an imbecile, a lunatic or a debauchee upon the throne has now but a limited power of harmfulness. It would be easy enough however, to quote instances in which continuous in-breeding in royal families has spread its penalty over a people. Bavaria, to take one of the most famous instances has had to pay the price of royal degeneration. And if the Pope has really sent that pontifical advice—which would be equivalent to a command—round the palaces of Europe he will have put a prop under many a tottering house.

* * *

A meeting of the cottagers and those interested in the incorporation of Chemong as a village, was held last night in the Chemong Park Hotel. The meeting was fairly well attended, about twenty being present.

It was decided to make application to the Government for a franchise.

Officers were appointed, and a committee formed to look after the interests and business of the property holders.

A Clue That Failed.

Deductions in the manner of Sherlock Holmes do not always work out successfully. They did not in a case reported by the Washington "Post." A group of reporters were talking together, and one of them, who liked to play the amateur detective, devoted part of his time to watching a man standing some distance away.

"That man used to be in the army," he said.

"How do you know?"

"See how he puts his hand into his trousers pockets. He lifts up the side of his coat—look! he's doing it now—instead of pushing the coat back as we do. He acquired the habit from wearing a fatigue coat in the army. A fatigue coat, you know, is cut square about the body. To put the hand in the trousers pocket, one must lift up the side."

Some discussion followed, with the result that one of the reporters volunteered to lay their speculations before the stranger. He proved to be a worthy real estate dealer. After listening to the reporter's explanation, he replied, with much amusement:"

"I'll tell you why I put my hand in my pocket that way. I used to be a butcher in New York thirty years ago, and I got that habit raising my butcher's apron to make change."

Amusing Mistakes.

Some years ago a school teacher began to keep a record of amusing mistakes made by the children in her charge. These grew so quickly to respectable dimensions that a volume of them has just been published, fortified by an introduction from Mark Twain. The author expressly states that every reply is genuine, and that in no case has there been any tampering with the originals.

One child, asked for a definition of plagiarist, replied "a writer of plays." Very good also is the definition of a demagogue as "a vessel containing beer and other liquids."

"To find the number of square feet in a room," writes a young mathematician, "you multiply the room by the number of feet."

There is a quaint truth in the statement that "Henry VIII. of England was famous for being a great widower, having lost several wives."

Perhaps, however, the best of all is one which comes under the head of "Music," and which says that "emphasis is putting more distress on one word than another."

No Need of Assistance.

The father of the family had stepped into a bookstore to buy a birthday present for his fourteen-year-old son. "What kind of book would you like?" asked the salesman, to whom he had confided his purpose.

"Something that would be useful for the boy," was his reply.

"Well, here is a very good one on 'Self-Help.'"

"Self-help!" exclaimed the father. "Ben don't need anything of that kind. You ought to see him at the dinner-table!"

"Joinalism will feed in de sweet pastures of Reform. Managing editors will go dance jigs to mile stones, deir places filled by Professors of Etics from de leading univoisities and de Century Club. News editors of to-day will be chained in padded cells, deir duties performed by members of de Autors Club who can prove dey has ever wrote a book. Headline builders, copy re-writers, and telegraft editors who take de pledge will be let to write essays on Japanese poetry and basic steel ovens. No salaries will be paid, but every poisson employed may draw as much money as he feel likes, tree times a week. No poker games is to be allowed on de editorial floor until de make-up editor has time to sit in."

"Who would read such a silly poiper?" says Widdy.

"Madame," says Mr. Paul, "did anyone ever suspect Mr. Carnegie of being a fool? An advertisement for more editors will be printed in every edition of each poiper. Applications for such jobs must be written on coupons printed, also, in every edition of each poiper. De man what has filled out de most coupons gets de foist job."

"What of it?" says Widdy.

Mr. Paul looks tautful at her a while, den he says, "De mystery of newspoiper coupons is for woman's poisse, not her understanding. But dis I'll tell you: De poiper mills will never come witin a mile of supplying white poiper for Mr. Carnegie's use. I has prepared a table of figures what shows dat inside a year de only people on eart, besides Mr. Carnegie and staff, who will have de price of a meal will be a few cranks who don't want a job on a Carnegie poiper, wit privileges of de cash drawer."

"I don't tink much of de plan," says Whiskers. "If I had two hundred million I would do someting more better dan dat."

The Drinking Orchid.

A plant termed by English "Public Opinion" the most extraordinary ever discovered has been brought to light by the exertions of Mr. B. A. Suverkrop of Philadelphia, who during his trips to South America has been for some years contributing to the collection of his friend, Professor N. E. Brown, of the Herbarium, Kew Gardens, London. The wonderful plant which Mr. Suverkrop has now found is an orchid that takes a drink whenever it feels thirsty by letting down a tube into the water. When not in use the tube is coiled up on top of the plant.

One hot afternoon, says Mr. Suverkrop, I sat down under some brushwood at the side of a lagoon on the Rio de la Plata. Near at hand was a forest of dead trees which had been choked to death by orchids and climbing cacti. In front of me, stretching over the waters of the lagoon and about a foot above it, was a branch of one of these dead trees. Here and there clusters of common plants del aire grew on it, and a network of green cacti twined round it.

Among the orchids I noted one different from the rest, the leaves, sharp lance-head shaped, growing all round the root and radiating from it. From the center or axis of the plant hung a long, slender stem about one-eighth of an inch thick and one-fourth of an inch wide. The lower end of this was in the water to a depth of about four inches.

I went over at once to examine my discovery, and was surprised when I touched the plant to see the center stem gradually contract and convulsively roll itself up in a spiral like a roll of tape. I found on examination that the stem was a long, slender, flat tube, open at the outer end, and connected at the inner end to the roots by a series of hairlike tubes.

By subsequent observation I found that when the plant was in need of water this tube would gradually unwind till it dipped into the water. Then it would slowly coil round and wind up, carrying with it the quantity of water that the part of the tube which had been immersed contained. When the final coil was made, the water was poured, as it were, directly into the roots of the plant. The coil remained in this position until the plant required more water. But should the plant be touched while the tube is extended, the orchid acts like the sensitive plant, and the coiling is more rapid.

I found many of these plants, all directly over the water, or over the place where he water had been. In the latter case it was almost pitiful to see how the tube would work its way over the ground in search of water that was not there.

High "Stacks."

In the great gambling hall there was breathless silence.

A poker game between two of the billionaires was in progress.

About their table were packed and jammed hundreds of curious, excited people, watching their play with astonishment.

"I'll bet you a porterhouse steak!" says one.

Murmurs of awe rise from the watchers.

Clear and stern comes the answer:

"I'll see that porterhouse steak and raise you two rib roasts, a pig's knuckle and a can of ox-tail soup."

Here the onlookers gasped.

One of them, indeed, muttered:

"It is such things as this that make anarchists."

But, pooh! What know the hoi polloi of sport?—Baltimore "American."

American Railroads Made More Money Last Year than any Year in Their History

New York, Aug. 29—The report from Washington says American Railroads have done a larger business and made more money last year than in any year in their history. Cumbersome details accompanied the official showing, which we omit owing to their dryness and length, merely quoting what they show. The feeling of apprehension relative to the money question is plainly not shared by present large purchasers of stocks; interests know from whence and when will come any relief that may become necessary for the money market the Government is pledged to assist through medium of Secretary Show. The commission business is increasing and the market is materially broadening. Everything points to sustained activity for the first time in many months. The New York Stockholder quotes a prominent capitalist as saying ten years ago the railroads were all bolstering up their credit. Today they are trying to hide their earnings. This conveys a lot in a very few words.

Unless precedent is entirely useless with the forces now, undervalues and the new conditions which have arisen will carry the average of values very considerably higher. Property is appreciating in value while money is diminishing in value owing to its vastly increased quantities in the hands of the public. At such periods as these it is better to have property than to have cash. Mr. Keene is most bullish and optimistic as to the future, and speaks most positively and with no uncertain tones in the interview issued a day or two ago. He opens his remarks with the strong remark. "I never was more positive in my life than I am in the opinion that stocks will reach a higher range of values" etc. His little talk upon stocks has been so widely published that we refrain from quoting it further. Every kind of Railway stock looks good to buy. The industrials look equally well; we recommend purchases of both and stick steadfastly to the bull side, as we have persistently done ever since the perception of the bull campaign.

Apropos of Southern Railway, upon which stock we to-day issue an extremely exhaustive folio special letter, which it would be advisable for you to send, we publish the following very latest news just issued by Mr. J. P. Morgan & Co. A circular has just been issued by them advocating the extension of existence of the voting trust for the voting trust for a period of five years, following reasons: It would make it impossible for any outside interest to come into the market and secure control which might act in antagonism to the plans now under way for benefit of Southern Railway and other southern railway shares. It is the first official admission of the existence of these plans. It states these plans to have an important bearing upon southern railway interests. It suggests an extension of the expiring Oct. 15th, 1907. Under the voting trust since 1894 there has been an increase in mileage of over 1200 miles, 300 miles spurs and sidetracks have also been added to the property.

Gross earnings for year ending June 30, 1895 were $17,114,791.69. For year ending June 30th, 1902 they amounted to $37,712,265.16, an increase of over twenty millions, or 120 per cent. The net income over fixed charges increased 302 per cent., or over $3,700,000. In addition large sums have been expended upon the property during the existence of the voting trust, without appreciable increase of capitalization. The physical condition of the property has been brought to a high state of efficiency. On June 30th, 1902, the accumulated cash on hand or cash assets amounted to $6,520,504.33, a tidy sum that would pay for many a rainy day. The stocks are bound to advance largely. The entire market was strong all day, and will be higher the coming week after the holidays. Sales 761,000. Money closed at 5 per cent.

Finance and Mining

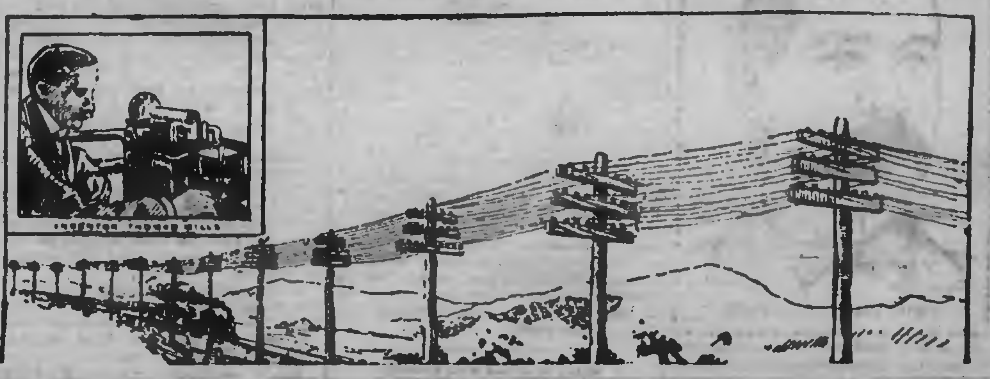
To Investors! A Chance of a Lifetime.



The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $600 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realized a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realize the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

50,000 SHARES AT 20 CENTS

For August Only

—PAR VALUE $1.00—

Ore in sight and value per ton makes our Shares well worth 75c. Watch them grow. Apply for terms, etc.

Nearly two years ago a party of well-known business men of Minneapolis organized the LaSonora Gold & Silver Mining Co., for the express purpose of developing the famous old Spanish Mine, La Blanca, well-known all through Sonora, Mexico, as a heavy producer of rich ore in ancient days, the company allowing only a few friends to invest with them, preferring to take the risk (if any) on their own shoulders. BUT HAPPILY THERE WAS NO RISK, and after ten months' labor and hundreds of feet of tunnels and shafts, they cut in Nov. the ore, and found below the old works what the ancients mined above them, 10 feet of very rich gold and silver ore, assaying from $24.75 to $217 per ton. Since Nov. 9 have opened the vien by drifting over 60 feet, and have now no scruples in offering to the investing public a chance to join with us in an absolute certainty.

The mine is ready for a concentrator, and for that purpose (only) we have alloted 50,000 shares.

"PE-RU-NA NECESSARY TO THE HOME,"

[Says Prof. Talfourd Smith, of Georgia.]

PROF. TALFOURD SMITH.

Professor Talfourd Smith, Principal Siloam High School, Siloam, Ga., writes:

"With much pleasure I recommend Peruna to all who may be suffering with any trouble of the respiratory organs. I have been using it in my family for the past five or six years and find it to be almost a household necessity. Peruna is truly a grand catarrh remedy and general tonic and will do all that is claimed for it by the manufacturers." —PROF. TALFOURD SMITH.

Catarrh is inflammation of the mucous membrane. It may be in the mucous membrane lining the eyes or the pelvic organs, throat, stomach, liver, bowels or kidneys.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Peruna is an internal remedy; not a local application.

Catarrh is a systemic disease, not a local disease. If Peruna will cure catarrh in one place it will cure it in any other place, because Peruna is a systemic remedy. It reaches the disease through the circulation in each organ. It eradicates the disease by eradicating it from the system.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

We had a pleasant visit from Mr. W. F. Neil, who is in town in the interests of the well known brokerage firm of McDearmott, Evans & Lee, of 25 Wall street, New York. This firm are entering just now to Canadian business. They have an office in Toronto, and have recently opened a branch in Lindsay, which is already doing a good business. The high financial standing of the firm, together with their facilities for keeping their customers well posted, gives them a great advantage over many of their competitors. 250 From Lindsay

Word was received by the Trades and Labor Demonstration committee last night that on Monday next, 250 members of organized labor, headed by a band 17 strong, will arrive in town at 8.30 a.m., to take part in the celebration. At a meeting of Union men in the Labor Hall last night, Rev. J. C. Davidson delivered an address in which he urged every member of organized labor to actively support the demonstration on Monday. A resolution was passed in favor of the Trades and Labor Unions attending divine service at St. John's church, to-morrow evening, when the Rector will preach on "Religion and Trades-Unionism."

Being Watched with Interest

A matter that is now before the courts of Toronto is being watched with interest by the labor men of Peterborough as well as elsewhere. A brief synopsis of the case appeared in the Times of yesterday:—Chief Justice Falconbridge has granted an interim injunction in the suit of the Toronto, Metallic Roofing Company against the Sheet Metal Workers' Union restraining it from interfering with the Company's business, and the case will come up for trial on Tuesday next. It is alleged that the union has been pursuing a policy of boycotting and refusing to handle the Company's products. The counsel for the organization pleads that there has been "no concerted action" on its part, hence it cannot be found guilty. English decisions have invariably held boycotting a criminal offence, hence the Toronto case will be watched with interest.

Our National Game

Why is Lacrosse our national game? So few people know the true reason, which lies in the fact that the game was made by Canadians. In a crude form it was played by the Indians, but a few whites, among whom was the late Dr. W. George Beers, of Montreal, adopted the game, so that it was made suitable for white players. The story of its rise and growth and of the men who have made it a popular game is told by two writers in the September Canadian Magazine. One of the most interesting of the many photographs in that of the Canadian Team which toured Great Britain and Ireland in 1883. No lacrosse enthusiast can afford to miss all the information contained in this issue.

FOOD SAVED HER

What is the True Cure for Most Everything

A food that will help the babies and the growing folks too, is worth knowing of and helping in the family.

A mother in Woonsocket, R.I., says "I have been a user of Grape-Nuts Food for quite a long time but never thought of giving it to baby, until we had a dreadful time with her.

We tried three kinds of baby food and condensed milk but nothing seemed to agree with her, and at seven months she weighed not quite 11 lbs. We were puzzled to know what to do with her when one day husband said "Do you ever try Grape-Nuts?" I thought she would throw up that food like she did the others, but to our great joy the softened food agreed with her perfectly.

She has been using it about five months now and, at a year old, she weighs 19 1-2 lbs., has eight teeth, and her flesh and little body is as firm and round as can be. She walks from chair to chair.

Meeting the doctor the other day I said, "What do you think of her now?" He said, "She don't look like the same baby. What do you feed her?" I said 'Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food.' The proof of its value is perfectly clear. She is a wonder everyone says that saw her a few months ago. I cannot praise Grape-Nuts enough. Please do not publish my name." BRADBURN SITE ON BROCK ST. CHOSEN

For the New Rink—Building Operations to Commence at Once

The meeting of the stockholders of the Peterborough Skating Rink Company last night was very largely attended by the stockholders, among those present being: Judge Edmison, Mayor Denne, R. H. Kells, C. H. Bradburn, J. S. Knapman, A. H. Stratton, Jas. Graham, C. Rutherford, T. A. S. Hay, A. McIntosh, J. Hamilton, and a large number of others interested. Mayor Denne was elected chairman of the meeting, and Mr. Bradburn, secretary.

The question was raised as to whether the conditional stockholders—those that had taken stock on condition that the rink go to a certain place—were entitled to vote for the election of officers.

It transpired that only those that had signed the stock book were entitled to vote, and as the conditional subscribers had not done so they were unable to do so.

When nominations for a Board of seven Directors were called for, there were a large number of nominations, and when the vote was counted, it was found that Messrs. Denne, Hill, A. H. Stratton, H. LeBrun, Knapman, Sanderson and Kenner, were the choice of the stockholders.

Before the vote on the selection of a site was taken, the matter stood thus:

The price asked for the Chamberlain lot, in the south part of the town, was $2,500, and out of that $200 would be subscribed for stock; on this site $310 worth of optional stock had been taken.

For the Bradburn lot, on Brock street, $2,500 was asked, with no reference to stock. The amount of optional stock subscribed to this site was $1,100.

Nearly $7,000 had been subscribed to date.

The vote bein taken the Bradburn estate was found to have 184 votes and the Chamberlain 35.

The Board of Directors then elected the following officers, etc.:

President—Mayor Denne.
Vice-President—A. H. Stratton.
Secretary-Treasurer—J. S. Knapman.
Solicitor—G. W. Hatton.
Bankers—Bank of Toronto.

The ordinary bylaws of a stock company were passed by the Board of Directors, and confirmed by the meeting in general.

The plans were on hand, and were closely examined and generally approved of by all present.

In all probability building operations will commence at once, and the opinion was freely expressed that the rink would be ready for the the first hockey this season.

LAST CONTINGENT DISGRACED THEMSELVES

So Says a Paper Published in Natal, South Africa

THE MEN INDULGE IN RIOTS

Says That Canadian Soldiers Took a Leading Part in the Disturbance

London, Aug 29.—The Natal Mercury, copies of which have been received, contains ample confirmation of the reports already circulated as to the rioting of the last contingent of Canadians in South Africa.

"It is impossible not to regret," says the Mercury of July 4, "the riots of the past few nights in which the Canadian irregular troops have played so prominent a part. In the trenches at Paardeberg the Canadians gained a high reputation, and it is a great pity that that reputation should be sullied by such disgraceful conduct as that of Tuesday night. We would impress upon our fellow-colonists that such behaviour disgraces not only themselves, but the uniform they wear and the great Dominion from which they come. We have had nearly three years of war, and thousands of troops have passed through the town and been quartered in it, but such scenes a have been witnessed recently are without parallel."

The Australians and Canadians are spoken of as having rioted in the bars at Durban. Two men of the Canadian contingent were arrested in one of these, upon which occasion revolvers were freely used. On June 30, 100 Australians and Canadians broke out from camp and wrecked many brothels and houses occupied by Indians. Windows were freely smashed bricks and bottles being used. Then they tore up fencing and armed themselves with pieces of the fences which they brandished in a disgraceful manner.

On July 1, at the police station occurred scenes which the Mercury describes as "the worst that ever disgraced the annals of the town." The soldiers attacked the station, but the fire brigade quelled their ardor with water. Most of them were too drunk to withstand the stream.

The parts taken by Australians in the riots has been small, almost none, in fact, and in many cases they have endeavored to stop the fighting.

It is no wonder that correspondents write to the Mercury, complaining of the "Hooliganism in Durban."

MAKE A DAY OF IT

The Events of Labor Day Being Looked Forward to With Interest

Labor Day is the last of the summer holidays, and if the present weather lasts over Monday next it ought to be one of the most enjoyable. The procession will be well worth seeing, if the members of the trades unions turn out in full force. Every man, woman and child, in Peterboro should be glad of a chance to look at and cheer the toilers whose labor produces the greater part of Peterboro's wealth. The games and sports in the park will afford an afternoon's diversion, and it is requested that the streets should be decorated with flags and bunting. We are not disposed to find fault with Peterboro people who like to see something outside of their own town on a holiday, but when the workingmen get up an attractive home programme it ought to have superior drawing power. General co-operation will make Labor Day the big holiday of the year.

GENERAL WHITE FOUGHT AGAINST TREACHERY

Defender of Ladysmith Says all His Plans were Betrayed--The Buller-Roberts Letters

Botha Describes Colenso, Never Saw Finer Bravery, Four or Five Days He Watched the British from Tugela Heights

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 30—The following correspondence concerning the siege and relief of Ladysmith has been issued as a Parliamentary paper. It is presumably official evidence of statements made by Mr. Brodrick during the debate in the House of Commons on July 17. The first two messages were quoted by the Secretary for War in the House on July 21 in reply to the statement of Sir Edward Grey that Sir Redvers Buller was not aware how long Ladysmith could hold out. Two days later was published a letter from Sir Redvers addressed to Mr. Brodrick, in which the general complained of "fitful publication."

WHITE TO BULLER.

No. 20 P., 30th November. Flashing signal clouds seen last night for first time. Following portion only read: "I do not know which way I will come. How much longer could you hold out? From Maritzburg, from Buller." Commencement of message and date not read. Situation here unchanged; but enemy still mounting additional guns against some of our essential positions. I have provisions for 70 days, and believe I can defend Ladysmith while they last. Hay or grazing is a difficulty; I have 35 days' supply of this at reduced ration. Small arm ammunition, 5 1-2 millions; 15-pr. guns, 250 rounds per gun; 4.7 inch naval guns, 170 rounds per gun; 12-pr. naval guns, 270 rounds per gun; 6.3-inch howitzer, 420 rounds per gun. Enemy learns every plan of operations I form, and I cannot discover source. I have locked up or banished every suspect, but still have undoubted evidence of betrayal. Native deserters from enemy and out native scouts report enemy much disheartened by news of advance on Free State, victory on Mooi River, and consequent retirement north of Tugela River. With regard to road of advance towards Ladysmith, I could give most help to a force coming via Underbrook Hotel or Springfield, but enemy is making his positions on that side stronger daily. If force south of Tugela can effect junction with me I believe effect will be immediate and decisive. At present cannot go large as I am completely invested, and must reserve myself for one or two big efforts to co-operate with relief force. It will be the greatest help to Ladysmith if relief force maintains closest possible touch with enemy. Hospital returns: Wounded, 225; dysentery, 71; enteric, 15; other fevers, 12; other diseases, 169. Additional portion of message deciphered: "If you hear me attacking join in if you can." Please repeat entire message. I will keep a good look out and do all I can. Repeat General Clery."

BULLER'S REPLY.

In reply General Buller sent the following message:—

No. 58, 4th December. Your No. 20 P, 30th November received. I shall have concentrated four brigades of infantry, 5 batteries of artillery, 1 regiment of cavalry, 1,000 mounted volunteers, by 6th December, and shall attack. I cannot yet say which route, but will (communicate) with you in several cipher messages before I advance. I shall also send by searchlight messages in clear, but they will be false ones sent in order to deceive enemy.

BULLER TO ROBERTS.

The communications between Lord Roberts and General Buller, relating to the situation at Ladysmith:

(Extract) Cape Town, 28th. Jan., 1900.

Please let me know exactly what your plan is for the next try to relieve Ladysmith, and about what date you think it would be possible to commence operations. I am deeply anxious that Ladysmith should be relieved, but unless you consider that you have a reasonable prospect of success, it would, I think, be infinitely better for many reasons for you to remain on the defensive behind the Tugela until the operations I am about to undertake have produced the effect which I hope for. Early reply requested.

BULLER TO ROBERTS.

(Extract.)

Spearman's Camp, 29th January, 1900. 3.25 p.m.

My plan for next trial to relieve Ladysmith is to turn the Spion Kop position by the east, crossing the Tugela three times, and using a new drift just discovered which makes all the difference be enabling me to reach a position I had hitherto considered inaccessible. I am only waiting for the horse artillery battery from India, and if it arrives I hope to attack Wednesday at 4 p.m.

The death rate in Ladysmith is now eight to ten a day, and their hospital stores have run out, so delay is objectionable. I feel fairly confident of success this time, as I believe the enemy had a severe lesson last week, and are very disheartened, while we are all right.

One can never safely attempt to prophesy, but so far as my exertions can, humanly speaking, conduce to the desired end, I think I can promise you that I shall in no case compromise my force.

Please forward this to Secretary of State.

FROM LORD ROBERTS.

(Extra) Cape Town, Jan. 30th, 1900.

I recognize what a very difficult operation you are now engaged in, and I should have been pleased beyond measure to hear that you had succeeded in relieving Ladysmith. You will now know from my telegram of today that, if you are not confident of forcing your way there, it would, in my opinion, be better that you should abandon the attempt, until I am in the Orange Free State, but I consider it most desirable there should be no retirement from the line of the Tugela for, as I mentioned in my telegram, reports from the Boer camp point to the enemy harassed by the strain thrown on them, as they feel they are unable to cope with our artillery fire.

LETTER TO ROBERTS.

Spearman's Hill, Feb. 4th, 1900.

. . . I have today received per Captain Foot, your letter of the 29th January. . . . White keeps a stiff upper lip, but some of those under him are desponding. He calculates he has now 7,000 effectives. They are eating their horses, and have very little else. He expects to be attacked in force this week, and though he affects to be confident I doubt if he really is. He has begged me to keep the enemy off him as much as I can and I can only do this by pegging away. . . . I do not think a move into the Free State will much affect our position here. . . . If you would tell me how you propose to advance on Bloemfontein—from where that is—I should be better able to say what I could do.

The remaining letters have already been published.

London, Aug. 30.—The following interesting interview was granted by General Louis Botha to a special correspondent of the Daily Mail, who accompanied him to England on board the Saxon:

"Four or five days before the battle of Colenso," he said. "I saw from the Tugela Heights that the British were massing in great numbers at Chieveley and neighborhood, and became convinced that a heavy engagement was imminent.

"According to my notion, there would be three points of our position assailed, and at these three points I and the burghers commenced to thoroughly prepare ourselves. I kept the intention foremost that nothing should be seen by the other side of these defensive arrangements.

"My conjecture as to the enemy's lines of advance proved to be absolutely correct, and I had no need to modify it as the fight proceeded.

"In fact, so complete was the surprise that at the first point of conflict the Imperial Light Horse and the British regulars came along with their rifles slung over their shoulders, in careless order, to within sixty yards of my men and guns—the hill of Hlangwani—before we opened fire.

"Then, as you may imagine, the slaughter was terrific and the discomfiture complete. That was the British right wing.

"The second point of attack was at the Bridle drift, made by the British left wing and distant about six miles up the river from Hlangwani. There one of the British generals—I don't know who—marched with a large force. Opposing them were the Zoutpansberg and Swaziland commandoes.

"My men allowed them to come within 200 yards and then opened fire.

"The British did their best to get through, and I must say that I never saw anything more magnificent than their charge at this point, which was the main objective and easiest of attack.

"But all to no purpose. They were driven back time after time, and though one or two stragglers got through the river, they were quickly taken prisoners. The main body was repulsed.

"No fewer than five times they charged, and I never want to see finer bravery than I saw there.

"The third point of attack was at the centre, near the railway line, in the attempt to get through the wagon road and over the wagon bridge.

"The British first of all moved their guns to the right of the railway line looking north, and fired on our near positions for some time.

"Getting no response—for I had issued strict orders on this point—they limbered up and came nearer, 700 yards from the railway bridge. The Krugersdorpers and Vryheiders who were stationed here, reserved their fire until the enemy were quite close, but when it did open the effect was terrible.

MERCILESS FUSILADE.

"Meanwhile the main body of British infantry were proceeding on the left side of the railway line towards the river. There I had stationed some men on a kopje under Oosthuizen and Kemp of Krugersdorp. The infantry at this point were subjected to the most merciless fusilade, and when the plight of the guns was seen they made desperate attempts to get across the line to their succor. Five times they tried, but it was beyond human possibility to get through the hail of lead. As soon as one lot was shot down, another rushed forward, but all to no avail. I do not believe, as I have seen stated, that the infantry were fired on from their own rear ranks to urge them forward, but I did see the officers riding up and down, towards the end, in the futile endeavor to make them charge again. But it was more than human flesh and blood could bear, and eventually they desisted. Meanwhile the gunners of the Armstrong batteries had been shot down, and I sent Lieutenant Pohlmann with the Johannesburg Police to reinforce the Krugersdorpians, so as to stop any attempt to retake the guns. In this they were successful.

"The battle raged from daybreak until four in the afternoon, when the British retired and left us in the field.

"How did I know that the struggle, long pending, would take place that day? Easily enough. A scout came in a one o'clock in the morning with the news that the whole British camp was alight, and I knew then that the attack would be made that morning.

"When day broke and it was clear enough to see, there they were deploying into the three different lines of attack in three divisions, their front extending over six miles. I calculate that their main division numbered 8,000 men. Their bravery was astounding. Sometimes they advanced in a walk, in regular order, and when they were mowed down those that were left simply dropped in the grass and waited till the next lot came up. They were men of pluck and no mistake!

TOWARDS TUGELA.

After Colenso, the British kept quiet for some time. They were commenced shifting portions of their camp up towards the Little Tugela.

"Eventually they made a big movement from Frere Camp—first to Pont's Drift and afterwards to Trichardt's Drift. They relinquished whatever intention they might have had of crossing at Pont's Drift on the discovery that we were strongly entrenched there.

"The British then moved farther westward to Trichardt's Drift, where they erected a pontoon. There they crossed the river and went on, in a north-westerly direction to Acton Holme's farm, where they struck the main road which runs into Ladysmith over the open veldt from the direction of Oliver's Hoek.

"That night I was preparing to leave the Colenso front for Pretoria on a few days' holidays; but before setting out I received the President's instructions to go at once west towards the Upper Tugela, and there take charge of the forces.

"This was at seven o'clock in the evening, and after having immediately despatched the necessary reinforcements, I rode over, arriving at General Burger's camp between two and three in the morning. Along with General Burger, General Cronje, of the Free State, and some of the commandants, I drove over and reviewed the menaced Boer positions.

"We discovered that from the positions the British had taken up, adjacent to the main road, there was nothing to do but to prepare for immediate battle.

"So the next day we worked carefully into the British positions, through the most vulnerable points, and the fighting waged fast and furious for five days all over a large plateau to the right of Spion Kop.

"I took up different points, though never for long, but kept moving my men about, strengthening here and reducing there. All the time the British force was trying to force its way through, and it was warm work. I can tell you.

"On the evening of the fifth day the enemy suddenly retired in the direction of Trichardt's Drift; but instead of recrossing the river, they occupied Spion Kop, which is on the north side.

"I and General Burger then agreed that an attempt should be made to retake the cop, which was of considerable strategic value, in the morning—the attack to be made from two sides, one by myself and the other by General Burger.

"We selected our men during the night from different points, took up our positions and in the grey dawn commenced the perilous, arduous ascent. We had only 250 men engaged, the others being in different positions, to support, if need should be. Commandant Prinsloo, with the Carolina burghers, went in front, and they bore the brunt of the attack. They were the first to gain the summit, and they lost pretty well half their men in doing so, killed and wounded. The Carolinas were supported by drafts from other various districts commandoes, and it was by their united bravery, second to the help from God, himself, that the victory of Spion Kop was gained. They succeeded in gaining their object; they drove out the enemy, though greatly outnumbered, and after seizing the position, held it all through the battle. It would be impossible to speak too highly of the splendid dash and courage of these men.

"To give you some idea of the sanguinary nature of the affair, when the mist that hung over the mountain during the ascent lifted, the burghers found themselves close on the enemy's schanzes, and many of them seized the soldier's rifles, as they were preparing to fire, on the alarm being sounded. So close were the combatants that the smoke of their rifles intermingled, and for some time there was confusion.

"Eventually, however, we gained the day, and as night descended we had taken some 200 prisoners. The balance of the British force of 3,000—those who were not killed—got away with their wounded during the night."

SUGAR AND PERDITION

Young Scotchman Tells of the Baneful Influence of Sweetening One's Porridge

The country is rapidly going to perdition and I give it just about two generations to get there. When the people start to eat sugar on their porridge their doom is at hand.

This was the substance but not the phraseology of a statement of a sturdy Scott who stopped off a C.P.R. train on Saturday. He was hungry and was directed to an eating house by a reporter for The Times. He asked for porridge and the action of the serving maid in putting the sugar bowl beside him called forth the remark.

"Look," he said, "at the men and the women and the children. The men and the women with their mouths filled with porcelain or gold or decayed roots of teeth and the same is true of the children only fewer of them have had their mouths attended to. Their is a menace to health and impaired health means falling strength and manhood lost.

"It is all because people eat too many sweet things."

The speaker was one of the class of Scotchman that is wanted in Canada. He had strength, judgement and money. At the conclusion of the meal, his guide wished to pay for the nourishment, but the sturdy Scot refused. He had, he said, 200 yellow guineas sewed in a belt that girded his waist. This he intended to deposit in some bank and after he has had some experience in farming in Canada he will take a homestead and engage in farming for himself. He is a guest of the Snowden House for a few days, while he looks around for a suitable place to locate.

A BRIEF STORY OF THE BOER STRUGGLE

Late Gen Lucas Meyer Discusses Late War While in England

GEN CRONJIE'S SURRENDER

Terrified and Made the Boers Afraid of Flanking Movements

London, Aug. 27. — Gen. Lucas Meyer had been a prominent figure in London previous to his death, and his character now forms the subject of many interesting sketches. The Boer general was one of the commanders of the Orange Free State forces. He joined his wife in London at the conclusion of the war, and was lionized by political and social leaders. King Edward extended to Gen. Meyer and his wife a special invitation to witness the coronation ceremonies in Westminster Abbey. The fact that Gen. Meyer and Lord Kitchener, rivals in war, met at a dinner given by Alfred Rothschild, made that function one of unusual interest. The two great generals shook hands in the most friendly manner. Gen. Meyer was also the guest of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain. Heart disease prostrated Gen. Meyer several times during the war. He was extremely ill before the battle of Modderspruit, but continued through one of the most stubbornly fought battles of the war, and after winning a decisive victory, he fell from his horse seriously ill. Gen. Meyer fought with Dinizulu, the famous Zulu chieftain, in 1884. He was the military godfather of Commandant General Botha.

COMING OF BULLER.

In personal appearance Gen. Meyer was tall, and finely built, with dark-bronzed face and heavy black-brown beard that was rapidly graying in the middle. Interviewed after he went to England as to his experiences in the war, he said:

"I went on commando on October 15, 1899, joining our forces in Natal. After the fight at Dundee I was present at the fight of Lombard's Kop, near Ladysmith, on October 30. At that time I became ill and was sent to Biggarsberg, where Mrs. Meyer came and nursed me, and finally I was sent to Pretoria appointing Botha in my place. On January 7 I returned to Colenso, not quite well, and even against the doctor's advice, but I felt I had to go. Then came the exciting episodes of the new year campaign. You must know as we lay at Colenso we received information that Buller was coming up, from Chieveley to Trichardt's Drift, and Schalkburgher, who was commanding our division at Spion Kop, sent for reinforcements. These were sent under Botha, but I sent many of my men until at least half of my commando was at Spion Kop.

A LARGE COMMANDO.

My commando numbered 6,000 men. We never at any time had more than 50,000 men under arms. Of course, if you will class old men of eighty and infants of ten, who have never borne arms as prisoners of war, you may arrive at a different estimate, but take it from me that our armies never exceeded the figure I have just quoted.

"Where was I? Spion Kop? Yes."

And proceeding as unconcernedly as before, he related his experiences in detail up to the time when the retreat from Ladysmith was begun. Graphically he told of the Pieter's Hill fight:

"Many of the poor trudgers' corpses lie there," turning to his wife and speaking very slowly. "They were too many for us there, and we had to retire. Just at that time, too, unluckily, came the news of Cronje's surrender, that demoralized our men, and it made them very cautious and afraid of being flanked. "Perhaps" he added as if to himself, "that was better, for we had to fight cautiously, and after that there were no big catches like Cronje."

TO THE BUSH VELD.

"Except Prinsloo?"

"Prinsloo——" He uncrossed his legs and sat upright, and for a moment the brown eyes gleamed brightly. "No—he was a 'handsupper.' They did not catch him." Then unconcernedly again, he told of the retreat, of Joubert's death, of Botha's appointment, of Buller's flank move through the Biggarsberg, and his appearance at Helpmakaar, of Chris. Botha's unavailing defence, of the defence of Charlestown and Laing's Nek, and of the final stand at Botha's Pass, where Fourie opposed Buller's troops. He told of his reorganization of the scattered commandoes, of the attempt—an attempt against President Kruger's express injunctions—to defend Pretoria, of Roberts' entry, and of the Boer retreat to Donkerhoek. "At Donkerhoek," he said. "Botha asked me to proceed to Macradodorp with our Kaffirs to select positions and entrench these in case he might be forced to retreat. When he did retreat he occupied these positions at Witrand, or Bergendaal, as the English call it. There we had a sharp fight for four days, but their numbers were overwhelming, so we retreated into the bush veld."

RETURN OF PEACE.

Briefly, perhaps a little more animatedly, he gave the history of the negotiations. "About March 6 we got a letter from Lord Kitchener enclosing the Dutch correspondence. There was nothing else—not a word from Kitchener himself. We in reply asked for a safe conduct to meet Steyn to consult about formulating proposals, and on March 16 we received his letter stating that a special train had been placed at our disposal and that during our absence the government camp would be safe from attack. These letters were brought to our camps by dispatch riders, and that time we had absolutely no idea that there was likely to be peace." Gen. Meyer went to some of the commandoes and explained the position, and was present at the election of Field Cornet Dunges. Commandant Viljoen, Gen. Mulder and other delegates to the Vereeniging conference. Discussing that conference his remarks were to a large extent confidential expressions of individual opinion, which he did not care to have taken down.

A HARD FATE.

On one point, however, he was emphatic. In all its bald directness the question was put to him: "Is it true you were all so glad to become British subjects?" And there was a trace of bitterness in his voice as he rose and walked toward the window with the simple reply "No." He stood looking at the street and turned round again. "Dost thou think it could have been so?" he asked. "Dost thou think when a man sees all he has cherished but a dead body away out of sight that he would be glad? It was hard, I tell thee—bitterly hard. I shall not forget how they looked when the resolution was taken and we went to sign away our independence."

He paused a moment and then talked of the efforts they had made. He told how their last proposal was this—"Take our independence if you must, but let the Free State remain as it is." "They laughed at us," he said, "they called it childish."

"We always worked with Kitchener," he went on. "I like him very much—we all did.

ORDERS BOERS TO KEEP AWAY.

London, Aug. 31—It is announced here in a special despatch from Brussels that the Belgian government has requested the Boer Generals Botha, De Wet and De La Rey, not to enter Belgium and that the station master at the Northern railway station has been instructed to summon troops to keep order in the event of his receiving notifications of the presence of generals on board a train from Holland.

RELIGION AND TRADES-UNIONS

Rev. J. C. Davidson Preached to Labor Men at St. John's Last Night

The attendance of members of Trades Unions at St. John's church last night, was not by any means as large as it should have been, considering the subject upon which the Rev. J. C. Davidson spoke—"Religion and Trades Unionism"—and the great interest the rev. gentleman has always shown in the labor movement.

Taking as his text the epistle of St. Paul to the Philippians, chapter 2, verse 4: "Look not every man on his own things but every man also on the things of others," the rector of St. John's delivered a sermon unbiased in its nature, and full of sound, logical argument applicable to both capital and labor. The labor question, he said has always been and always will be a great problem, for where two or three meet to further their own interests, the problem always arises how to do this without inflicting injury on others. Trades unionism is today a burning factor all over the continent, and everyone should have a fair idea of what it means. In entering the realms of industry we are also slipping into the domains of the one Great Father, and the principles of religion should not be left out in questions pertaining to Trades Unions. As one who believes in Trades-Unionism he advanced the principle that Christian men are bidden to look not only to their own interests, but also to the interests of other people. This was exemplified in the life of Christ, who as a carpenter suffered the hardships of an everyday working life, and finally laid down His life for us. Continuing, the rev. gentleman said, you members of Trades Unions feel that you are one of a great number in danger of being crushed by monopolies and capital and that the sensible thing to do is to unite with other men of the same craft to avoid this danger. And you have a perfect right to do so. By this action you getter better wages and shorter hours. This is a lawful and reasonable proceeding, for as a rule employers do not of theirown free will raise the wages of a large number of men. In saying this he did not wish to cast any reflection upon employers of labor, for they, as others, look to their own interests, and do not think of the other side of the question, which they leave to the laws of industry. The rev. gentleman opined that the increase of living today, with an increase of other kindred expenses, made it reasonable for men to organize and to respectfully make suggestions as to what they think they are entitled to under the circumstances. There are men however who knock at the doors of unions for their own selfish ends, and after deriving benefits got for them by others they leave the unions to help themselves, and go along in theirown course. There are other objects in Trades-Unionism, such as the betterment of the condition of youself and others, and an elevation of the standard of work. Under improved conditions men live healthier lives and do better work. The federation of labor teaches its members to instruct themselves in their craft. Modern unionism should raise the standard of work and keep out incompetent men. Justice means good work as well as better wages. Unions are not and never were formed to create strikes, which should only be resorted to when all other means have failed. Selfishness never yet and never will win a great cause. It is but just to look to the interests of other people. In considering what you think is a reasonable rate of wages, remember there are two other partners in your work. First, the public, in whose interests you must consider what increase the market will stand, and secondly your employers, who own the plant and buildings, and whose failure in business means much to you. You must consider these questions from a point of justice and brotherhood. During the past winter and spring I took part in several labor disputes and was much struck with the patience and kindly attention shown by the employers. If men, instead of standing aside in labor disputes, will only come in contact with their employers, they will in most cases find a kindly welcome and secure an amicable settlement. In conclusion the rev. gentleman claimed that capitalists of industry should have security so that they can carry out their plans, and look ahead, and he urged employers to do what is possible to render their employees' position a secure one.

FRENCHMEN SAY SPAIN SHOULD PROTECT COLONIES

The Cape Colony Ministry, Sprigg at Mercy of Bond--Friendly Relations

Affairs in Cape Colony—Comments on the King of Italy's Visit—Alliance Talk Concerning Italy

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 30.—Certain ingenious Frenchmen, says a Paris correspondent, having discovered a new argument from President Roosevelt's speech regarding the Monroe doctrine, which they declare should be a warning to Spain to enter the Latin alliance and take the leadership in her former South American colonies, removing them from the dangerous influences of the United States. It is argued that Roosevelt's affection for South American republics is only a symptom of that imperialism of which Cuba and the Philippines are examples. In spite of the failure of the Pan-American Congress, it is said the United States clings to the Pan-American idea, undaunted by the success of the Latin Congress at Madrid, where South Americans showed they preferred commercial arrangements with Spain and the rest of Europe, to combining with United States against the Old World. It is declared that France should cultivate the good graces of Spain, and induce her to join the Latin alliance, to be subsequently enlarged by adhesion to South American countries, so as to oppose the Pan-Latinism to Monroeism. The Journal des Debats thinks President Roosevelt's defination of the Monroe doctrine is amazingly vague. It says the doctrine either means nothing or might be used to prevent all economic relations between Europe and minor American States.

THE CAPE COLONY MINISTRY.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 30—Commenting on what Dr. Jameson has called an "Extraordinary alliance and unholy compact," between the Cape Colony Ministry and the Afrikander Bond, a Cape Town correspondent says it would be interesting to know whether, when he was in England recently, Sir Gordon Spriggs gave the Imperial Government clearly to understand that if members of the Cape Ministry remained in office it could only be as puppets of the Bond. The Bond can at any moment reject Sir John and his fellow Marionettes and nominate in their place Merriman, Sauer and Tewater.

CULTIVATING FRIENDLY RELATIONS.

Special to The Times.

London, Aug. 30—The Italian press, says a Rome correspondent, regards King Emmanuel's visit to Germany as a proof of the continued solidity of the Triple Alliance, which recent manifestations have shown to be compatible with cordial relations with the Dual Alliance. The correspondent adds that one may regard the visit as a development of the present Italian policy of cultivation excellent, but not mutually exclusive relations with all powers.

ALLIANCE BENEFITS ITALY.

London, Aug. 30—A Brussels correspondent says the Belgian press comment on the Italian King's visit to Berlin is largely devoted to showing that the benefits accruing to Italy as a member of the Triple Alliance are only negative. It declared the Franco-Italian reapproachment is only the logical outcome of a situation the development of which German diplomacy may retard, but cannot entirely stifle.

WHAT WILL COAL COST THIS YEAR?

DEALERS ARE AS YET UNABLE TO ANSWER THIS QUESTION

It All Depends on the Strike, which is Still Forcibly in Evidence—Wood is Scarce

"What will the price of fuel be this winter?" is the question that is asked by many. Not even the coal and wood dealers can answer it, although they are as greatly interested in the question as is the consumer. This state of uncertainty is caused by the anthracite coal strike which is still pending a settlement and which has for some time tied up the coal output of Pennsylvania, Wyoming and Virginia.

A prominent dealer was seen by a reporter for The Times. He could say nothing about what the price of coal would be during the coming winter. "It all depends on the strike," he said. He could not say what the difference in the rate would be as none has as yet been struck by the railroads. A rate will be struck by the roads interested if one is found necessary.

WOOD IS SCARCE.

With regard to the price of wood the dealer said: "Wood is scarce. The light snowfall last winter prevented a large quantity being taken out of the bush. If coal goes up in the winter there will be an increased demand for wood, the increase in the price of coal will likely react on the wood price, putting it up."

Another dealer held the same view of the situation with regard to wood, and expected that all fuel would advance in sympathy with hard coal.

That the coal question is an interesting one and one that is viewed by the citizens with anxiety is evidenced by the large number of inquiries made at the coal dealers' offices regarding the situation. The dealers can not say anything regarding the price and the explanation given the reporter is exactly what is given all enquirers seeking information along these lines.

TO RESTRAIN THE PRESS

Mr. Forrest of Chicago Favors English Law—Will Introduce a Bill

London, Aug. 31—William S. Forrest the well known criminal lawyer will propose a startling reform on his return to Chicago in September. Mr. Forrest says he will lay before the Illinois legislature a proposal to make it contempt of court for a newspaper to publish the details of a crime in advance of the trial.

This proposal aims to stop all newspaper investigation into crime, and was suggested to Mr. Forrest by the recent charge of Justice Wills to a Midland jury, advising them to convict a newspaper for having published supposed details of a murder previous to the trial.

Mr. Forrest thinks the statute on which this charge was based is a most excellent device, and believes that if a similar law was in effect in Illinois, the work of the prosecution and defence would be unhampered by "newspaper trials." He says that it was Judge Holdom who first called his attention to the English method.

FESSENDEN'S PLAN WIRELESS TELEGRAPH

Ready to Take Up the Commercial End of Wireless Telegraphy

MANY PATENTS ARE GRANTED

The Delicate Instruments Used by Marconi are not Necessary to Him

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 31 — Reginald Fessenden, inventor of the new system of wireless telegraphy, has been here to arrange some legal matters in connection with the patents for the new devices.

Mr. Fessenden has been working on experiments in wireless telegraphy for a long time and thirteen patents, covering the essential features of the instrument, which will be used, were granted to him by the patent department more than a week ago.

The applications for the patents were filed more than a year ago, but the department did not act on them until this month. Now that the patents have been obtained the work on the organization of the company to put the discoveries on a commercial basis will begin." Mr. Fessenden said that the company would be formed sometime next month.

The system of wireless telegraphy invented by Mr. Fessenden differs in many respects from those which Marconi and other inventors have given to the public and is based on the use of a new set of waves which he has discovered and which differ materially from those investigated by the other scientists. In the new system no such delicate instrument as the coherer, which is used in the Marconi system, is necessary and the receiving apparatus is more simple.

Mr. Fessenden would not talk about the new discoveries. He said that applications for some other patents had been made during the last week and until they had been issued he would not discuss the discoveries.

"With the patents that have been applied for," he said, "the new system of wireless telegraphy is perfected and it will be ready for general use in a short time. The commercial end of the discoveries is about ready to be taken up and it is probable that the company will be formed before the end of next month."

PROSPERITY IN THE WEST

The rapid development of the Canadian West is not only to be observed in the West itself, where the bountiful harvests, the inrush of settlers, the growth of towns and villages, the establishment of industries, the activity of building operations and the prosperous condition of the farming community furnish proofs which are apparent to the most skeptical. In Eastern Canada and elsewhere there is much increased business activity due entirely to the increased wealth and consuming power of the West, and the train loads of harvesters making their way westward to help to garner the enormous crop of this part of Canada, furnish other evidences of Western prosperity. Those who notice Stock Exchange quotations also see evidences of Western prosperity which are not to be controverted. "From day to day," says the Toronto Globe of last Thursday, "the Stock Exchanges give evidence of the rapid growth of the Canadian West. A noteworthy feature is the appreciation in the value of Hudson's Bay company shares. Investors have been influenced by the great influx of settlers and the natural advance in the value of land held by the company or included in its property. The survey of new land is proceeding rapidly, and the company's share in the sales is regarded as of sufficient importance to materially increase its dividends. The commercial establishments run by the company will also share in the new growth of the West, and the British investor is keen to appreciate the prospect of better returns. The upward movement in C.P.R. shows the confidence of investors in Western prosperity. On the local Exchange, with fair activity, the stock sold up to 138 3-8, but at the afternoon board in New York it went two points above that figure, reacting at the close to 139. The reports of sales by the Canada Northwest Land company for the half year ending with June last show that there were 323,918 acres of farm land sold for $1,114,800, as compared with 35-531 acres for $196,181 for the corresponding half of the previous year. There was also an increase in the returns from the sale of town site shares. Harvesting operations have already begun in Manitoba, and so far as reports have been received they sustain the hopeful predictions made earlier in the season. The danger from frost is almost over, and there are bright prospects of a new record that will swell the tide of immigration already setting so strongly toward the wheat-growing areas of Western Canada."

A DISGRACE TO HUMANITY

An excellent proof that the heart of the nation beats sound and true is to be seen in the unanimity with which journals of all shades of opinion in the United States are denouncing the cruel and iniquitous system of child labor in the factories of the southern states. Newspaper reporters sent to investigate the facts tell pitiful tales of the misery endured by the little ones in a state of servitude as bad as that which existed in the coal mines of England fifty years ago. The correspondent of the New York Post noted their weak eyes, drooping shoulders and their uniformly bloodless look, while closer examination disclosed equally serious nervous disorders. It has also been shown that the abominable system has grown up and is sustained by the cupidity of northern capitalists and southern parents. It is taking the life out of a whole generation of little children in order that there may be more profit in cotton weaving. Some accusing newspapers openly charge that the influence that is effective in preventing legislation for the protection of the children emanates from Boston, the cradle of liberty, and calls for such an upheaval of public sentiment as will put in the pillory of shame any man who defends or profits by the system of child labor. It is averred that many New England plants were deliberately removed to the south because there were no laws there to interfere with the employment of little children. Over a year ago the observations of a clergyman of South Carolina, who repeated the heartrending cry of the children were published, but it appears that has appeal has had no effect on the mill houses and legislatures of the state. Perhaps now that the public conscience is aroused something may be done to modify the conditions that are a disgrace to humanity.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

North Renfrew is a riding which has had a changeable political record since confederation. Ten elections have been held since 1867, and five times the riding has elected Grit members and five times Conservative. With the popular majority of the province so pronounced against Mr. Ross and his party and with the Grit disaffection which exists in North Renfrew it may reasonably be expected that the riding will return a Conservative.

The London, Ont, News, an Independent newspaper which strongly supported the Ross administration at the recent provincial general election, discussing the present political situation, and the probable results of the protests now before the courts, says, that "every time a seat is opened up the Conservatives will stand an equal chance of carrying it."

Russia is going through a period of financial distress, due to the floating some time ago of a large number of companies whose business turned out badly. Lincoln and Beecher Praying Together.

Samuel Scoville, jr., grandson of Henry Ward Beecher, writing in the "Sunday School Times" (Philadelphia), tells of a secret meeting between President Lincoln and his grandfather in 1862:

"Late one evening a stranger called at his (Mr. Beecher's) home and asked to see him. Mr. Beecher was working alone in his study, as was his usual custom, and this stranger refused to send up his name, and came muffled in a military cloak which completely hid his face. Mrs. Beecher's suspicions were aroused, and she was very unwilling that he should have the interview which he requested, especially as Mr. Beecher's life had been frequently threatened by sympathizers of the South. The latter, however, insisted that his visitor be shown up. Accordingly the stranger entered, the doors were shut, and for hours the wife below could hear their voices and their footsteps as they paced back and forth. Finally, toward midnight, the mysterious visitor went out, still muffled in his cloak, so that it was impossible to gain any idea of his features.

"The years went by. The war was finished. The President had suffered martyrdom at his post, and it was not until shortly before Mr. Beecher's death, over twenty years later, that it was known that the mysterious stranger who had called on the stormy winter night was Abraham Lincoln. The stress and strain of those days and nights of struggle, with all the responsibilities and sorrows of a nation fighting for its life thrust upon him, had broken down his strength, and for a time undermined even his courage. He had traveled alone in disguise and at night from Washington to Brooklyn to gain the sympathy and help of one whom he knew as a man of God, engaged in the same great battle in which he was the leader. Alone for hours that night the two had wrestled together in prayer with the God of battles and the Watcher over the right, until they had received the help which He had promised to those who seek His aid. Whatever were the convictions and religious belief of Abraham Lincoln, there is no doubt that he believed in prayer, and made that the source of his strength."

First Aid to the Injured.

It seems a pity that among the many methods offered to the weak of our generation for the undoing of bad habits and the counteracting of the consequent physical ills, the intellectual backsliders of the day should be left to shift for themselves. If nicotine and alcohol go down before Notobac and the Gold Cure, who shall say, for instance, that the novel habit would not yield to proper treatment? Will no philanthropic alienist give us an effective literary antiseptic, a yellow-journal antitoxin, or a French novel germicide? Meanwhile New York "Life" suggests a few handy remedies which have been found efficacious in emergencies.

Cases of New York "Journal" Jaundice, exhibiting a marked contempt for facts and the gradual development of a yellow streak, may be arrested, if taken very early, by homeopathic treatment. Dose: Fifteen minutes of day-before-yesterday's paper immediately after breakfast.

Intellectual dyspepsia, following overindulgence in spiced French entrees and Russian translations, requires careful treatment. A low diet is often recommended, such as the "Ladies' Home Journal" and "Once a Week." We prefer a few months among the Literary Mountains.

Historical Romantimania is generally regarded as harmless. It is apt to become chronic, however, if neglected. A case will seldom resist a few doses of the dramatised versions.

One grain of Kant's "Critique of Pure Reason" and one grain of toothache, dissolved in a teaspoonful of common sense, make a good lotion for mental astigmatism due to Mrs. Eddy's "Science and Health."

Ballade of Stored Furniture.

["Behind the iron doors, which in the New York warehouses must number hundreds of thousands, and throughout all our other cities, millions, the furniture of a myriad households is stored—the effects of people who have gone to Europe, or broken up housekeeping provisionally or definitively, or have died, or been divorced. They are the dead bones of Homes, or their ghosts, or their yet living bodies held in hypnotic trances, destined again in some future time to animate some house or flat anew."—Mr. Howells in "Harper's Magazine."]

Years ago they were packed away—
Hammered and fastened and nailed up tight,
To lighten the ravage of time's decay;
Stored in the warehouse out of sight.
But these Household Gods, by their ancient right,
Their rule still claim o'er the realm they've lost,
Though we think we've boxed up out of the light
The old dry bones of the Family Ghost.

The chairs are faded and worn and gray—
Queer old things of a monstrous height;
Ethel's piano would sound, to-day,
Tuneless and harsh in its sorry plight.
Tom's rifle scarce would serve in a fight,
Good for a random shot at most,
Eleanor's dolls, Jack's lathe and kite,
The old dry bones of the Family Ghost.

Some time they'll bring them all out, they say,
And set them up again, brave and bright;
So there in the dark they let them stay
In the stupid old room where it's always night.
Fatuous fancy, in truth's despite,
Reckless trust in an empty boast—
Why, the things are dead! They be phantoms quite—
The old dry bones of the Family Ghost.

ENVOI.

Flame of the Gods! in kindness smite,
And end in a blaze the tawdry host;
Lest into their new houses men invite
The old dry bones of the Family Ghost.
—McCready Sykes in "Life."

"What's yer daddy a-doin' these days?" "Well, when he ain't a-fishin' he's a-lyin' roun', an' when he's a-fishin' he's a-lyin' anyhow!"—Atlanta

PETERBOROUGH'S BIG LABOR DEMONSTRATION

With Splendid Morning Afternoon and Evening Features

IMMENSE STREET PARADE

In the Morning with Sports in the Afternoon and Concert at Night In the Opera House

The splendid demonstration on Monday next, Labor Day, under the auspices of the Trades and Labor Council of Peterborough, and local Labor Unions, is attracting much attention, and is sure to be worthy of the great interests it represents.

The Committee who have charge of the details are doing everything possible to make the affair the best and most successful ever held in Peterborough. Large crowds are expected in from the surrounding towns and villages. The following is the programme for the day:

IN THE MORNING.

There will be a trades and labour street parade at 10 o'clock. This parade will be representative of the several occupations followed by hose taking part. A prize will be awarded and given to the union making the best representation in the parade.

IN THE AFTERNOON.

In the Driving Park a magnificent programme of novel and interesting attractions, which are attractions will be presented, including sports, and games for which valuable prizes will be given; a lacrosse match between the Peterborough and Uxbridge teams and other sensational and entertaining features. These will include the celebrated New York fancy danceuse who will give an unique exhibition of the latest and most fetching Terpsichorean novelties. During aerial acts surpassing in thrilling interest anything ever previously seen in Peterborough, will also be given and the marvellous Musical Team will be heard in a repertoire of high-class vocal and instrumental music and vaudeville. The 57th Band will be in attendance all the afternoon.

The price of admission to the driving Park is 25 cents for adults, and 10 cents for children. It will be of interest to know that the holding of an adult admission ticket to the Driving Park entitles the holder to one chance in the drawing for a handsome tea set, now on exhibition at Stroud's Tea Store, George street. The drawing will take place in the evening at the concert in the opera house.

IN THE EVENING.

The day's programme will conclude by a grand concert in the opera house, by the splendid band of the 57th Regiment, assisted by Mr. Owen A. Smiley, Canada's greatest character humorist and vocalist. The admission to the concert is 25c. and 35c.

The above programme represents a day of enjoyment and festivity never before presented in Peterborough. It is incumbent upon every member of every labour organization to give his active support and co-operation. If the labour men of Peterborough fail to unite in making the day set apart as sacred to labor the occasion of interest it can and should be made, the public will, apart from unpreventable causes, be justified in concluding that the Labor Unions and organisations do not mean all they profess.

Let every labour representative in town heartily join in assisting the already over-worked committee, and make Labour Day, 1902, a long-to-be-remembered anniversary marked by a demonstration in every way worthy of the great cause of Labour in the best town of the Dominion.

Our National Game

Why is Lacrosse our national game? So few people know the true reason, which lies in the fact that the game was made by Canadians. In a crude form it was played by the Indians, but a few whites, among whom was the late Dr. W. George Beers, of Montreal, adopted the game, so that it was made suitable for white players. The story of its rise and growth and of the men who have made it a popular game is told by two writers in the September Canadian Magazine. One of the most interesting of the many photographs in that of the Canadian Team which toured Great Britain and Ireland in 1883. No lacrosse enthusiast can afford to miss all the information contained in this issue.

Finance and Mining

To Investors! A Chance of a Lifetime.

The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $000 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realised a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realise the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co. the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

THE RICHES OF MEXICO

Are well illustrated by the ores which are taken from the Gold and Silver properties of

La Sonora Gold and Silver Mining and Smelting Co

A company composed largely of well-known business men of Minneapolis. This company owns 78 acres, and is now developing the famous old Spanish Mine La Blanca; known throughout all Sonora as a fabulous producer in ancient days, and as one of the richest mines of modern times. Over $500,000 worth of ore in sight. Ore runs from $24.75 to $217 per ton.

One vein is 14 feet wide, and 800 feet of new work is already done.

The property is equipped with all necessary machinery, pumps, etc, all paid for, and is to the point of production. Company has been in active operation 18 months, and now wants to raise money to put into a concentrator and thus place the mine at once on a dividend paying basis. Stockholders may confidently look for 50 per cent. dividend per annum on the present selling price of stock at an early day.

Only 50,000 shares are offered at 20 cents a share—a part all ready subscribed—par value $1.00—fully paid and non-assessable. Intended buyers must send in orders at once to secure stock in this issue. No salaries paid officers; no sumptuous offices; every dollar goes into the new concentrator and actual development work.

Not a speculation. If you buy this stock you make a safe and profitable investment. There is absolutely nothing to hide. For prospectus and full particulars call upon or write to

While playing on the bank of the raceway below McAllister's mill in Ashburnham, little six-year-old Harold Quinn, son of Mr. Wm. BINDER CUTS OFF LITTLE BOY'S LEG

A LAD, FORMERLY OF MONAGAN MEETS WITH ACCIDENT

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bryson, of Routledge—The Lad May Die

Word was received here on Saturday from Routledge, Manitoba, of a accident which happened to a son of Mr. Thos. Bryson, who is well known in Peterborough, who lost a leg. The lad is only four years old.

His father was cutting grain when the little fellow stepped suddenly in front of the binder and before the machine could be stopped, one leg was almost completely severed.

His parents took him to Virden, where Dr Clingan amputated the limb. The chances are against the boy's recovery owing to his loss of blood.

RUGBY

The London Rugby Club will organize on Tuesday night. London is said to have plenty of good material to form two teams this year and expects to put a junior, intermediate, and perhaps a senior team on the field that will make the best of them guess. The men will have a month to get in shape before the season opens in the O.R.F. U., and prospects are a little brighter with London this year than they have been before. The London News says that all last year's players have been seen, and they express themselves as to get in the game again, and if Tuesday's meeting comes up to expectations, there is nothing to hinder the men from starting practice at once.

Toronto Star—The Peterboro championship intermediate team is considerably shaken up this season through the absence of Andy Scott, Revell. Smith, Hutchison, Norman Bell and several other of the stalwarts of last season. However, the management expect to place some new material in the field. An effort will be made to place a junior fifteen in the O.F.R. U. Port Hope, Cobourg, and other towns in the district will likely do likewise.

DON'T TRY PRESSURE

Trust to Intelligence

You cannot by process of law prevent anyone from drugging themselves to death. We must meet the evil by appeal to the intelligence.

One of the drugs that does the most harm to Americans, because of its wide spread use and its apparent innocence is Coffee. Ask any regular coffee drinker if he or she is perfectly well. At least one-half are not. Only those with extra vigor can keep well against the daily attack of caffeine (in the coffee). The heart and pulse gradually lose strength, dyspepsia, kidney troubles and nervous diseases of some sort set in and the clearly marked effects of coffee poisoning are shown. These are facts and worth anyone's thought. The reasonable and sensible thing is to leave it off and shift to Postum Food Coffee. The poison that has been secretely killing is thus withdrawn and a powerful rebuilding agent put to work. The good effects will begin to show inside of 10 days. If health and comfort are worth anything to you, try it.

SEASON FOR TYPHOID

Several Cases in Town and the Number Increasing

This is the season of the year when the typhoid germ does business, and the physicians have their hands full. Up to the end of July the town had been practically free of typhoid for the whole season—freer, we believe, than the records show for any past year. Now the germ seems to be making up for lost time and one doctor yesterday reported two cases. So far the record has not been more than ordinary for this season of the year. The Medical Health Officers admits that it is possible that many cases of typhoid are not reported at the health office, though the statute requires that they should be.

One reason why the doctors do not report typhoid as promptly as they do contagious diseases such as diphtheria etc., is because of the difficulty in correctly diagnosing the fever in its early stages. It is said to be so similar to quick consumption in its evidences that there are cases where the difference cannot be accurately told up to within a few days of the death of the patient. For this reason the doctors are slow in making up their minds as to what disease they are fighting.

Another way in which the typhoid germ can be got, if anyone wants it badly, is in milk, when the milk comes from the right place. For this reason when there is a case of typhoid reported at the health office there should be no time lost in finding out where that families milk came from, and the milk shop whether it be in the city or the country, is carefully inspected.

Some medical men have been saying all season that this would probably be a bad year for typhoid, and every means should be taken to locate the cause.

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME

Street Parade in the Morning, Athletic Sports in the Afternoon and Concert in the Evening

The programme for today's labor demonstration is as follows:

At ten o'clock the members of the various labor unions will meet on the market square, and form into procession, parading the principal streets of the town, headed by the band of the 57th Regiment. There will be a prize offered for the union making the best showing in the parade.

In the afternoon there will be an excellent programme of athletic sports at the Driving Park, for which substantial prizes will be given. Besides the various athletic events there will be a lacrosse match between the Uxbridge and Peterborough teams which promises to be an interesting tussle. Other entertaining features will be daring aerial acts, charming Terpsichorean performances, and a fine programme of music and vaudeville by the famous musical team. The programme, in fact, is one that predicts an afternoon's amusement such as is seldom produced in Peterborough.

The 57th band, which will, by the way, furnish music all day, will give one of the excellent concerts in the opera house in the evening, and Owen A. Smily, the popular character humorist and vocalist has also been secured for the occasion.

A FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT

Five Dollars for One Dollar

With a Guaranteed Dividend of 30 Per Cent.

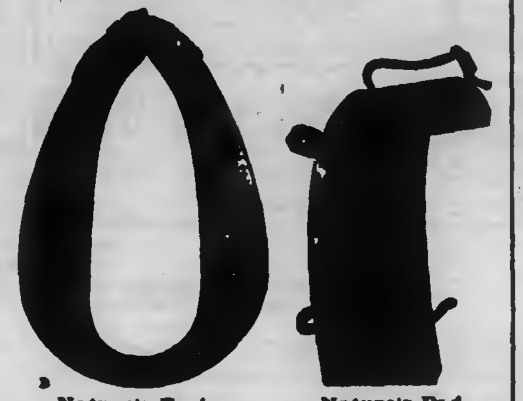
We have just been notified that we have been granted a Patent on the Collar in Great Britain This enhances the assets of this Company greatly, so that in order to meet the demand on it and extend the business in both countries. we have decided to sell 40,000 shares of the Treasury Stock at One Dollar per share, and as the returns will be large from the business we will sell it all under the 30 per cent guarantee.

We must remind investors that this is not all their stock will earn, but they will be entitled to their share of all profits above this.

And as this Company will have a complete monopoly of these Collars, the dividends will go far beyond the guaranteed dividend, and beyond all expectation.

NATURE'S FACING FOR HORSE COLLARS.

THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR CO., OF PHILADELPHIA.



Nature's Facing.
Nature's Pad.

Comes before the investing PUBLIC with a BUSINESS PROPOSITION OF UNUSUAL attractiveness. THE COMPANY'S special Claim lies in the ACKNOWLEDGED SUPERIORITY OF HORSE COLLARS, SADDLE PADS, and RIDING HOUSINGS, made with interlaced CURLED HORSE HAIR, which is fully protected by UNITED STATES LETTER PATENTS and other PATENTS now pending also in FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

One of the Company's specialties which has proven far superior to anything of the kind on the market is THE INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR, made of PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR. For years the great want felt by horsemen has been a collar that a horse could wear and be worked in that would keep his shoulders cool; also one that a horse with tender shoulders could wear in the heaviest kind of work without fear of galling. It is almost impossible for a horse to get galled or sore shoulders or sore neck, no matter how tender, when working with this collar, which can be washed with either hot or cold water without injury to it any way. The washing does not stiffen or harden it as it does a lined collar, being faced with the purest kind of curled horse hair. The hair comes in direct contact with the animal's skin, and the hair being porous, allows the healthy action of the skin and flesh. It at once absorbs the sweat, and in hot weather is invaluable, as it prevents the gathering of lather, as is the case with most cloth or leather-faced collars. These collars will outwear a cloth or leather-faced collar, as the hair is practically indestructible. These collars are no experiment. They have been in use for 1 1-2 years, and have proven their merits without the shadow of a doubt. Everyone who has used them can testify to their efficiency. They are admittedly the most common-sense horse collars in the world.

THIS COMPANY IS NOT TRYING TO CREATE, nor is it asking investors for THEIR MONEY to experiment with. We have gone through the experimental stage, and now have Our Articles as near perfection as they can be gotten. The material we are using in the Facings and Cushions of our Collars and Pads is not a New Article, but is the True and Tried Material, PURE CURLED HORSE HAIR, which has defied and has outlived all imitations.

It is the policy of THE AMERICAN INTERLACED HORSE COLLAR COMPANY to license or re-let the privilege of Facing Collars under their patents to the numerous harness and collar makers in the United States, of which there are over 32,000.

The profits from this source alone will undoubtedly be large, and in a very short time enable the Company to pay large dividends on its Stock. This will increase the value greatly, and will enable those who take advantage of this first-class offer to make well out of their investments.

The Company has already a complete factory in Bridgesburg, a section of the City of Philadelphia, equipped with the latest patterns of machinery for the manufacture of its products, free from all indebtedness.

As Our Articles of production are of the most stable kind, and to thoughtful people articles of necessity, therefore it is necessary that we bring the Articles before the People in general, and in order to do so, we offer to the PUBLIC A LIMITED AMOUNT OF THE TREASURY STOCK (ALL THE STOCK IS COMMON), THEREFORE ALL INVESTORS WILL SHARE EQUALLY AND FULLY OF THE COMPANY'S PROSPERITY.

In order that we may at once push the business forward, for we have an immense field before us, Free from Competition on articles of merit:—

We will sell 40,000 Shares of the Treasury Stock for One Dollar Per Share, after which the sale will be withdrawn and the price will be Five Dollars par.

So positive are the officers of this Company that this business will be a sure success, and yield large returns to the investors, that they will sell the above allotment of stock at the price stated above, and will guarantee a dividend of Six Per Cent. per annum at the least on the par value of the stock for five years.

We will attach ten coupons to the certificates of stock, payable in January and July.

Thus paying 30 per cent. on the investment.

This is a reasonable offer, as large revenues will be derived from the re-letting system, which guarantees us to make the above offer.

Aside from this there will be large profits from the sale of the goods, and from the material furnished those who re-let the system.

The revenues from the business will be such as to make this a first-class investment.

Every dollar from the sale of this stock will go into the treasury of the Company, free from all expenses, and the Business will be conducted on a very conservative and economical basis.

This is not a Stock Speculation Scheme, but it is the intention of the Officers to Establish the Business on a Solid Basis.

After the Business has been extended in the U. S. it is the intention of the Company to extend its Articles at once to the Foreign Markets, from which will be Large Returns, and an immense Business Established.

All subscriptions for stock which shall be in the secretary's hands before the 15th day of August will receive a coupon due January 1st, thus paying six months' guaranteed interest.

Persons wanting to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity will have to do so at once, as all the allotments will be quickly taken up, and no stock can be bought on the market, as none can be had.

A FEW TESTIMONIALS.

FROM A LEADING SADDLERY OF THE U.S.

Office of Buck and Mehlbach,
106 Chambers Street, New York,
Thursday, March 14, 1901.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Philadelphia Pa.:

Gentlemen,—I have your letter of yesterday, wherein you ask me to send you whatever letters of recommendation or approval we may have received, treating on the interlaced hair saddle cloths, etc., since we have been handling them—now about one and one-half years.

Whatever letters there are of this kind I have not kept separately, and they are, therefore, mixed up with the rest of our filed letters. But, as I told you, my own testimony should be sufficient for intelligent people—for I appreciated the value of interlaced hair for the purpose of saddle cloths, etc., long before I knew you, and at first sight of the cloth—and I am about twenty-five years in the business—I have since, as you know, marketed a great many of them to riders all over this country—South America, Cuba, etc. As you know, we are dealing with the most intelligent people, and when a mining engineer, for instance, tells you: "I have now used so many of these hair cloths, and they keep my horse's back free from sores, while formerly I was constantly troubled with them," and then of his own volition orders another lot, that is good evidence in favor of the Interlaced Hair System—is it not? The Interlaced Hair does everything felt and other like materials do not do. It is elastic, it is cool, it does not pack, it can easily be cleansed, and keeps its shape. For harness pads it is surely as good as for saddle cloths, while applied in the manufacture of horse collars it is simply ideal; and I surely wish you plenty of success in your undertaking, for your article deserves it.

Very truly yours,
WM. C. C. MEHLBACH.

Gentlemen,—Referring to the collars which we bought of you something like six months ago, we desire to say that our stableman advises us that they are giving great satisfaction. Would recommend and advise horse owners to use them, especially for heavy hauling.

American Interlaced Horse Collar Co., Bridesburg, Pa.:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, I have resigned my position with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, but I cannot speak too highly of the Interlaced Curled Hair Riding Housings. This is the first thing of the kind we ever used that would keep horses' backs from getting sore. The sample that was given us for the English Soldiers, they claim they never used anything in their cavalry to equal it, and the cowboys, the acknowledged horsemen of the world, claim it the best housings ever used under a saddle, as it absorbs all perspiration and moisture, so that the air can pass through to cool the backs.

I will refer your letter to the company at once, also will send you size wanted for cowboy saddle, as I wish one of your housings for my own use on the western ranges, which will enable me to introduce them, as I take a great interest in the welfare of horses.

Yours truly,
GEORGE BURCH,
Chief of Buffalo Bill's Congress of Rough Riders of the World.

FROM A CAVALRY LIEUTENANT

Camp Detachment, 2nd U. S. Cavalry,
Matanzas, Cuba, February 27th, 1899.

Gentlemen,—I have used your Interlaced Hair Saddle Cloth for sixteen months, and am now prepared to say something of its merits, but can find nothing to say to its detriment.

It is necessary in the cavalry service to save one's horse as much as possible, and particularly his back. Your saddle cloth keeps the horse's back cool, and keeps down the humps that will generally appear after a long, hot ride.

I have used it in Arizona, and during the recent war in Cuba, and am still using it; it has seen some hard service and stood it mighty well.

Yours,
S. M. KOCHERSPERGER,
Lieutenant 2nd Cavalry.

CHAMBERLAIN'S PLAN FOR IMPERIAL ZOLLVERIN

Why the Colonies Failed to Adopt It at the Colonial Conference

PREMIER BARTON OF AUSTRALIA SPEAKS

Interesting Statement by the Leader of the New Australian Commonwealth to a New York Newspaper

Special to The Times.

New York, Sept. 3.—The Sun says that Sir Edmund Barton, Premier of the Australian Commonwealth, is in this country, and he has explained in an interview why the conference of Colonial Premiers, lately held in London, failed to adopt Mr. Chamberlain's plan for an imperial zollverein and for a combination of the colonies with the Mother Country for imperial defence. As Sir Edmund Barton was even more responsible than was Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the rejection of the Colonial Secretary's proposals, what he has to say upon the subject deserves attention.

We have reason to believe, although Sir Edmund Barton did not say so, that Mr. Chamberlain is willing to give the food products and raw materials of the colonies a substantial preference in the British market, but only on condition that British manufactures shall be admitted to the colonies duty free. Nothing short of such a reciprocal concession on the part of the colonies would justify the Colonial Secretary in effecting such a change in the British tariff as would raise, or threaten to raise, the price of bread in the United Kingdom, and thus expose the Unionist party to the risk of defeat at the next general election. If British manufacturers could be assured of a monopoly of the colonial markets, they and the operatives might feel that they had secured an equivalent for a slight appreciation in the cost of breadstuffs. Even in the case of Canada, however, it is an economic impossibility to concede such a monopoly. In the first place, the proceeds of the duties now levied in Canada on manufactures imported from the United Kingdom constitute a very important, if not indispensable, part of the Dominion's revenues. In the second place, the admission of British products duty free would annihilate most of the manufacturing industries, which, for many years, have been sedulously fostered by the Ottawa Government.

In the case of the Australian Commonwealth, as Sir Edmund Barton pointed out, the objection to the free admission of British fabrics is even more insuperable. The revenue of the Australian Federal Government is almost exclusively derived from customs duties, and by far the major part of these are levied upon imports from Great Britain. Nor is this all. By the constitution of the Australian Commonwealth the Federal Government is bound to transfer part of the revenue derived from customs to each constituent State, which, without such aid, would be unable to discharge its own obligations. The agreement to divide the customs revenue is the cornerstone of Australian confederation. If the promised division were not made, or if, owing to the free admission of British manufactures, there should be next to nothing to divide, the federative bond would prove a wisp of straw. In some, if not all, of the constituent States the failure to receive the expected allotments from the customs revenue would render it impossible to discharge the public debts, and the probable result would be an industrial panic. That would be much too great a price to pay for a preference for Australian products in the British market.

Out of deference to Mr. Chamberlain, and to enable him to claim that the conference has not been utterly abortive, the Colonial Premiers agreed to go through the form of recommending in their respective colonies the granting of a substantial preference to imports from the United Kingdom. Nominally, the Dominion of Canada already grants a preference of 33 1-3 per cent., but, owing to the operations of the free list, imports from Great Britain do not enjoy, upon the whole, any advantage over imports from the United States. Sir Edmund Barton refrains from expressing any opinion as to whether the Federal Legislature of Australia is likely to adopt the suggestion which he has promised to make. Nobody knows better than he that the suggestion will be rejected if the concession of any preference to British manufactures would have the effect of diminishing the Federal revenues.

With regard to concerted measures for imperial defence, Sir Edmund Barton opinioned that Cape Colony and Natal would at least consider the expediency of setting aside a certain part of their military forces for imperial purposes. Their position obviously differs from that of other colonies, seeing that they are vitally concerned in the pacification of the Boer territories and in the maintenance of peace and order among the large native population of South Africa. New Zealand, also, if Premier Seddon is able to carry out his purpose, may, out of sheer disinterestedness and loyalty, place a part of its military force at the disposal of the British Government. No such exhibition of patriotic fervor can be looked for on the part of Australia or Canada. According to Sir Edmund Barton, neither of those confederations would set aside any specific number of troops for imperial uses, but, should the mother country be involved in war, they would let their Parliaments decide whether any soldiers, and, if any, how many, should be sent to help her.

We surmise that Sir Edmund Barton wonders why he was summoned from the antipodes to attend a conference in London, the trivial outcome of which might have been attained as well by correspondence.

DOUBLE TRACKED, MONTREAL AND TORONTO

The Work May be Completed by the End of the Year

GRAND TRUNK'S PROGRESS

The Main Line Double Track Almost Complete—Line Between Belleville and Midland to Come Next

The people of Peterborough will be pleased to learn that the management of the Grand Trunk Railway propose to double track the line between Midland and Belleville, at an early date. This portion will become the great grain centre of the company's system.

The work of double tracking the line between Montreal and Toronto is approaching completion, and when this is done the other divisions will come next.

The most important work has been done between Port Union and Oshawa, and consists of the double-tracking of the road, cutting down the grades and filling in the low places, reducing the grades over the section of the road fully 60 per cent. What this will mean will be better appreciated when it is stated that the big Grand Trunk engines which formerly hauled loads of 1,600 tons over this stretch of roadbed, will under the new conditions, pull average loads of 2,000 tons with ease. Less labor would be involved in building a new road than was required for the work that has been done on this section, for in addition to the actual work, provision had to be made so that no interruption should be caused to the immense traffic that is continually being hauled over the road. The operations east of Port Huron were begun in July 1901, and when the work is completed to Oshawa, the G.T.R. will have excavated over a million cubic yards of earth and built several miles of embankment.

Considerably over a quarter of a million dollars worth of plant has been in operation, and immense gangs of men have been employed, over $300,000 having been spent in all on the work. As an example of the difficulties encountered, it may be mentioned that in one cutting alone a cut east of Pickering, over a ton of dynamite and three hundred kegs of powder were used in blasting. Three gigantic steamshovels, capable of cutting trenches 56 feet wide, were in constant use.

ROADBED LEVELLED.

From Port Union, where the line crosses a succession of hills, practically every yard of the roadbed has been levelled up or down. The Rouge River embankment has been raised by feet, and the bridge 14 feet. Immediately east of this a cutting 22 feet deep has been made, causing a total difference in grade of 41 feet within a mile and a half of the track. At Dumbarton the road has been raised 16 feet and instead of the old level crossing the highway now runs under a fine arched bridge. The bridge across Duffin Creek at Pickering has been raised 19 feet, and a new double track steel girder bridge is being placed in position, while the hill immediately east has been cut down 20 feet, not only improving the roadbed, but reclaiming a large area of swamp land. At Whitby station the grade is being raised 1½ feet, rising to 18 feet east of there; west of Oshawa the cutting is increased to 22 feet, while immediately east of Oshawa a bridge over Farewell's Creek has been raised 12 feet.

An important feature of this improvement has been the doing away with most of the old grade crossings, which have been replaced by overhead or underground passageways, thus greatly reducing the danger to the public.

At the Don River the tracks have been straightened and increased accommodation arranged for 300 cars while the bridge will be moved into a direct line with the tracks.

On the stretch between Jordan and Niagara Falls, a distance of 15 miles, a double track is to be laid and 75 per cent. of the grading for this purpose has already been done. This will give a double track from Hamilton to the Falls.

On the improvements, the road has been laid with eighty-pound rails, five thousand tons of which were recently imported for this purpose. The improvements will greatly facilitate the economical handling of both freight and passenger trains, both as to safety and speed.

Mr. Fessenden, principal of the Collegiate Institute stated before the unusual number of pupils desiring to enter the junior forms for the coming term, one hundred and twenty having already commenced, it would be necessary to engage an assistant teacher in order to give them proper attention in their studies. He recommended that a teacher of some experience and holding a first class public school certificate be procured if possible, though it would not be necessary for this work to be a specialist in any particular line.

On motion of Mr. McBain, seconded by Mr. Fair, this matter was referred to the Committee of Appointments with power to act.

A motion will be brought before the Board at its next meeting concerning the erection of a new building for use as a Collegiate Institute and for the teaching of Domestic Science and Manual Training.

MONTREAL TO LONDON TO TAKE FOUR DAYS

A New Route Suggested by Robert Redford, the Great Montreal Shipper

Galway and Halifax the Terminal Points of the New Route—St. Lawrence too Dangerous

Montreal, September 3. — A new route for the fast Atlantic service is suggested by Robert Reford, the steamship owner of Montreal. He regards the St. Lawrence as dangerous for a fast line, and advocates a 24-knot service between Galway and Halifax. This, he claims, would cut down the time of transit between London and Montreal to a fraction over four days, or less than one-half what is possible via New York or any other route. Owing to the geographical position of Canada, the United States could not safely compete with her, and England's commercial supremacy, now lost to Morgan, would be re-established.

Mr. Reford has stated his views to in a letter to the London Times, in which he says:

"The proposed line is seemingly to consist of four 20-knot passenger steamers and ten freight steamers, to ply between Liverpool, Quebec and Montreal in summer, and Liverpool and Halifax in winter, the whole line, both mail and freight, to be subsidized. This means, as I see it, and as I think everyone else will who studies the matter, that Canada is to be saddled with a mail and passenger service little, if anything, better than that which she has had for the last quarter of a century, and through which, as acknowledged on the high authority of the Postmaster-General of Canada, Sir Wm. Mulock, three-fourths have been driven to find transit via the United States ports, principally New York. There is also the new and most objectionable feature of a subsidy to a freight line of ten steamers. Subsidies are dangerous things, and should only, I think, be given for some special service quite unobtainable without such aid, which is not true in this case. They give the possessor a great advantage over other competitors, and doubly dangerous would such be when given to a railway company which could use it for the exclusive benefit of the company, without regard to the rights of others, or the good of the country, and which could indeed refuse to take or give freight outside of its own steamers.

"A weekly service is not sufficient for the wants of Canada. Neither her mails or passengers have been, or will be, contented with such when they can get an almost daily service via New York. A 20-knot service for the entire distance between Liverpool and Montreal or Quebec cannot safely be given owing to the congested nature of the Irish Sea in the neighborhood of Liverpool, and the dangerous navigation of the Gulf and River St. Lawrence. It will be found very difficult, if not impossible, to give a mail or passenger service quicker than nine or ten days between London and Montreal, or, say, about one day better than we have at present, the result being that the proposed fast line, while called one of twenty knots, is but little improvement upon the past —in fact a sham.

SHORTEST SEA ROUTE.

Between Great Britain, at the western coast of Ireland, say, at Galway, and Canada, at the port of Halifax, N.S., lies the shortest sea route between Europe and America. The distance between Galway and Halifax is about 2,150 miles, as against 3,150 between Liverpool and Montreal, making the ocean crossable at this point, Galway to Halifax, by steamers of 24 or 25-knot speed, in three days, as against seven or eight by the St. Lawrence or New York routes. Add to this ocean passage of three days twelve hours between London and Galway, and 16 hours between Halifax and Montreal, and you obtain a possible time of transit between London and Montreal of a fraction over four days, or less than one-half what is possible via New York or any other route, a condition of things of such importance to the interests of Great Britain and Canada, as to lead, I think, to this route, having claims above all others, even if the working of it costs double the money to subsidise the slower routes, and it possessed no other advantages. It does, however, possess other advantages, pre-eminently great, so marking it out as the coming route not only between Great Britain and Europe, and Canada, but as the highway of travel between Canada, Europe, Asia, and Australia. Only half the number of steamers necessary to compose a weekly line between New York and Liverpool, or Liverpool and Montreal, will suffice. So great would the entire saving be in expenses that, I think, a tri-weekly line, consisting of six steamers, could be run as cheaply as a weekly line of four steamers between Liverpool and New York.

Mr. Reford contends that there is more perishable material being shipped all the time, and that the fast freight line he advocates would have plenty to carry, and more accomodation, because of the less quantity of coal required. He does not think Montreal or Quebec would be greatly injured.

Million Dollars for a Smile

Samuel O. Seeley, of New York, says he would willingly give a million dollars for a welcome smile from his son.

Seeley stole $354,000 from the Shoe and leather bank and served five years in the penitentiary. Two years ago he was released.

His wife stood by him until the evidence of his crime was overwhelming, then she got a divorce.

His son refused to speak to him from the day of his conviction.

Seeley has learned a costly lesson. That lesson is that there are many things in this world infinitely more valuable than money.

A million dollars will not extort a smile from unwilling lips.

Ah, if a man's sinning affected only himself the punishment would not be so hard to bear.

If a man's punishment for crime only proceeded from the State he could say: "I've paid the penalty; I owe society nothing. We are even."

But there is the wife, broken-hearted. There is the son who will not speak to him.

God's punishment is worse than any state can inflict.

David said, "My sins are ever before me."

Aye, there's the rub.

Memory.

One may be forgiven of a wrong. But it cannot be forgotten. And its effects cannot be stopped.

Lady Macbeth may cry, "Out, damned spot!" but the spot is there. "All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand."

The spot is not on the hand. It is in the mind—the memory.

No, a million dollars cannot patch the broken heart of Seeley's wife. A million dollars cannot make his son look upon him with a smile of welcome and affection.

There is no need to invent a hell.

—The 57th Regt. will be represented at the D.R.A. matches at Ottawa by the following: Lieut. G. B. Cameron, Sergt. Moore, Staff-Sergt. Bartlett Gibson, Privates Pentland, Curtis Fitzgerald, Cameron, Hilton and Black.

Gates at Railway Crossings.

Ald. Edgecombe submitted the following:

Gentlemen—Your Committee of the Whole Council beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

— That the Mayor write to Mr. Timmerman, Supt. of the C.P.R., and inform him that the signal bell at the George street crossing is inadequate and that gates are required.

2. That the Town Solicitor be instructed to take steps to have the order of the Railway Committee of the Privy Council enforced regarding gates being placed at the crossings of the G.T.R. at Charlotte and Simcoe streets.

3. That the salary of the Chief of Police be increased by $100 a year.

The report was adopted as read.

London Street Bridge.

Ald. Rush submitted the following report:

Gentlemen,—We your Committee appointed to recommend a basis of settlement with the Dickson Co. with respect to the building of the bridge on London street, in 1898, beg leave to report as follows:

We have made inquiries from gentlemen who were members of the Council when the bridge was built and the stone got from the Town by the Company and have also received letter from the Dickson Company which is attached to this report.

We have ascertained as closely as possible, and we believe accurately, the quantity of stone. According to what we believe was the understanding at the time and a fair basis of settlement, the Town Should allow the Company $1000 for building the bridge. Mr. Raney's estimate of a bridge the old one was $767., but this was for a wooden bridge, while the bridge erected has concrete abutments and steel superstructure. The bridge cost much more than $1,000, but the Company widened the raceway and by thus enlarging the water course made it necessary to have a more expensive bridge, and the sum we have mentioned is, we think, a fair allowance. The Company procured from the Town in 1898 and 1899 broken stone to the value as we have estimated it, of $789., so that deducting this sum from the $1000 allowed on account of the bridge, there would be $210.18 payable to the Dickson Company by the Town, and we recommend that the Treasurer be instructed to pay this sum of $210.18 to the Company for the purpose of settling the matter providing it is accepted by the Company.

The report was adopted as read.

The Letter.

The following is the letter referred to in the report:

H. Rush, Esq.:

Dear Sir,—Referring to our interview regarding settlement of London street bridge and also the corporations' account against us for stone, we beg leave to submit that in view of the fact that the negotiations between the Town and the Dickson Company in reference to the building of the bridge seemed never to have reached a definite conclusion or to have been reduced to writing. We think the equitable and fair way would be to consider the question on its merits, as we have evidence in existing conditions which are about as follows:

Our Co. have received from the Town, according to our account about 587 yards of stone, 340 yards of which went into the London street bridge, and 247 yards into repairs on the raceway. The London st. bridge was build and paid for by the Dickson Co., and cost $3,928. The price put on the stone was $1 a yard or $340. We grant that considerable extra cost was added to the bridge because the head gates were put in, which extra cost should be borne by us, but the town has today a bridge which is as substantial and creditable a structure as is required and one which willl stand for a good many years without cost of renewal.

The question is what do you consider such a bridge worth to the town? We think in all fairness $2000 would be a reasonable price for it; allowing $1,928 for extra cost of head gates. Deduct from this price of $2000 the value of the stone supplied by the Town, say $600, and we think the balance ($1,400) would be only a fair amount for the town to pay us.

The public have had almost continuous use of the bridge across the dam, which bridge was built and maintained entirely by the Dickson Company, and should entitle us to favorable consideration.

We respectfully submit this as our opinion as what would be a fair and just settlement under the circumstances, and ask you to consider it in the fair minded spirit which has always characterised you and your colleagues on the Council Board.

Awaiting your reply, Yours truly,
THE DICKSON CO.
J. C. Shook, Gen. Manager.

Hunter Street Bridge.

Ald. Morrison moved, seconded by Ald. Turner, that the Treasurer be authorized to pay the Town's share of planking Hunter st. bridge.—Carried.

Additional Lights.

Ald. Turner's suggestion that lights be placed between St. Peters' Cathedral and Charlotte street was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Granolithic Walks.

A by-law respecting the construction of a granolithic sidewalk on the west side of Walton street, between Waller street and Homewood avenue passed its several readings.

Mr. Turner's petition for a granolithic walk on the east side of George street from corner of Comstock's store to King street, was granted.

Sewer By-laws.

A by-law respecting the construction of a sewer on Harvey street, from London to Macdonald street passed its several readings.

Mrs. Scully's petition to the Town for $2,000, one years' interest on the money she claims her father advanced for building the Millbrook railway and from which the town is reaping the benefit was referred to the Finance Committee.

Council then adjourned.

LABOUR DEMONSTRATION WAS A BIG SUCCESS

The Different Unions of the Town Turn Out in Splendid Style

A SPLENDID PROGRAMME FOR THE DAY

The Parade One of the Best Ever Seen in Peterborough—The Iron Moulders Take the Prize

The big labor demonstration on Monday was carried out fully and was a huge success throughout. The Committee of Management deserves the greatest praise for the masterly way they performed their duties. The procession was just we expected —a splendid one, showing as it did the "bone and sinew" that is at the back of the labor movement. That the public sympathise and appreciate the efforts of the workingmen to better their condition was evident from the commencement, for funds were liberally subscribed by many of the employers to help to make the demonstration a success.

The procession started from the market square at 10.30, in the following order:

57th Regiment Band.
Lindsay visitors including members of Carpenters, Plumers and Tailors' Unions.
Metal Polishers Union No. 208.
Carpenters' Union No. 72.
Moulders' Union No. 191.
Masons' Union. —
45th Regimental Band, Lindsay.
Tailors' Union No.—
Peterborough Federation of Labour No. 9240.
Representatives of Fire Brigade.
Canadian General Electric Co., Porcelain Works.
Inside Workers' No. 194.
Pattern Makers' Union.
Typographical Union, No. 248.

The moulders were awarded the prize, being neatly attired in black shorts, white ties, and carried a "rammer." The printers came in a close second, being attired in white coats, and Khaki caps, and carried Japanese parasols. The masons in their white ducks presented a good appearance, and were out in large numbers. All the men wore the badges of their respective unions, which were displayed in a striking manner.

Messrs. T. F. Matthews, Robert Fair, and J. H. McClelland acted as judges. They sent in the following letter to the Secretary of the Committee:

Chas. Mitchell, Esq., Town:

Dear Sir,—After viewing the procession as it passed up water street and again on Charlotte street, we have decided that the Iron Moulders' Union No. 191 is entitled to the prize, owing to their splendid uniformity of dress, badge of profession and general neatness.

We wish to add that Typographical Union, No. 248, the Bricklayers' and Stonemasons' and Porcelain Workers deserve special mention.

We were very pleased to see the fine turn-out of the Lindsay Unions, which added materially to the success of the parade.

Considering the procession as a whole it was a decided credit to Union Labor.

J. HARRIS McCLELLAND.
T. F. MATTHEWS,
ROBERT FAIR.

THE CONCERT AT NIGHT.

But the crowning success of the day's pleasure was the concert in the Opera House at night. There was a very large attendance and every number was a gem. The 57th Band never played so well, and was loudly applauded. Mr. Owen A. Smiley also contributed immensely to the evening's enjoyment as also did the others who took part.

The drawing for the dinner set presented through Mr. W. J. Morrow, the locall manager for Messrs. Stroud Bros., was conducted by Mr. J. M. McClelland, who delivered a short address appropriately worded. The dinner set was won by Mr. R. S. Merrel, an employee of the Dickson Co.

"God Save the King" by the band brought the delightful evening to a close.

NOTES.

250 union men with brass band came down from Lindsay.

The Times is requested to return the hearty thanks of the Committee of management to the public for the liberal patronage and assistance accorded them by the citizens.

The printers looked nobby in their neat dress and parasols. They did the correct thing in advising the people to patronize the local establishments.

Quebec Man Wants Damages Because He Is Injured in Parochial Visits

Montreal, Aug. 31—A peculiar action has just been entered in the courts here. Colbert Lefebvre, late of the parish of St. Phillippe, county of La Prairie, has entered an action for $400 damages against his pastor, the Rev. T. Corbeil.

The plaintiff bases his action on the alleged ground that although he is a parishoner of good behavior, his pastor, when visiting the parish in January last, in company with one of the churchwardens, omitted to call at his house.

The declaration states that the pastor's visit had been announced from the pulpit, the announcement being also made that the priest would call at the residence of all Roman Catholic freeholders, as had been the custom in the parishes of this province from time immemorial, but that the defendant, without any reason and with a view to humiliate plaintiff, declared several times that he would not call at plaintiff's house, and in fact did not call.

Lefebvre further complains that this act of his pastor became the general topic of conversation, and whenever he met any of his co-parishoners they asked him whether he was still a Roman Catholic and what he could have done to the cure to be thus refused a visit.

PREMIER TARTE

It is said that the Hon. Mr. Tarte will, in all probability, succeed Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the chief of the administration. The Minister of Public Works, has latterly been greatly in evidence. He has been making speeches all over the country. He has taken the patriotic stand. He has addressed himself to the entire country, forgetting his provincialism, which is sometimes painfully in evidence. There may be nothing in this beyond the desire of an energetic minister to impress his department and his services upon the country. And Sir Wilfrid is, apparently, in good health. He has never troubled himself about the actualities of administration. He has been a graceful figurehead. He has said pleasant things; he has risen to a noble eloquence when the occasion was urgent; he has always been respectable and dignified. From the ornamental point of view his loss would be immense. But should he retire, there is nothing inherently improbable in the elevation of Mr. Tarte. He has courage, he has unquestioned ability. He has had a stormy past, but doubtless he has repented—indeed, he has told us so—and we do not cast up the past to a man who is sorry for it. Therefore, let no one be surprised if Mr. Tarte should be the leading personage in the Dominion. In a very real, if not titular sense, is he not indeed supreme in our affairs to-day? Certainly, there is no man in the cabinet who has exerted the same power, who has taken such large initiative, who has so emphatically impressed himself upon the country.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Dying on a Pittsburg railway station platform, Steel Magnate Henry offered $100,000 for life. Penniless and about to be homeless, Max Cohen, of New York, refuses a $5,000 museum offer for his deformed child. What trash these dollars are—sometimes.

The Toronto Mail is sarcastic. Our contemporary says: "According to Liberal critics the British Government with a majority of a hundred and upwards, is tottering to its grave, whereas the Ontario Government, with a majority of one in the Legislature, and a minority of seven thousand out of it, is a rock of strength.

If United States "news" manufacturers insist upon continuing to find boundary monuments indicating Russian possessions in Southern Alaska, in country which either Russia, Great Britain nor the United States ever imagined had belonged to Russia, it is in order for the Czar to ask for a recount in the matter of that sale to the American republic, since Russia only dealt with territory, of which she presumed herself to be possessed. Again, if the United States' contentions are irrefutable, as is pretended, why will it not submit the case to friendly arbitration?

At the State fair in Concord, N.H., a representative of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, the prophetess of that town, gave a pair of shoes to each poor child. Doubtless this was a piece of praiseworthy benevolence, but a woman of the gifts of Mother Eddy might do a much greater and farther reaching act of charity. Why should people have the bother and expense of buying shoes? Were it not for sin, erroneous notions, want of faith and a foolish yielding to matter, the barefoot might esteem themselves shod and so have shoes at command. Shoes are only a detail, but they are a mighty important one in the accounts of households full of children and feet. Christain Science would make a noble beginning of the conversion of the world and place itself upon a solid footing, if Mrs. Eddy would teach the art of shoeing children by means of faith.

A Hard Epigram on Women.

Oh, the gladness of their gladness when they're glad,
And the sadness of their sadness when they're sad;
But the gladness of their gladness and the sadness of their sadness
Are as nothing to their badness when they're bad.

—"Notes and Queries."

"My dear," said the careful mother to her sixteen-year-old daughter, "that is a book which I must absolutely forbid you to read." "That's all very well, mamma," replied the Twentieth-Century Girl, "but how am I to know what books to forbid my children to read unless I read them myself while I have the chance?" And she bore off the book in triumph to study it in the solitude of her own boudoir.

Has Been.

An Englishman went into a restaurant in a New England town, and was served for the first course with a delicacy unknown to him. So he asked the waiter what it was, and the waiter replied: "It's bean soup, sir," whereupon the Englishman, in high indignation, responded: "I don't care what it's been; I want to know what it is."—Philadelphia "Times."

SEASON FOR TYPHOID

Several Cases in Town and the Number Increasing

This is the season of the year when the typhoid germ does business, and the physicians have their hands full. Up to the end of July the town had been practically free of typhoid for the whole season—freer, we believe, than the records show for any past year. Now the germ seems to be making up for lost time and one doctor yesterday reported two cases. So far the record has not been more than ordinary for this season of the year. The Medical Health Officers admits that it is possible than many cases of typhoid are not reported at the health office, though the statute requires that they should be.

One reason why the doctors do not report typhoid as promptly as they do contagious diseases such as diphtheria etc., is because of the difficulty in correctly diagnosing the fever in its early stages. It is said to be so similar to quick consumption in its evidences that there are cases where the difference cannot be accurately told up to within a few days of the death of the patient. For this reason the doctors are slow in making up their minds as to what disease they are fighting.

Another way in which the typhoid germ can be got, if anyone wants it badly, is in milk, when the milk comes from the right place. For this reason when there is a case of typhoid reported at the health office there should be no time lost in finding out where that families milk came from, and the milk shop whether it be in the city or the country, is carefully inspected.

Some medical men have been saying all season that this would probably be a bad year for typhoid, and every means should be taken to locate the cause.

Mainly About People.

The elder Sothern was extremely sensitive to interruption of any sort. Seeing a man in the act of leaving his box during the delivery of one of the actor's best speeches, he shouted out: "Hi, you sir, do you know there is another act?" The offender was equal to the occasion, however. He turned to the actor and answered, cheerfully: "Oh, yes—that's why I am going!"

In response to a missionary's appeals for various articles for us on an African farm, a milking stool was sent to him from England. He gave it to the negro whose duty it was to milk the cows, with injunctions to use it. On the first day the negro returned home from the cow-sheds, bruised and battered, but with an empty pail. When the missionary asked for an explanation, the negro replied: "Milk stool very nice, massa, but she won't sit on it!"

A Columbus, Ohio, pastor called on one of his parishioners, whose six-year-old boy is a bright youngster. Freddie had previously heard his mother say that the pastor was very successful in saving souls. During a pause in the conversation, Freddie, who was sitting on the pastor's knee, asked: "Do you save souls?" "Yes, Freddie," replied the man of the cloth. "Will you tell me," went on Freddie, seriously, "how many souls you got saved up?"

Mr. C. F. Stanbury relates in "The Barrister" many stories of Tom Nolan, the counselor who for years kept the New York bar laughing at his conscious and unconscious drolleries. One of the best is the following: Once Nolan was arguing a case in behalf of clients who were sailors, and while in the midst of an exhaustive display of lore on nautical matters, he was interrupted by the court. "How comes it, counselor, that you possess such a vast knowledge of the sea?" "Does your honor think," responded Nolan, "that I came over in a hack?"

In a series of sketches, entitled "Lights and Shadows in a Hospital," Mrs. Terton tells of a melancholy man, depressed with rheumatism, in her cottage hospital, whom she wanted to cheer by reading. Ordinary hospital literature was no good. At last, said the nurse: "I shall read him 'Three Men in a Boat,' and if that doesn't amuse him, I shall give him up as hopeless." So she read, till finally "a reluctant smile came over his face, and he said, with slow satisfaction: 'I do think they be three rum 'uns.'" That was the turning point in his illness. He recovered completely, and left the hospital a bright and cheerful man.

At the time, now some years ago when subscriptions were being solicited for the erection of a statue in New York city to George Washington, a gentleman called on Russell Sage to secure a contribution. On learning the object of the visit the rich man exclaimed: "Washington! Washington! Why, Washington does not need a statue. I keep him enshrined in my heart." In vain were the caller's solicitations, and he was naturally indignant at the parsimony of the multi-millionaire. "Well, Mr. Sage" he remarked, quietly, as he rose to leave, "all I can say is, that if the Father of his Country is in the position in which you describe him, he is in a tight place."

Quizzing a boy is not always so easy as it seems. The Cincinnati "Enquirer" gives an instance in which a business man of that city came out second best in a passage at repartee with a boy named Claude who looks after the hat-rack in a well-known restaurant.

Mr. Smith started out of the restaurant after enjoying his meal, and was seized, as Claude handed him his hat, with the impulse to quiz the lad.

"Is this my hat?" he asked.

"I don't know, sir," was the answer.

"Well, then, why do you hand it to me if you don't know whether it is my hat or not?" asked Mr. Smith, sharply.

"Because, it's the one you handed to me when you came in," answered Claude.

At the watch night of the Authors' Club on the occasion of the outgoing of the old and the incoming of the new year last winter, the subject discussed was "Fame and Its Blunders." Each member received the privilege of explaining why he was not so famous as he should be, or why some other member was more famous than he. According to the "Bookman," the late Frank Stockton, when his turn came, said that he was quite satisfied. Referring to his long drudgery upon magazines and newspapers, and his final breaking loose into literature, he illustrated his point by reciting the following lines:

There was an old monk of Siberia,
Whose life it grew drearier and drearier,
Till he broke from his cell
With a hell of a yell,
And eloped with the Mother Superior, which lines are supposed to symbolize Mr. Stockton's breaking away from editorial toil.

Senator William P. Frye was once talking to the celebrated naturalist, Agassiz, of his fishing experiences. "Among my triumphs," said he, "was the capture of a speckled trout that weighed fully eight pounds." Dr. Agassiz smiled, and said: "Reserve that for the credulous and convivial circles of rod and reel celebrants, but spare the feelings of a sober scientist." Frye insisted that he was not exaggerating, but Agassiz refused to be gulled. "My dear Mr. Frye," he said, "permit me to inform you that Salvelinus fontinalis never attains that extraordinary weight. The creature you caught could not have been a speckled trout. All the authorities on ichthyology would disprove your claim." "All I can say to that," replied Senator Frye, "is that there are, then, bigger fish in Maine than are dreamed of in your noble science." The next season, while fishing in the Maine woods, Frye caught a handsome speckled trout that weighed nine pounds, and sent it to Dr. Agassiz. A few days later he tramped to the station, where he found an epigrammatic message awaiting him from the great scientist, which read: "The science of a lifetime kicked to death by a fact. Agassiz."

STOCK MARKETS

The Outlook for the New Week.

New York, Sept. 2

Everything keeps propitious for the bulls on the stock market. The falling off in volume of dealings the latter part of last week was most natural, owing to the approach of the triple holiday. It naturally occasioned more or less realizing by the class of speculators, who always close out their speculative commitments prior to holiday, preferring to take on stocks after they have passed even a little higher than to carry them over a period when the doors of the stock exchange are closed. A most significant sign of the strength of the general market is the manner in which Southern Pacific has taken the realizing in its shares, after a rapid rise of ten points. A stock that moves upon such an enormous volume of dealings as does Southern Pacific to every eighth, naturally has at all times an immense speculative interest in its shares.

We believe that stocks can be purchased at present with unusual safety, and take the chances for profit in so doing to be most excellent. Buy the coalers, now that the dividend question has been settled. It will be extremely advantageous to all parties concerned to have Readings and O & W stay in the voting trust. Should it become necessary, this week will see additional deposits made by the government in the banks. The corn crop is right upon the verge of maturing; this week will see most of it absolutely out of any danger from frost. It is the largest we have had, and will be a great stimulator to prices and the wealth and prosperity of the entire nation.

HAIGHT & FREESE CO.

WHAT WILL COAL COST THIS YEAR?

DEALERS ARE AS YET UNABLE TO ANSWER THIS QUESTION

It All Depends on the Strike, which is still Forcibly in Evidence—Wood is Scarce

"What will the price of fuel be this winter?" is the question that is asked by many. Not even the coal and wood dealers can answer it, although they are as greatly interested in the question as is the consumer. This state of uncertainty is caused by the anthracite coal strike which is still pending a settlement and which has for some time tied up the coal output of Pennsylvania, Wyoming and Virginia.

A prominent dealer was seen by a reporter for The Times. He could say nothing about what the price of coal would be during the coming winter. "It all depends on the strike," he said. He could not say what the difference in the rate would be as none has as yet been struck by the railroads. A rate will be struck by the roads interested if one is found necessary.

WOOD IS SCARCE.

With regard to the price of wood the dealer said: "Wood is scarce. The light snowfall last winter prevented a large quantity being taken out of the bush. If coal goes up in the winter there will be an increased demand for wood, the increase in the price of coal will likely react on the wood price, putting it up."

Another dealer held the same view of the situation with regard to wood, and expected that all fuel would advance in sympathy with hard coal.

That the coal question is an interesting one and one that is viewed by the citizens with anxiety is evidenced by the large number of inquiries made at the coal dealers' offices regarding the situation. The dealers can not say anything regarding the price and the explanation given the reporter is exactly what is given all enquirers seeking information along these lines.

A Close Call

While playing on the bank of the raceway below McAllister's mill in Ashburnham, little six-year-old Harold Quinn, son of Mr. Wm. Quinn, fell into the stream and would probably have been drowned but for the heroic rescue made by Miss Clara Adams, a young daughter of Mr. Frank Adams, of Ashburnham. Although not deep, the current at this point is swift, and carried the little fellow some distance before he was rescued.

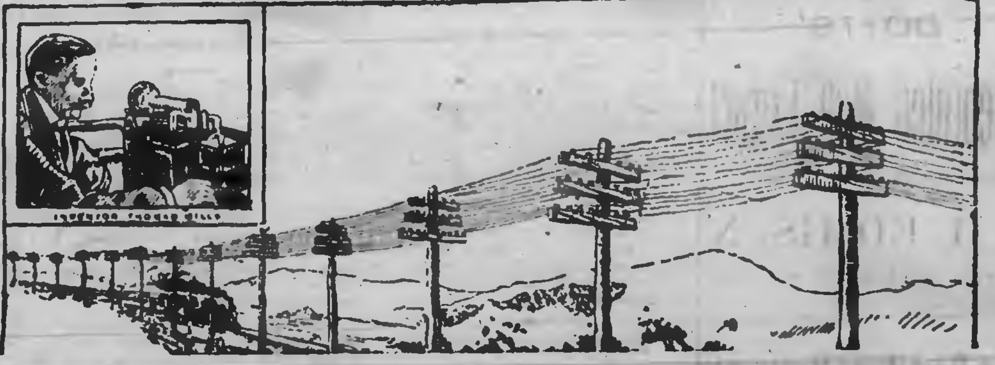
To Investors! A Chance of a Lifetime.



The Electrograph is a simple, practical machine for sending pictures, newspaper illustrations, maps, etc., by telegraph over the wires of any telegraph or telephone company.

THE ELECTROGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

Controls all patents for Canada and the United States covering the Electrograph.

Capital $1,000,000, $10 Shares, Fully Paid Up and Non-Assessable.

No Bonded Debts. Now $7.50 per Share.

The machine is simple and inexpensive to manufacture. The company is not selling, but leasing them at $600 per year rental. Orders are coming in faster than they can be filled.

Those who invested in the Linotype have realized a gold mine. It is used in almost every newspaper and printing office. So will be the Electrograph in a few years. Besides, it will be used by the Secret Service, Police and Detective Departments of every city, and by banks for identification, by the War Department, and in other ways yet unthought of.

The telegraph and telephone are now indispensable. At the outset they were looked upon as little better than petty toys. People did not realise the possibilities; there was then no practical demand.

The Electrograph does not have to create a demand. The demand exists, newspapers have been for years waiting and watching for just such a machine.

The Scientific American, June 15, 1901, describes the Electrograph fully with cuts. It says "over a wire 770 miles from St. Louis to Cleveland, via Chicago, it worked faultlessly." The chief operator, Associated Press, Washington, D.C., says:—"I think in the Electrograph you have at last successfully solved the problem of transmitting pictures by wire by producing a machine of practical value and of extreme simplicity of operation."

The superintendent of wire service, Associated Press, New York City, says:—"A test on a wire running from this office to Philadelphia and back was satisfactory in every respect. Both the transmitter and receiver being placed in this office, I had every opportunity to see the working of both, and I can say that no test could have been more perfect or satisfactory." The company has dozens of other equally strong testimonials from leaders in all departments of Newspaper, Printing, Engraving, and Telegraph work. Mr. F. B. Squire, president of the company, spent six months investigating every phase of the practical working and possibilities of the Electrograph before investing in it. Mr. Squire is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was its original secretary, and has stayed with it ever since. In an interview published in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, July 9, 1902, Mr. Squire says that it is the expectation to install at least 100 machines in one year; 200 machines will be soon in use, and fully 1,000 in a reasonable time, earning net $500,000 on $1,000,000 capitalization.

Every newspaper of consequence must instal an Electrograph or fall behind its rivals. Business will not depend on crops or railway earnings, rains or frosts. Newspapers, banks, detective service, etc., go on forever. When many lines of investment are at high-water mark, it may not be amiss to put some profits into a new and promising business. All the big dividend-paying companies at the start sold stock to the public, the Standard Oil Co., the great Canadian Banks, etc. To buy and sell is human, otherwise the world would stagnate. You can make no mistake buying this stock. Carnegie got his start when a telegraph operator by buying $500 of telegraph stock. Those who saw the possibilities of the Telegraph, the Telephone, the Linotype, the Typewriter and other great inventions, won fortunes. So will those who invest in the Electrograph.

Attempted Burglary

Early on Tuesday morning a bold attempt was made to burglarize the store of Messrs. Barrie & Co., furriers. It appears that Mr. Hart, an employee came down from Toronto on the midnight express, which was late, and on his way from the station had to pass the store. He entered in order to leave a parcel, and at once noticed a pain of glass broken in the Simcoe street window. He called P.C. Stewart, who was standing on the corner. As he did so, however, a man darted out at lightning speed, and started up Simcoe street. P.C. Stewart gave chase but he was outrun in the race and the burglar escaped. An examination of Mr. Barries' premises disclosed the fact that a bold attempt was being made to carry off about $1200 worth of choice furs. These had been taken from the show-room up stairs and the thief was evidently in the act of bundling them up when disturbed by Mr. Hart. In his flight the stranger left his soft hat which may yet assist in his identification.

A CATHEDRAL WEDDING

Miss Josephine Welsh and Mr. Edward Hiland United in Marriage

On Tuesday morning St. Peter's Cathedral was the scene of a very pretty weding, when Miss Josephine Welsh, daughter of Mr. Edward Welsh No. 33 Elm street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Edward Hiland, foreman of Messrs Barrie & Co's. cutting establishment. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. O'Brien, in the presence of a large number of friends.

The bride looked charming in a rich gown of white silk organdie over taffeta silk. She was assisted by her sister Miss Deborah Welsh, who was similiarly attired. The groom was assisted by Mr. T. J. Millady, Toronto.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the weding party proceeded to the residence of the bride's father, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiland went east on the noon train and will return next week to take up residence on the corner of Hunter and Reid streets.

The large number of elegant and costly presents testify to the popularity of the young couple who began their wedded life with the good wishes of hosts of friends.

WYLIE GETS TWO YEARS

The Rascal will now Give no Trouble for a Few Months

A despatch from North Bay says: "The man, Charles Wylie, alias Sills, who appeared before Squire McDonald here on the charge of stealing a horse and rig from Joseph Mullin, livery keeper, was sentenced by Judge Valin to two years in the Central Prison. Wylie has a record. In the early summer he suddenly appeared at the farm house of Mr Wilkinson, about four miles from the town of Peterborough, and representing that he had just undergone an operation for appendicitis, asked for quiet lodging. The farmer was "taken in' by the prayerful habits of his self-imposed guest, and week after week passed until the man had spent a full month at the farm house. A circus performed at Peterborough on July 8th, and on that morning the 'patient' felt so far recovered as to express a desire to see the show. Suddenly he turned to his benefactor and requested him to allow his 14-year-old daughter to accompany him. The request was granted on condition that they would return in time for milking in the evening. This, of course, was readily assented to, but on the arrival of the couple at Peterborough they boarded the train for Orillia, and were married at the latter town. On Sunday last Farmer Wilkinson came to town and took his 'child' home, while the pious 'husband' goes to the penitentiary for two years."

DEAD FROGS

Were killed by Committee

15—1000thth of a single grai of caffeine from coffee, will kill a frog of moderate size. The frogs die of general paralysis following violent tetanic convulsions.

Falck, Stuhlmann, Brill, Johansen, Leven and other famous scientists, and investigators" have repeatedly proven it.

The same alkaloid caffeine, a powerful cerebro-spinal stimulant and diuretic irritant, was originally discovered in 1820. Eight years later theine was discovered in tea and the two drugs were afterwards proven to be identical. Caffeine in coffee causes al epleasmos increased frequency of the pulse, tremulousness of heart, and frequent urination noticed after drinking strong coffee. This explains the cause of the nervous diseases that frequently come to regular coffee and tea drinkers. The drug slowly and surely poisons the system and finally brings on some form of fixed disease like valvular heart disease, dyspepsia, kidney complaint or some other, unless the person is strong enough to stand up against the drug.

Practically every steady coffee or tea drinker shows some form of incipient disease. Ask anyone you know and you will seldom find one entirely well.

Where's the use in slugging and drugging the poor old body until it totters and trembles with diseased nerves?

Can't quit?

It is one of the easiest things you ever tried to do if you will have Postum Food Coffee made right and served hot with cream and sugar. There is the deep seal brown of rich coffee that turns to golden brown when cream is added. Then the flavor is unique, all its own. Try it ten days or two weeks and your dyspepsia will either leave or show good signs of leaving, and your heart and pulse be stronger than for a long time back. It is one of the most delicious sensations known, to feel returning health and vigor.

Health makes Heaven here on earth, and people can have it if they will but live as nature intended.

Quit Coffee and use the food beverage, Postum Coffee.
